PM to Sign Science Pact With Soviets

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to sign an agreement with the Soviet Union for exchange of technological and scientific information, when he visits Moscow next month.

The agreement is in the final stages of diplomatic negotiation between the two countries and is a significant experiment in expanding national relations.

For Canada, it means an opportunity to sell advanced industrial equipment and to benefit from the Soviet technology of Arctic development.

For the Soviet Union, the agreement will give access to North American industrial advances and represents another step in opening its Communist economic system to Western ideas and influence.

A key figure in the negotiations is Dzerman M. Gvishiani, deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. state committee for science and technology and son-in-law of Premier Kosygin.

He was in Canada earlier this year, establishing useful working contacts with Polymer Corporation, the Crown-owned producer of synthetic rubber and plastics, and discussing with Trudeau over a long lunch the agreement to exchange information.

Gvishiani is one of the younger, progressive Soviet leaders who fears that Communist industry is lagging behind the West in technological development — partly because an undue proportion of the Soviet research effort goes into defence and exploration of space. He wants to import Western experience in applying science and technology to industry.

Italian Fiat auto company is already building a huge auto plant in the Soviet Union. France and Britain have agreements with Moscow to exchange information which gives them preferential places in the Soviet market.

Opens Door To Co-operation

West Germany's new accord with the Sovjet Union is opening the door to economic co-operation.

Canada has been trying for years to expand trade in industrial goods with the Soviet Union, without much success.

Businessmen have found it frustrating to deal with state trading corporations which cut them off from direct contacts with their potential customers, the industrial planners and managers who have to make the choice about what equipment to buy, and then operate it.

Although the Soviet Union and Canada share many similar industrial problems—cold weather construction in the north, for example, and technological development in forest and mining industries—Moscow seems to have been slow to recognize Canada as an advanced country.

A Soviet delegation which visited the vast Churchill Falls power project in remote Labrador this year was astonished by winter construction techniques.

One of the delegation who inquired about the limit of the communication system on the site was hugely impressed to find himself, in a few minutes, connected through the regular system to his wife in Moscow.

The exchange agreement to be signed by Trudeau will establish a Canada-U.S.S.R. commission to encourage the exchange of industrial experts.

Study Teams To Be Exchanged

Teams of Canadian businessmen will go to the Soviet Union to examine industrial techniques and to look for opportunities ot buy and sell.

Teams of Soviet industrialists will come to Canada to study our industrial science and technology.

The joint commission should also help Canadian exporters to take their products directly to Soviet customers, and there are strong hopes of developing markets for pulp and paper machinery, tracked vehicles for use in the north, mining equipment and other products.

If trade develops as hoped, and confidence between the two countries grows, Canada may propose to broaden the agreement to permit joint research projects in the Arctic.

Moscow has been wary about opening its northern frontiers to foreigners, and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien cancelled plans to visit Siberia this summer when he found he would not be shown much more than the conventional tourist sites.

Trudeau will have to convince the Soviet government, during the Moscow talks, that Canada is not merely an agent of the United States in claiming Arctic sovereignty and in development of the northern areas shared with the Soviets.

Trudeau may also press in Moscow for faster progress toward a cultural exchange agreement, assisting Canadian artists to perform in the Soviet Union and Canadian students to study at Soviet universities.

Rebels Ignore Ultimatum

Guerrillas Reject Jordan Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Confusion surrounded the Middle East crisis today as Palestinian guerrillas battling Jordanian government forces ignored an ultimatum to surrender or face firing squads and the United States continued to move troops, ships and aircraft into the eastern Mediterranean.

Field Marshal Habis Majali, Jordan's military governor, ordered royal army troops to cease fire in their war against Palestinian Arab guerrillas today.

But a guerrilla statement broadcast from Baghdad, Iraq, said the Palestinian forces would not join in the shooting halt.

"The imperialist agent Habis Majali . . . wants to catch his breath. We are aware of these tricks and Majali will not be able to lead us into any ambush.

"Fire will not cease until the regime of the imperialist agents is completely crushed. The revolution marches on its path until victory."

Majali ordered his forces to stop shooting at 6 p.m. local time.

PROPOSED BY EGYPT

Earlier in the day, Egypt's Middle East news agency reported that King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian proposal for a 24-hour ceasefire.

But this was thrown into confusion by an ultimatum by Majali to the guerrillas to surrender in three hours or face death by firing squads.

The ultimatum expired at 4 p.m. local time (7 a.m. PDT) without any reaction by the guerrillas.

Majali's ceasefire order broadcast by Radio Amman, was addressed to all army, police and security units of the royal forces.

EXCEPTION

More than two hours after the deadline for Majali's ultimatum the field marshal abruptly ordered his men to stop firing except "where fire is directed against you and preventing you from carrying out your humane mission."

The ultimatum was issued by Majali shortly after the Middle East news agency said Jordanian King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian ceasefire proposal.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY OF PHILIP BLAIBERG

Before he died Phillip Blaiberg, the longest-lived heart transplant recipient, said "a heart transplant is worthwhile even for only 3 seconds of life."

His daughter says he lived a life of hell. His wife says the 19 months he lived with another man's heart were the happiest of their lives.

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the man responsible for the operation, sets the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically, in a special article coming Monday in the Times.

IWA Rivals Fight For Leadership

MacKenzie spoke first to the 185 delegates, charging that Moore shirked his duty to be bound by the will of the majority in union decisions.

On Aug. 20, the IWA coastal negotiating committee voted 7 to 3 against recommending acceptance by members of a provincial mediation report.

Moore resigned as chairman of the committee after that vote.

"We tried to get him back on the committee," said MacKenzie. "We sent two members out to try and get him back."

Instead, he said, Moore phoned B.C. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and talked to company representatives.

"This is like a general discussing his strategy with the enemy and expecting to win," MacKenzie said.

Moore, chairman of the convention, nicknamed Friday: "Get Jack Moore Day."

He suspended debating rules and told delegates the discussion was open for anyone who had anything "to get off your chest."

"I'm not ashamed of anything I've ever done for the working people," he said.

Moore said Judge Nathan Nemetz, who made the mediation proposals, was forced to report in a hurry and later agreed he did not have time to understand some of the side issues in the coast forest dispute.

"If we wanted to straighten out the Nemetz report, I know of one way it couldn't have been done," Moore said, "and that's by rejecting it."

On the question of majority rule, he said: "I believe in it. But I believe in the majority rule of all our members and not necessarily just part of them.

"I am not the president of the coast committee. I'm president of four provinces in this country. And I have responsibility to every one of these 42,000 members, not just the 28,000 coastal members."

MOORE

Mediator To Stay On

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Mediator Clive McKee's term in the southern B.C. interior forest industry dispute was extended Friday for 10 days after negotiators failed to reach a settlement.

The extension came just hours before McKee's first appointment was to run out.

The 5,000 interior members of the International Woodworkers of America would have been in a legal position to go on strike against 39 companies if the term had not been extended.

Big Cambodian Assault Set

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command plans a big assault to smash through a Communist strongpoint that has stalled the government's largest offensive of the war there for nearly a week.

Limited United States air strikes already were being carried out in preliminary attempts to dislodge an estimated 1,000 North Vietnamese troops dug in at the village of Taing Kauk, 47 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Officers at the operation's rear headquarters in Skoun, 45 miles north of Phnom Penh, said today they were not sure when the assault against the North Vietnamese would start, but added they had been told by the high command that the attack would be preceded by huge U.S. air strikes against the village.

The operation, stalled in front of Taing Kauk since Monday, is aimed at reopening Route 6, to Kompong Thom, a provincial capital and reclaiming an important segment of Cambodia's heartland from Communist control.

Communist troops attacked the government task force south of Taing Kauk during the night, but the command said the assault was only of a harassing nature.

RCMP Arrest 25

BIKE GANGS AT WAR

RICHMOND (CP) — Battling members of two motorcycle gangs fired volleys of shots and hurled Molotov cocktails today in a 90-minute war that ended with a house destroyed by fire and 25 arrests.

Police and firemen stood by during the battle in the Vancouver suburb and didn't move in until the house was set alight by a fire bomb tossed from the adjacent house.

One 22-year-old man was shot in the leg and was in satisfactory condition in hospital. Police held their fire and said they had no real trouble arresting 21 men and four women.

Police said the battle apparently started when members of one gang tried to take bikes owned by the other. RCMP said the two gangs had previously been friendly toward each other.

No charges were laid immediately.

FRANCE MAKES STRONG BID

China Entry to UN Urged

NEW YORK (CP) — France made a strong bid Friday to have Communist China brought into the United Nations and into negotiations to end the Indo-China conflict.

In calling for this before the 126-country General Assembly and in a later news conference, Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France indicated that China would welcome an invitation to join the world organization it has scorned for many years.

And he added to speculation here about the possible early and successful conclusion of China-Canada recognition talks by saying it is his understanding that the negotiations in Stockholm are going "rather well and in rather an encouraging way."

He added to Canadian reporters, however, that he did not have definite information that the talks are nearing a successful conclusion. And he said his information did not come from Canadian sources.

On the Middle East, the foreign minister refused to lose heart in the peace talks under Gunnar Jarring, the UN's Middle East negotiator. He said neither the ceasefire in the Middle East nor the talks are "beyond reach."

TEACHERS URGE SCHOOL BOARDS:

'Guarantee Work Conditions'

By BOB MITCHELL

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation wants school boards in the province to guarantee basic learning and working conditions in written contracts, BCTF officials said Friday.

In the Greater Victoria school district teachers will seek a clause in their contract which states that a salary increase will not be offset by a reduction in staff, said Les Isaacson, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

This is the first year the federation has taken a stand on the issue of working and learning conditions, which in the past have not been written down or included in statements of board policy.

PERSONNEL REDUCED?

Isaacson was asked if he thought school boards, working under restricted budgets, might attempt to economize by reducing personnel.

"Provincially yes, in Victoria no," he said.

Burnaby and Vancouver now have contracts which guarantee working and learning conditions. Coquitlam and Richmond are negotiating for similar contracts.

Jim Campbell, president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, says such contracts are illegal and that they mean school boards have delegated some of their powers to teachers.

UBCM WRAPS UP ANNUAL MEET

Policy Statement Backed

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

PENTICTON — A consolidated statement of the policies of the Union of B.C. municipalities was approved Friday on the final day of the annual convention.

The policy statement is a departure for the UBCM and will be changed to accommodate developments as they occur.

The statement is the brainchild of Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, outgoing president.

The initial statement covers only major areas of interest: inter-governmental relations, environmental control, welfare and social services, housing, land use and assessment equalization.

STRONGER VOICE

It is part of an attempt initiated during Curtis's presidency to give the UBCM a stronger and consolidated voice in its requests to higher governments.

Curtis expects within three months to have the UBCM offices moved from New Westminster to Victoria, with enlarged staff, to created a stronger lobby at provincial government offices.

Amendments to the 15-page statement made from the floor were mainly technical in nature, except for one concerning housing.

Part of the policy statement on housing read: "The Union of B.C. Municipalities contends that all Canadians should have the opportunity to obtain clean, warm shelter, as a human right."

TOPICS LEFT OUT

The statement does not include sections to deal with a number of topics because of a study being carried out on finances, the statement's introduction says.

These areas include intergovernmental taxation, capital financing, education, hospital construction and operation, ambulance service, administration of justice, and mobile homes taxation.

(Delegates passed a resolution, however, that requests the provincial government to make mobile homes taxable for real estate purposes).

Topics dealt with in the statement:

INTER-GOVERNMENTAL RELATIONS: The UBCM wants to have full discussions with the provincial cabinet when it presents its annual brief. The UBCM wants immediate joint federal provincial municipal meetings. Such meetings would lead to improved efficiency in municipal government.

ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL: A single provincial agency should be formed to "regulate, plan and control the war on pollution . . ." The UBCM believes that pollution control costs should be borne by those who contribute to pollution, and all governments should share the costs where they apply to the public purse. A provincial department of pollution control is necessary.

WELFARE AND SOCIAL SERVICES: Costs in this field are mainly the responsibilty of the federal and provincial governments. The municipal share should be 10 per cent instead of the 20 per cent now charged.

The main local responsibility should be an "advisory one."

A continuing committee appointed by all three levels should view welfare allowances and recommend changes.

The responsibility for "unemployed employables" should be borne by the federal manpower and unemployment insurance agencies.

HOUSING: All people should have the opportunity to live in clean, warm shelter. Assistance must be given to low-income families. A municipal-federal committee should deal with all forms of housing. Municipal levels should act as planners without financing duties.

LAND USE: The task of supervising the proper use of land should be given to regional governments. Financial assistance for acquisition of land must come from the federal government. Regional governments should have the right to refusce attempts at expropriation by other governments, or government agencies. Disputes should be handled by the courts rather than by mediation commissions.

ASSESSMENT EQUALIZATION: Assessments should be equalized through all urban and rural areas of the province.

Study to Use Ottawa Funds

Times Staff

PENTICTON — A federal grant will be used by the Union of B.C. Municipalities to study the effect of land speculation in B.C., it was announced here Friday.

West Vancouver Mayor Alex Forst told the UBCM convention at its closing session a $4,550 grant from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be used to analyse "a large number of land transactions in the Greater Vancouver, Greater Victoria and Prince George regions."

Forst said the study will be conducted by members of the University of British Columbia's faculty of commerce and department of urban land economics under the direction of Dr. R. Radcliffe and Professor S. W. Hamilton.

Forst, who is chairman of the UBCM land speculation committee, said he was informed by CMHC that such an investigation has never before been conducted in Canada to the extent intended in the UBCM study.

It is hoped the study will provide answers "to many as yet undefined suppositions concerning the effects of speculation on the price of land."

The study will examine land speculation since 1949.

The study will be completed midway through 1971 and the results made available for wide distribution, Forst said.

GALLUP POLL REVEALS:

Opinions Divided On Fines for Drugs

In the controversy over whether or not fines should be meted out by our Courts for possession of marijuana, instead of jail sentences, the Canadian public is pretty well divided. Forty-one per cent of adults approve such a change in the laws, with 45% expressing disapproval and 14% undecided.

Young adults in their twenties are more likely than older citizens, to favor fines instead of jail, for marijuana users, with 51% of the young approving, compared to 40% of those over fifty, who agree.

More French speaking Canadians (50%) than English speaking (38%) favor fines over jail sentences for the "soft" drug users.

The question:

"It has been suggested that jail sentences for the possession of marijuana should be eliminated in favor of fines. Would you approve of this or not?"

| | Approve | Disapprove | Undecided |
|---|---|---|---|
| National | 41% | 45% | 14% |
| Age Groups | | | |
| 21 - 29 years | 51 | 40 | 9 |
| 30 - 39 years | 39 | 50 | 11 |
| 40 - 49 years | 35 | 47 | 18 |
| Over 50 | 40 | 45 | 15 |
| Mother Tongue | | | |
| English | 38 | 48 | 14 |
| French | 50 | 38 | 12 |
| Other | 35 | 52 | 13 |

This is not to say the Canadian public approves the use of Marijuana. In a Gallup Poll earlier this year a large majority — 77 adults in every 100 — opposed legalizing use of the drug and only 14% felt marijuana should be legalized.

Strike Favored

EDMONTON (CP) — About 300 public school maintenance workers have voted in favor of strike action, it was announced Friday. Meanwhile, 815 public school caretakers have rejected a conciliation recommendation which would have given them a seven-per-cent increase over one year, on average yearly pay of $5,432. Both groups are members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Here are a couple of percentage figures on heat and ice that will give you the shivers:

If the temperature of the sun were to increase by 30 per cent, there wouldn't be a living thing left on the face of the earth. Everything would fry, even though the terrific heat had melted all of the ice at the poles and, in the process, flooded every big city at sea level and drowned the inhabitants.

A cold spell would create the opposite effect, of course, but nobody could live with it. If the heat of the sun dropped only 13 per cent, the earth would start to freeze and it wouldn't be very long—maybe a few years—before the sheath of ice that encased the oceans and the continents would be as much as a mile thick.

. . . JORDAN CRISIS

In the face of reports that the United States is moving troops, ships and aircraft into the eastern Mediterranean, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine threatened to attack American lives and property if Washington takes military action in this area.

"Anyone having American nationality will not be safe after the American military landing," said a press statement issued by the Front, which still is holding 54 passengers and crew from three hijacked Western airliners.

In Moscow, a spokesman for the official Soviet news agency Tass, commenting on the Jordan situation, said outside intervention would entail "a new worsening of the conflict which may then overstep the borders of that country."

He described the concentration of American ships in the area, and stepped-up British military activity in Cyprus, as alarming.

Although the American government denied it has any plans for intervention, some observers in Washington said deployment of marines and naval units of the 6th Fleet suggested they might be involved in something bigger than just the evacuation of American citizens caught in the Jordan fighting.

The Miami Herald says President Nixon told a group of Chicago newspaper editors the United States might intervene military in Jordan to aid King Hussein if Iraq or Syria go to the aid of Palestinian guerrillas fighting Hussein's government.

It was also possible that Israel might go to Jordan's aid, the newspaper says Nixon told the editors.

Nixon said protecting 390 American citizens in Jordan would provide an "excuse" for U.S. intervention, but the true purpose would be to preserve Hussein's moderate Arab regime, The Herald reports in a story by James McCartney of the Knight Newspapers Washington Bureau.

In Cairo today the Egyptian government warned of "grave consequences" in the event of any United States military intervention in Jordan.

Citing U.S. 6th Fleet manoeuvres in the eastern Mediterranean and Washington declarations that intervention "could not be ruled out," a spokesman said:

"The United States would be fully responsible for the serious results which might stem from these actions.

"These manoeuvres are regarded as an attempt to exploit internal differences in Jordan, to create a chance for foreign intervention there and would be construed by Arabs as an extension of Israeli aggression. This would be considered as a hostile act against the whole Arab nation.

"Any American pressure, overt or implied, would menace peace and security and add a new grave dimension that threatens to escalate the crisis to proportions engulfing the whole area."

Meanwhile in the United Kingdom Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan criticized the United States for being "ready only to talk, while the Soviet Union is ready to shoot as well as talk" in the Middle East.

Dayan's comments were in a copyrighted article published in today's Times of London. He said the activity of Palestinian guerrilla groups had changed the nature of the conflict between Israel and the Arab nations.

Dayan said there was a difference between the types of initiatives and commitments the United States and Russia were willing to undertake concerning the Middle East.

"There is no doubt that the phrase 'Stop shooting—start talking' sounds nice," he said referring to the 90-day Suez Canal ceasefire begun Aug. 7.

"But when the United States appeals to Israel it must be remembered that the conflict began because America was not ready to 'stop talking and shart shooting' even though it saw Arab armies, aided by the Russians, move towards a military attack with the intention of conquering and destroying Israel.

"The question is not the talk or shoot, not even when to talk or shoot. The reality of the Middle East today is that the United States is ready only to talk while the Soviet Union is ready to shoot as well as talk," Dayan said.

Earlier from Amman in a pooled dispatch correspondents said the fierce battle for the capital—now in its third day—still raged between the Jordanian army and the Palestinian Arab guerrillas.

The army dominates the streets of Amman with its armor, but even with massive firepower it remains a slow job to dislodge the snipers, who have been able to reinfiltrate at night.

Heavy machine-guns, armored cars, mortars and a 106-millimetre recoilless rifle were brought up in turn to deal with sniper fire from a building facing the Intercontinental Hotel.

The battle for just one house lasted two hours.

HOSTAGES STAY HIDDEN

Caught up in the fighting are the 54 American, British, West German, Israeli and Swiss hostages from last week's hijacked Western airliners. They are believed to be hidden in private houses.

Also caught up in the hostilities are several hundred foreigners—including more than 100 reporters at the Intercontinental Hotel, scene of some of the worst fighting.

Telephones and water have been cut and food is running short. Casualty figures are uncertain.

Both sides have appealed to the International Red Cross for assistance.

. . . TEACHER DEMANDS

Isaachson said in the long run teachers would like to be consulted by their school boards on policy and priority changes.

He said consultation now takes place between the board and the teachers' association in Greater Victoria on policy matters, and cited the districts' Project Learning which was designed to give a cross-section of the community a voice in education innovation.

"Teaching no longer belongs in the classroom, it belongs in the community," Isaachson said.

The federation announced Friday it will ask for salary increases in line with increases won by other employee groups.

A third federation demand is a change in salary schedules to augment earnings of young career teachers, those with three to six years experience. In most districts it takes a teacher 12 to 15 years to reach maximum salary through annual increments.

AWAIT OVERHAUL

Teachers around the province, especially older ones are waiting for government assurances their pension plan will be overhauled at the next legislative session.

John Hardy, the federation's press and information officer, said the BCTF is still gearing for a possible strike referendum later this fall despite a Sept. 1 announcement by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black that civil servant and teacher pension plans will be changed.

A BCTF report on the teacher pension plan has been in Black's hands since September 1969.

The federation decided at its annual convention last spring if it did not get guarantees of increases in pension benefits by Oct. 30, a referendum would be held on whether to take strike action.

Isaachson, who is a member of the BCTF executive, summed up the teachers' position on the pension issue:

"Not for one moment do any of us want to go out on strike, but it's a situation on which we can't afford not be militant."

BCTF president Jim Killeen, who was in Victoria Friday for an informal meeting with newly-appointed deputy minister of education Joe Phillipson, said teachers want to be consulted on pension changes.

"If we received some assurances that some positive steps are to be taken at the next sitting of the legislature, then we would be only too ready not to go through with this referendum," Killeen said.

The federation has already begun to spread the word on pensions to the province's more than 23,000 teachers.

TAPES ON WAY

Tape cassettes with a recorded statement on pensions by Killeen are on their way to 79 school districts, and it is hoped all teachers will be familiar with the pension issue if it becomes necessary to call the referendum.

Isaachson said some teachers are afraid to retire because of the sharp drop in income. He said the average pension for a teacher amounts to less than welfare payments.

The pension fund totals $165 million and is growing by $18 million annually. Only about $6 million is paid out to pensioners.

The present pension structure was fixed in 1961 and the government's contribution to the fund pegged at $281, a figure which hasn't changed since.

The BCTF says B.C. teachers get lower pensions than almost every jurisdiction in teaching or public service in Canada.

Sentence Upheld

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal upheld Friday a two-year prison term imposed almost two years ago on Charles Gagnon, self-avowed member of the Front de Liberation Quebecois terrorist movement.

Gagnon, free now on bail, was handed the sentence Oct. 8, 1968, on a charge of taking part in an abortive robbery on a north end movie theatre more than four years ago.

Both justices on the appeal bench said there was no justification to warrant breaking the sentence.

Bennett's $500 Million Tough to Test

By BRUCE YEMEN
(Analysis)

Premier Bennett's claim for an additional $500 million a year in federal cash is difficult, if not impossible, to test.

There are too many ways of figuring out the difference between what federal taxes take out of B.C. and what is returned in various spending programs.

Two years ago, federal Liberals were broadcasting a 1966 figure of $187 million — in favor of B.C. over Ottawa.

Bennett on Friday told reporters he was too busy to explain how he arrived at the $500 million, but he may yet produce the statistical evidence.

He made public the $500 million demand in Victoria last weekend, describing it as compensation for Ottawa's lack of contribution to a variety of capital projects such as hydro and railway development.

It would also compensate B.C. for the added costs of providing hospital, school and other facilities for the Canadians whose rate of entry to B.C. makes it the fastest growing province by far, he said.

On his somewhat unhappy return from Ottawa, Bennett said the $500 million figure actually represented the difference between federal outflow and input. He added that British Columbias' money was largely flowing into Quebec.

Just 2 Years Ago Federal Liberals Said B.C. Gained

As one observer suggested, the switch in description of the source of the $500 million estimate isn't necessarily inconsistent, but the fact that the two amounts coincide is a remarkable coincidence.

Bennett showed a lot of anger when asked about the negative reaction of the federal government to his request — too much anger, in fact, to encourage the view that the half-billion was dreamed up as a publicity gimmick.

Prime Minister Trudeau, it will be recalled, campaigned successfully in B.C. prior to the 1968 federal election on the theme that the rich parts of Canada have to help the poor if the country is going to survive.

Bennett has in the past acknowledged the need for equalization grants which currently take money from B.C., Alberta and Ontario and funnel it into the other provinces. He has often said, however, that such payments should be made directly to the people in guaranteed income money rather than to governments.

This week Bennett pointed out that Quebec is a resource-rich province to support his argument that Ottawa favors it to an unnecessary degree.

In the year ending March 31, 1970, Quebec was estimated to receive $343 million in equalization grants, more than half the $673 million paid to all provinces.

Nova Scotia was estimated at $90 million; Newfoundland, $85 million; New Brunswick, $83 million; Manitoba, $42 million; Prince Edward Island, $16 million, and Saskatchewan, $12 million.

Equalization grants are calculated on the basis of a province's returns from more than 15 sources of revenues, averaged out to ensure that light-taxing provinces don't get an undeserved break.

Of the total, $673 million in estimated payments for 1969-70, B.C. could be credited as the source for about $70 million in tax revenue.

Confusion Surrounds The Question

In other words, the most that B.C. lost to other provinces by equalization is $70 million.

In the total picture, an estimated federal revenue for 1969-70 of $14 billion can be expected to have found 10 or 12 per cent of its sources in B.C.

So total B.C. tax outflow to Ottawa would be $1.5 billion or so. Some of the returns are obvious—big chunks for medicare, social assistance, hospital insurance and similar shared-cost programs.

But getting down to the fine figuring, layman and expert alike run into difficulty in deciding how much of various federal expenditures to attribute to B.C. For instance, how much of Canada's external affairs spending should be credited as a direct benefit to B.C.?

On the other side of the ledger, how much of the corporation tax collected in Toronto and credited to Ontario is actually based on wealth produced in B.C. by branch offices of national firms?

Until Bennett issues some sort of guide to his method of figuring, it will be little more than a mildly diverting exercise to try to assess his claims.

And even then, it might take the World Bank as referee to get the financial wizards from Ottawa on the same wave length as Victoria to sort out the confusion that has traditionally surrounded this long and historic clash of federal and provincial interests.

Agnew's Tour Import Hard to Measure

GOP Coffers Richer; How Will They Vote?

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN
(Analysis)

WASHINGTON (WP) — When Vice-President Agnew returned from his campaign tour early Thursday morning, the Republican treasuries in Washington headquarters and in six states were about $700,000 richer.

Beyond that, however, the value of his coast-to-coast campaigning was difficult to measure. The crowds were receptive but not ecstatic, appreciative but not especially demonstrative. They paid good money for bad food and showed in a polite, restrained way that they approved of what Agnew told them.

* * *

It is a paradox, because the vice-president is acknowledged to be the hottest property on the political circuit this fall and he is lobbing the heaviest charges of the season.

Midway through the tour, one of his associates was asked to evaluate the campaigner's reception. "Adequate," was the reply. Why were the crowds not more demonstrative? "They are not reacting because they are listening," he answered.

Agnew himself seemed satisfied, dismissing a question about the crowds with, "They're playing hob with my tennis elbow."

The vice-president was travelling in uphill territory for Republicans most of the way through the six states—Illinois, Wyoming, California, Nevada, New Mexico and Michigan.

* * *

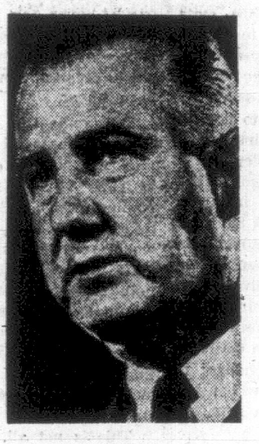
Conversations with local politicians and the gleanings from a few polls indicate that the Republican candidates are running behind in five of the states and about even with the Democratic candidate in the sixth. For several of them, the Agnew visit was the crowning point of the campaign, an event designed to stir up enthusiasm amid apathy and to bring in the dollars to buy television time.

* * *

Agnew seemed to realize the limitations of his visits' impact on the contests. Rallies and speeches and demonstrations, he said, are not great attractions any more, he said at a press conference. Televised press conferences—"appearances that aren't whipped up as a contrived political rally type or demonstration atmosphere"—probably have more effect on the electorate, he said.

●

Agnew's staff made no effort to whip up the type of noisy airport rally which proliferates in a presidential campaign, although at a couple of stops the local candidates had pulled the faithful to the landing strips. The vice-president divided his time between two events in almost every city—the fund-raising speech and the personal television appearance or press conference.



AGNEW
. . . hot property

It was on the whole a leisurely tour with time out for gold and tennis for the vice-president. If he spent much time immersed in local politics and conversations with candidates it was not apparent to travelling reporters.

The casual, low-key campaigning style was in curious contrast to the message Agnew brought to the Republican gatherings. Even for him, the language was tough and occasionally hyperbolic, the speeches prepared and redrafted with great care and considerable research.

* * *

For in Agnew's view, the fall campaign is not merely a series of political contests; it is what he frequently calls a "collision of philosophies." His goal is far more ambitious than electing Republicans. He and his aides are out to dismember the Democratic party by detaching forcefully from it a band of liberals, mostly in the Senate, who he daily dubbed "radical-liberals."

In pursuit of that goal, Agnew and his staff of speechwriters have devised a two-pronged strategy. The "radic-libs" are to be accused of every conceivable public sin, from encouraging violence at home to inviting Communist aggression abroad. Secondly, Agnew is trying to peel away the blue-collar vote from the Democratic party.

* * *

Thus, in Michigan, Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart, the first target pinpointed as a "radical-liberal," is accused of representing the attitudes which encouraged the unruly heckling Agnew received at Saginaw.

Such behavior, he said, "has come about partly because senators like (Hart) have condoned a disrespect for law and for American institutions."

* * *

The attack is coupled with an appeal to the working man to abandon the party which represents such permissiveness: "This is the man who has built America . . . he is proud of his country. He properly resents seeing it run down by people who have never had to work as hard as he does."

The "radical-liberal," Agnew implies, is somehow soft on pornography and drugs, wants to integrate southern schools with troops while he lives far out in the suburbs, and would throw away the sacrifices the American working man has made in the war in Vietnam.

* * *

It is all said in a soft, gentle voice. Little bitterness shows through to match the angry language. It is probably true, as the man said, that the audience is not reacting because it is listening. The question this fall for Agnew is how closely they have listened and how, in the end, they decide to react at the polls.

Engineer Committed For Theft

DAUPHIN, Man. (CP) — Raymond Percy Levi Daniels, 47, a former provincial highways engineer in Dauphin, Friday was committed for trial on four of seven charges of theft and breach of trust alleged to have occurred between 1963 and 1969.

A second man, Ronald James Aube, 38, a suspended highways department employee, had a charge of breach of trust dismissed at the conclusion of a three-day preliminary hearing.

In handing down his decision, Magistrate F. M. Manwaring said it would be "a travesty of justice" to put Aube on trail.

Daniels has elected trail by judge and jury on the three charges of breach of trust and one charge of theft now facing him.

The theft charge refers to a metal culvert, the property of the department, which Daniels is alleged to have stolen.

The counsel for Aube said action would now commence through the Civil Service Association to get his client reinstated and reimbursed for lost wages for the time he has been suspended.

A New Look at Reasons

THERE IS SOUND COMMON sense as well as good business in the warning of Mr. Robert Andras, the federal minister in charge of housing, that federal aid to urban development programs will not in future be granted merely on the basis that the project will make the city bigger or more populous. Governments at all levels should be more than mere sources of funds: they should also impose planning standards and ensure that any proposed building program will improve the city as a place in which to live, rather than merely create more of it.

Unplanned development inevitably produces congestion, pollution and other urban ills. Dozens of cities on this continent provide examples of this. Therefore it is only sensible to take heed of the pitfalls and make sure that projects obtaining government assistance will result in positive human betterment as well as increased construction.

That is the gist of Mr. Andras' statement to the UBCM convention at Penticton, and it is refreshing to hear a federal minister voice such sentiments. Mr. Andras has even challenged the great gods of our era: physical expansion, increased population, intensified industrialization, growth at any price. If these are not controlled and channelled into creating a better environment for city dwellers, then what is the point in plunging into large expenditures for "unplanned growth and expanding sprawl — rapid and inefficient urban development and thus extreme financial pressures?"

The minister wants to see Canada avoid "a slide into the kinds of deterioration and accompanying upheavals that we see in some cities south of the border and in other countries." And there is little time to lose in initiating this new approach, for Canada is on "the edge of fairly deep trouble," with Toronto and Montreal fated to escalate into centres with more than six-million populations, Vancouver with two and a half millions. Eventually 40 per cent of Canada's population will be living in these three urban centres.

It has taken the frightening social spectacles provided by a number of United States cities today to spark some new thinking among many people who now want to know why buildings and cities should be bigger and bigger, and why more and more people should be encouraged to jam into already congested centres, or swamp cities which so far have escaped overcrowding. Mr. Andras calls such phenomena "the goal of economic growth for economic growth's sake," and he says "economic growth must have a better reason." That is a thought which has not penetrated the collective mind of British Columbia's government yet, for it still is apparently guided by the principle that quality of living is secondary to economic gain, or perhaps more accurately, that quality of living IS economic gain.

Mr. Andras added a final comment — and an important one — that the new approach to urban development would not be imposed by any central government czar, but would evolve from the co-operative effort of all three levels of government — federal, provincial and city — together with the aid of a permanent technical staff. This should prevent piecemeal, uncoordinated projects in cities which so often lead only to further urban problems of function, traffic and appearance.

It is too much to hope that we are going to see a great reform in urban development overnight, but it is heartening to hear that someone at the top level of government is on the right track.

Ducking the Punch

IT IS DISAPPOINTING, BUT NOT surprising, to learn from Mayor Hugh Curtis, retiring president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, that the provincial government has withdrawn at the close of the first phase from a study of local government and provincial financial responsibilities. Mr. Curtis rightly argues that the necessary technical work already accomplished is useless and incomplete without the second phase, which would draw final conclusions. For that reason the UBCM will carry on alone to finish the job.

The earlier arrangement, by which the provincial government and the municipalities had agreed to the joint study — and which included the second phase — had appeared to be the long-awaited action by Mr. Bennett's government to sit down with the municipalities and come to grips with problems which were strangling the local governments financially. It seemed to represent a recognition by the province that municipalities had reason to complain against rising service costs continually being thrust upon them.

The reasons for provincial withdrawal are not difficult to see.

Premier Bennett finds his government financially over-extended and is feeling the pinch. The pinch is passed on in the form of freezes and cuts in hospitals, education, welfare and other local services.

Under these circumstances, it could be highly embarrassing to the provincial administration to pursue to final conclusions an investigation of municipal and provincial financial obligations. If the municipalities have a case — and nothing has been announced to convince the public that they haven't — then the provincial government could not honestly disclaim responsibilities. The Premier apparently saw the punch coming — and ducked.

Market For Japanese Communism

JAPAN'S POSTWAR SUCCESS story — rehabilitated country, economic upsurge, expanding trade, quality production — seems on the point of offering an ideological chapter. The reviving Communist Party, in a land which is still politically conservative, is being viewed by Eastern European countries as a more comfortable bedfellow than either Russia or China.

A number of Eastern European Communist countries, seeking national expression and some liberalization, have scarcely veiled the disillusionment that came with Russia's repression of Czechoslovakia. Nor are they insensitive to the Red Guard campaign in China.

Now they look with interest at the Japanese party, which advocates freedom of speech, assembly and religion — and which has condemned both Peking and Moscow for interference in the affairs of Communist parties in other lands.

The Japanese Communists are not yet numerically strong in relation to other political movements in their own country, but they are growing. Their attitude strikes a sympathetic chord in parts of Eastern Europe where the two giants of Marxism have attracted distrust and dislike by their methods.

A new Asiatic association appears to be offered to restive European Communist nations. They are still Communist, but they are reminded by Japan that the doctrine is not the monopoly of either the Kremlin or of Mao—neither of whom has prevailed over the other in the great schism.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Seasonal changes are taking place along the Centennial Trail at Francis Park.

On the large rock to the south the leaves of the stone crop are thin and flexible now that they have let their storage of water trickle down to the roots to keep the plant alive.

A little farther along a stroller can observe the thinning of a maple grove whose trees range in size yet are all of the same age. This is a natural thinning and in time it will reach the right number that can survive in this type of habitat.

Along the eastern slope where the fire occurred two years ago, you will see how the grasses have taken over completely.

As you move down into the little valley you encounter a vast change. The plants are still fresh and green for growing here are a number of grand firs and willows and on the ground, the salal and sword ferns are abundant. They are nourished by the moisture that is seeping from under the high rock cliff. Moreover, it is shaded from the hot sun.

Along the north side, where the "stepmoss" normally is fresh and springy, it is now dull and dry.

You can walk to the little pond now and the huge skunk cabbage leaves have dropped and fallen. Occasionally you can still find the odd little frog hiding under a leaf and, if you look closely, you may see snail eggs in their jelly.

Take the way back by the Grand Fir Trail. Stop a while and see how many different tree species you can spot, for here is a true coast forest area.

CANADA'S CONSTITUTION

By MAURICE WESTERN

'Horse-and-Buggy', But It Moved Right Along

Western

THE statement of conclusions issued belatedly on Tuesday night by the constitutional conference supports the view that communiques vary inversely in length with the amount of work successfully accomplished. There has evidently been some change in accepted priorities and procedures but nothing to place in imminent peril what is variously described as our "horse" and buggy constitution."

If we indeed suffered from such a constitution, the lack of substantive achievement in Ottawa would certainly be cause for gloom and despondency. But, in fact, no such constitution exists. We have been changing it by formal amendment, by judicial interpretation and by a variety of other ingenious methods ever since the written part — the British North America Act 1867 — was committed to paper.

Even the deep freeze theorists must admit that the changes have been fairly substantial: otherwise Canada would still consist of four provinces (two of them much smaller than at present), voting would be limited to male British subjects, and six of the present premiers would have no more right to participate in the constitutional discussions than the mayor of Yellowknife.

The "horse-and-buggy" characterization became popular in the 1930s when we appeared to be plodding along in aimless fashion, partly because of severely restrictive court decisions. Since that time progress has been impressive enough to warrant the comment: some horse, some buggy. As it turned out, there were possibilities even in the hobbled constitution unimagined in depression days. Otherwise we could scarcely have experienced the radical transformation of a relatively simple society into the welfare state which now, according to Bryce Mackasey, is yielding — without constitutional change — to the "service state."

In part, this was made possible by normal amendments (having to do, for example, with unemployment insurance, old age pensions and supplementary benefits). But it also resulted from other changes commonly overlooked in public discussions. Thus the amended Supreme Court Act of 1949 abolished appeals to the judicial committee in London, the tribunal — composed of men living in a unitary society far different from our own — which was responsible for the restrictive decisions. This from Quebec's standpoint, was too great a change; in fact it became a grievance which has now led to the demand for a separate constitutional court.

Changing Realities

Our governments, undeterred by horses and buggies, have also been changing realities beyond recognition by federal-provincial devices of all descriptions, the most extreme being the opting-out expedient.

What the meetings of the past three years appear to have shown is that the supposed urgency of constitutional reform is largely fanciful. If governments (whatever their public professions) sincerely felt that they were being crippled in any particular respect by constitutional revisions, they would be concentrating on specific difficulties instead of engaging in a leisurely review of everything from A to Z.

Without doubt there has from time to time been urgency of a sort in various capitals. It seems, however, to have been a political urgency not unrelated to approaching elections and requiring less constitutional change than consitutional posture. For the constitution (or what is widely taken as the constitution) has proved, over the years, a remarkably attractive whipping boy. Without it, public attention might have been less easily diverted from the inadequacies of government.

It is quite true that the men of 1867 did not foresee all the concerns of 1970 and the listing of responsibilities in articles 91 and 92 is far from comprehensive. But this defect is not necessarily grave and remedial action would not necessarily banish our problems. An obvious case is environmental management, pollution being one of the dominating themes of our era. As Mr. Robarts has pointed out, it would be very difficult to delineate responsibilities in this vast field and there is a strong case for developing mechanisms ensuring high flexibility.

This is not all. Ontario, fronting on the Great Lakes, has been the most active province in the anti-pollution field. The greatest difficulties at present, as shown by the recent Great Lakes environmental conference, do not result from contested jurisdiction in Canada. They can be solved only through cooperation with Washington and the eight states bordering the lakes. Constitutional change in Canada would not touch the serious international aspect of the problem.

Various constitutional amendments certainly would be desirable and should be sought, but it ought now to be clear that the western premiers, often characterized as neanderthals by indignant critics, have from the outset been far more realistic in their approach to reform than their detractors in central Canada. They put the emphasis, not on a dream constitution, but on the improvement and patriation of the existing act. There is a high probability that time and energy expended in this fashion might by now have produced some useful results.

The revised strategy of the constitutional conference accords higher priority to the search for an acceptable amending formula. There was of course a near-success in this quest — at some danger to federal powers — in 1964. At present prospects are uncertain; Mr. Bourassa has plainly stated that he is not prepared to go back to Fulton-Favreau but where he is prepared to go remains a mystery.

Not So Binding

If the premiers are now to concentrate on the amending formula they ought not to go on the assumption that something must be salvaged to impress the public and that any formula will be acceptable providing governments agree. The amending process was not originally difficult although it has been made much more so by the acquiescence of federal governments in conventions unknown to the founding fathers. But conventions are not so binding as governments like to suggest; Mr. LaPointe, in emergency, invoked disallowance although it was then quite widely assumed that the power had died from long years of disuse.

Resort to London for amendment of the act may be undignified but it involves no difficulty, the procedure being purely automatic. The goal should be patriation but not at the price of tying ourselves in constitutional knots.

It is important to ensure that things are not made worse than at present and this will necessitate a more searching examination than in 1964 of such items as vetoes, double vetoes and the implications of the principle of delegation for the effective accountability of governments, through Parliament and the legislatures, to the people.

Back to Rebuilding a Mideast Peace Negotiation Base

Frye

ATTENTION that has been riveted on the Palestinian guerrillas, their hijacked hostages, and upheaval in Jordan has obscured from view the long-range tragedy of recent weeks in the Mideast: the breakdown of incipient Arab-Israeli peace negotiations. It would serve little purpose to conduct a post-mortem on this breakdown and affix shares of blame. What is necessary now is to see if Humpty-Dumpty can be put together again.

To say it will be a long, hard process is not to say it will necessarily be impossible. Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad notwithstanding, the American peace initiative is not dead.

There is an agreed starting point for the resuscitation process: the 90-day ceasefire is (as of this writing) still intact. And the Egyptians say they will go on observing it if Israel does.

Israeli Offer

This is a definite plus. A second positive factor is Israel's offer to renegotiate the terms of the standstill ceasefire from which the peace talks were to have sprung.

The implication of this offer is that, for a price, Israel may agree to live with the missiles which Egypt and the Soviet Union have thus far installed in what was to have been the standstill zone—to negotiate on peace, that is, despite the presence of the missiles.

Part of the price would, of course, be demanded of the United States, and Premier Golda Meir is likely to have been doing just that in Washington this past week.

It consists of military and economic help to counteract the adverse effect of the missiles on Israel's politico-military posture. Every sign is that Washington will pay a large part of it.

The rest of the price would be demanded of Egypt, and would consist of guarantees against further increments to Egypt's military strength along the canal.

Just how such guarantees could be made persuasive is not clear. Perhaps a UN patrol could be authorized, although Israel has rarely warmed to this kind of proposal in the past, especially if it applied to both sides.

The objective would be to construct a new and firmer standstill ceasefire, with the former military balance restored at a higher level of warmaking capacity on both sides. Each side would have increased its ability to inflict injury on the other; neither would have gained a relative advantage.

Under these conditions, the peace talks could be resumed in New York with the respective bargaining postures undamaged. If, in the process, Egypt felt herself physically more secure along the canal, her new self-confidence would not necessarily be a handicap to peacemaking.

The real difficulties in the way of such a program are psychological and political.

Each side is sure the other has been acting in bad faith in recent weeks; and having been once burned, is thrice shy of future commitments.

The Arabs think Israel does not really want to talk peace at all under the conditions outlined in the American initiative. (These conditions include, as part of the ultimate objective, near-total Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory.) They believe Israel seized the first pretext to escape from an unwilling acceptance of the American project.

The Israelis, for their part, are sure the Soviet-Egyptian acceptance of the standstill ceasefire was a pure trick to win protection from Israel's air force while the missile installations were being deployed.

Independent observers feel there may well be some truth to both suspicions. The problem is to launch a peace negotiation despite them.

A second major difficulty in the way of a resumed negotiation is the newly demonstrated capacity of the Arab guerrillas for political sabotage. Earlier estimates that they were paper tigers have had to be drastically revised.

The future of their capacity is being tested, as of this writing, in Jordan, where King Hussein set out, this past week, to reassert his authority—and thereby slapped a hornet's nest.

Before there can be peace negotiations with an assurance that the ultimate agreement could be put into effect, it will be necessary either to bring the fedayeen under control or persuade them to take part themselves in the peace effort—necessary, that is, either to force them or to lure them into acquiescence in Israel's permanent existence.

State of Palestine

A dramatic move to solve the Palestine refugee problem would go a long way toward breaking the deadlock. Perhaps King Hussein, whose country is clearly ungovernable under present circumstances, could offer to turn the West Bank over to the fedayeen as a state of Palestine, Israel withdrawing her occupation forces to permit its creation.

The Palestinians would not be satisfied; but the moderates among them might accept the plan as an interim expedient. Then the world community could come in with generous compensation for the lost refugee properties in Israel; and the option of repatriation to their former homes in Israel could be left open, for those who preferred it, following a peace settlement. By that time many would be satisfactorily resettled and would in fact reject the option.

The task of building a new country would be a far better preoccupation for Palestinians than hijacking airplanes and battling kings. And it could help to ease the very real and very anguished grievances many of them have felt for more than 20 years.

More for Chiropractors

As you know benefits under the British Columbia Medical Plan have been greatly reduced recently.

Chiropractors provide a very necessary service, and I feel that payment for their services should be restored to $50 a year per patient, and more for families, plus X-rays when necessary.

When these services have been cut in half they are just not adequate for those of us who are in need of treatment, and are on a limited income.

I would like to suggest that the Medical Services Commission in Victoria review the plan. Their consideration in increasing benefits will be very much appreciated. — Mrs. Olive Martin, Apt. 3 303 Vancouver St.

THIS IS SOUTHEAST ASIA—I

Cousins Under the Carapace

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

Bloodworth has been chief correspondent of the London Observer in Southeast Asia for 16 years. A book based on his experiences and observations, "An Eye for the Dragon: Southeast Asia Observed, 1954-1970," is being published this month and is a selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. This is the first of 11 extracts from the book that will appear daily on Page Five. They will deal with Asian-Western misunderstandings; racial problems; the westernization of Asian eating habits; corruption, piracy and smuggling; the influence of superstition and magic; the anti-democratic attitude in many Asian nations, and a number of other issues. They are written with the clarity, grace and wit that has distinguished Bloodworth's style.

"You cannot possibly understand us," Asians have told me woundingly. "But with us it is different. We know you Europeans only too well." This is frequently a ludicrously unjustified boast.

Asia is an insanitary continent, reeking of ineradicable dirt and poverty, but famous for its laundering and inhabited by different peoples who wash thoroughly before getting into a hot bath, or who bathe in running streams, dance under a shower (if in public, fully clothed), or throw bucketfuls of water over themselves from great vats or jars.

To them, the white man is disgusting, for he sits in a tub of water and rinses himself in his own filth. As to left-handed cleansing operation, the Chinese used paper before the West, but preferred goosefeathers in the heyday of the hedonists, and many orientals claim that water, sand or even stones are more hygienic.

If the Westerner is unclean, he is also ugly, and his customs sometimes take much explaining away. American soldiers are no more brutal or licentious than others, but when they are unleashed in Taipei, or Bangkok or Tokyo for five days of leave from the Viet Cong, they are quite naturally less concerned with national manners than country matters, and since the evil that men do lives after them, by 1968 they had fathered more than two thousand "red haired" Thais alone.

It is useless to protest that while the Americans were increasing the mixed population of Thailand, the Thai "Queen Cobra" Regiment was doing the same in Vietnam at the average rate of one baby for every 13 men, or that in a given year seven unlucky Americans out of 10 in some units had caught the "Vietnam Rose" (which, by any other name, may be identified as a particularly stubborn form of clap).

Asian prejudices have been hardened by scenes of public necking and drunkenness and brawling, and by the insults offered to their wives by white men for whom every pretty girl was a prostitute. Even the best-behaved American serviceman, walking sedately down a Bangkok street arm in arm with some permissive little piece, is a shameless farang who fans hidden fires of cultural indignation. For, strictly speaking it is inadmissable for boy to touch girl in public in Thailand, even if the girl faints.

Little credit goes to thousands of Westerners who set out to please. Yet if the British can be courteous and accommodating to local custom, to the point of letting the natives hack each other to bits, a really conscientious American behaves as if he had majored in manners. The Peace Corps, above all, presents in principle a new Western visage — bland, smiling, helpful, and understanding sometimes beyond all understanding as far as the bewildered Asian is concerned.

In 1964 a Peace Corps volunteer invigilating a high school class in Thailand politely began eating his way through nearly three dozen plates of food which the students, one by one, presented to him with a note in Siamese. He was finally saved by a Thai teacher who explained that they were not gifts from the girls, but their examination entries in the finals of a food-preparation course.

His behavior contrasted agreeably with that of the late Marshal Sarit, who sipped his carefully chosen wine as guest of honor at a severely protocolaire dinner given by the British Ambassador to Bangkok, screwed up his face in disgust, flung his glass down on the table, and called for a bottle of brandy. Too often the touchy, thin-skinned Asian behaves as if everyone else had the hide of a rhinoceros.

The vices of the inventive white, yesterday damned for poisoning the wells of wise living in the Orient, are adopted by Asian governments today — provided they show a profit. The anti-colonial urge to fulminate against the foreigner as if he were the sole originator of all pot, sex, booze and gambling is giving way gently to a tacit admission that he is not the only man who is vile, after all. But there is still much room for misunderstanding in all matters of morality.

Like most of his Asian neighbors, the Lao lacks the Christian's sense of guilt. In his philosophy Man did not first come on stage against the setting of the Garden of Eden to perform Act One, Sin One, for to him good and evil are inseparable. In consequence, as long as man's actions are not motivated by a possessive urge, he may accept all opposites — the pleasure that is defined by pain, as well as the pain that is defined by pleasure, since they are all one and the same. This is the middle way between the guru and the gourmand.

The Lord Buddha himself condemned excessive asceticism. The enlightment which eluded him for six long years of self-denial and meditation embraced him finally after he had disgusted five fellow-sages by eating a square meal and taking a bath. That inspired the outlook which gives to millions of Asians their sense of perspective today.

But as at least one devout Lao commentator has plaintively remarked, Buddhism can easily become the doctrine of lethargy and self-indulgence. If to reason is to destroy the true vision of the Cosmos, don't think. If to strive is to bind yourself to this deplorable world of illusion, then don't strive. Moreover, as all Buddhists wish to "gain merit" by performing charitable acts, and so edge nearer to Nirvana, it may be kinder to take than to give.

The Buddhist bonze who holds out his begging bowl to the Thai housewife and lets her fill it with food is doing her a favor, for she is gaining merit. The pagodas bless the community by allowing themselves to be showered with candles and flowers and fruit and children.

How many times Westerners have embarrassed or bewildered Asians by thrusting things upon them and expecting gratitude in return it is hideous to contemplate. Asian leaders who have taken the dollar aid and damned Washington afterwards have also assumed that in the unsentimental commerce of international relations the donor in any case gives because he needs the recipient. The recipient, therefore, renders service twice over.

The Orient produces its own fine strain of hypocrisy, however, and while the Muslims and Buddhists of Southeast Asia may remain strictly loyal to their faiths, they will argue that to cut corners is to take the straightest path.

"Fish?" an old peasant in Thailand echoed, grinning toothlessly. "No, I don't fish. I am old and will die soon. Why should I risk losing merit by killing living creatures? I leave fishing to my son. He's still young."

In Malaya, Chinese Buddhists will happily eat the bird that has been decapitated out of sight by some other unfortunate. In Burma the rule that monks may not touch money was sidestepped long ago when people began giving the bonzes cylinders of silver coins contained in long nets. The Theravada Buddhist usually wears his hair shirt open at the neck, as it were.

The rigid morality designed for use in a Western universe of fixed ethics is often replaced in Asia by a flexible casuistry more suitable for an Eastern Cosmos in a constant state of change, just as the tortoise has legs for two-dimensional land, the terrapin flippers for three-dimensional water. They are cousins under the carapace, but the Westerner on his solid philosophical ground believes he can manage his universe, while the Oriental knows he must give way to tides and currents.

The legend of laziness in Southeast Asia must be examined, like all its legends, for its inner meaning. It is quite unjust to imagine that oriental idleness is the same as the dishonest scrimshanking of the British worker who slacks on the job while the foreman has his back turned. The white man is a thief who steals paid time, but the indolent Asian would rather have the time than the money. Slowness and the siesta are his secrets of survival in the steamy tropics, and his philosophy leaves him with simple demands.

Buddhism has taught the Lao that he must cast off ambition, that nothing fails like success, and this suits him down to the ground. When provided by solicitous Americans with new strains of seeds that would double his rice crop, he remarked with pleasure that now he need only sow half his usual acreage.

"What would I do if I worked harder and earned more money?" repeated a Cambodian farmer, when told he, too, could double his yield. "I don't know. I already have a bicycle and a radio. Get another wife, perhaps?"

If there is work to be done, the Asian will do it. But to ask the Lao for "urgent" will raise a laugh, for that is another matter. The sensible man sees that straining to solve one problem only creates another, and may entangle him inextricably in the web of this world.

The School as Prison

By CARL ERIKSON

(Mr. Erikson is chairman of the Social Science Department of Mohawk College in Hamilton. He wrote this article for the Toronto Star.)

Never before in history has our society been able to afford, and willing to spend, the amount of money that is being spent today on educating the young people.

The classroom of 1970 is a far cry from the classroom known to previous generations of students, who find themselves footing the expensive educational bill.

The modern classroom has available the latest audio-visual hardware and software, and often access to external support material in the form of educational films and highly sophisticated and expensively produced television programs.

Yet, the modern classroom is impoverished. In fact, it is more austere than the little red schoolhouse of days gone by.

The poverty of the classroom is reflected in the unrest displayed by today's students, and in their cries for relevant and meaningful education.

This seeming ungratefulness on the part of the student of today was missing in the days when the little red schoolhouse was buzzing with "well-dressed" "well-kept," and "well-behaved" youngsters. What has gone wrong?

The answer is simple, even though the solution to the problem may be much more obscure. Despite the expenditures in the past 10 years or so, few new developments have taken place in the area of pedagogical techniques.

The teaching methods utilized today are substantially the same as were employed in the little red schoolhouse 40 years ago. But the student of today is far different from the student of 40 years ago.

By failing to recognize that, and by continuing to rely on teaching methods that are obsolete in respect to the audience in today's classrooms, we turn the student off. The classroom becomes an anachronism.

In the non-urban agrarian society, the child was socialized to look to his father for knowledge. Change was very slow, and know-how was passed on from the older, experienced head of the household to the children.

There were no external sources of knowledge, and the father had no rivals for the supreme position he occupied. He was respected, and sometimes feared, as the authority figure from whom knowledge radiated.

When the child of the agrarian society reached school age, the teacher occupied much the same role as the father. He was the sole knowledgeable authority figure in the child's life. Moreover, the school was considered by many as an escape from the dull, routine, uneventful life on the farm.

The school was where it was at, where one could replace the restricted home environment for social interaction and external stimuli. No wonder student unrest and rebellion were not part of the little red schoolhouse.

The fascination of the school to the child 40 or 50 years ago does not exist for the student of today. Rather than being an escape from a dull, uneventful environment, the school has become a prison to many students. It's a bore, a drag. It's a place where one is couped up for six or seven hours a day. It's a place where the teacher appears in a four-walled classroom to tell the student the same thing he saw on television two years ago.

To the child of the electronics age, the teacher is not the sole, all-knowledgeable authority figure. In fact, he is often a very minor figure among many. The awe for the father as all-knowledgeable has disappeared, and so it has for the teacher.

The traditional classroom is stifling to the multi-media child. It cannot compete with the challenging and rapidly changing society outside the four walls.

If the education process is to be meaningful and successful, we must replace the techniques employed in the little red schoolhouse which were based on a non-involved passive approach to an approach that relies on active involvement and participation.

The student should also spend less time in the classroom. It seems realistic to assume that the student of today is better prepared than were his parents to engage in independent, self-study supported by guidance and direction from the instructor, who then is viewed as a resource person and co-ordinator rather than as the almighty authority and sole generator of knowledge.

To be successful, a change in attitude and outlook on the part of both is required, and indeed on the part of society at large, since the walls of the school that have kept reality of life out of the classroom, and thus inpoverished it, will have to be torn down.

The community must become part of the classroom. The student must be offered the opportunity to get involved and to participate.

Mister Okell's Kingdom

By ART STOTT

The news columns and features have kept readers informed on the renovations at Trial Island, and the reaction of the Hornes, the present keepers, to the changes. Those of us who go boat-riding off the point (we used to call it trolling, but that implies the presence of fish there still) have noted the new structures going up. They should effect improvements, though they may only represent "progress," which can be something else again.

Light-keepers have come and gone since the days when we were boys at Foul Bay and evening set the light winking at us from east-southeast. In those days, and for some of us still, the lighthouse was Harold Okell's place, the island his domain.

* * *

Adventure was a trip to Trial when someone who owned a rowboat took you along. On occasion you might even travel in style if there was vacant space in Bill Grant's launch "Scud," or if James Sterling Smith put out from Chinese Point in his sky-blue longboat with its "heavy-doody" engine. You worked passage on the Smith boat—two gunnysacks of bark, "and quit filling them up with empty tin cans." The added bonus for the bark was two chiclets and a fancy biscuit.

Your pilot picked his way through barnacled reefs and boulders to hit the island beach on a stretch of shingle or rounded cobbles, and you went ashore to foreign soil. In summer, wild strawberries grew there, ripening after the shooting stars and chocolate tulips had ceased to bloom and while small, delicate briar roses turned soft petals to the sun.

* * *

We gathered our bark and explored. Timbers came ashore there, and in the era of wooden shipbuilding in Victoria, belaying pins and hardwood pegs. On a leisurely visit, you could also lie on the dry shingle and sort out small agates.

Our contact with the lighthouse was limited. At one time the Okells had kept rabbits. They escaped confinement and ran free on the island. We sought them out, caught them in driftwood tangles and spirited them away. It was never clear in my mind whether we were taking wild rabbits or stealing domestic strays. It took only one small bunny, a soft, little yellow creature that fell prey to marauding dogs the first night I placed it in a chicken-wire hutch at home. A small guilt complex kept us at a distance from the lighthouse.

The rabbits and nesting birds — Little Trial is still a sanctuary — attracted mink to the islands and Stan Whitwell, a man when we were boys, shot enough of them to make his wife a cape. We stood well back and behind him when his small dog flushed the mink.

We knew, also, the story of Okell's cows. One developed channel swimming abilities. It would cross the small cut between Big and Little Trail, browse through the harsh salt-grass of the latter and then launch out for the swim to the Oak Bay golf links, where the grass was greener but where paying members had limited sympathy for bovine company.

* * *

Each excursion of the cow brought Bill Grant, with a special small scow, to the links' shoreline, where such marine cowboys as Jock Whitwell, young Robbie Okell and his father choused the critten abroad and returned it to the island to rest up for the next swim.

We trolled off the tip of Trial, learning about tides and the impossibility of rowing against the full flow when it was running in. In difficulties — and it was regular procedure for an angling oarsmen to be caught in the rip and wind up on San Juan Island — you hauled in the line that was tied to your leg while you rowed, sneaked into the slack water east of the island tip and used the back eddies to edge your way around. You still had a stretch 50 to 100 feet long over which you were bucking head on against the run, but an experienced boy could handle that distance in one back-breaking and hazardous dash.

* * *

In modern boats, with good outboards, you don't worry about the rush of the tide. You're foolish, though, if you don't respect it and its capacity for throwing up a raging chop in storm. It can be very dirty water.

Trial, with new structures and more houses, is looking a little different now, but the general outline is the same. So it will stay, I hope, justifying the Cadborosaurus legend — an "old" Indian story created from whole cloth by Bruce Hutchison in postwar years and illustrated in a controversial mural by Jack Shadbolt, originally for Paul Arsens' Terra Cotta Room at the Dominion.

There's Blood In Our Coffee From Brazil

By JEAN-CLAUDE LECLERC
Le Devoir

Nothing is more distressing than to read, side by side, the acccounts that continue to be published on the cruel regime in Brazil and the pages the Ottawa government has devoted to its new foreign policy "to serve Canadians."

Behind the padded formulations of the external affairs department, terrible choices of capital importance to the future of the country are being made.

Under the guise of efficiency, modesty or even international co-operation, the federal government is moving imperceptibly into a policy of de facto support of regimes which most inhumanly oppose the democratic creed we preach here.

What good will it have done to die for democracy in Europe in the 1940s if, 30 years later, we co-operate with dictatorships in Brazil, Haiti, South Africa and elsewhere?

No one can be better informed about this Brazilian situation than the present government. Long before the late trade minister Robert Winters became, in 1968, the president of Brazilian Light and Power, now Brascan Ltd., the vice-president of this Canadian company in Brazil was, from 1958 to 1962, Mitchell Sharp, who has since become external affairs minister.

It will be too late to cry crocodile tears when revolutionary groups attack the lives and properties of Canadians abroad. There is too much blood in the coffee that comes to us from Brazil.

The sad truth is that Canada is continuing to lose its moral substance.

We can no longer pretend to be building the just society in Canada while making pacts abroad with regimes of torturers. A nation does not live by self-interest alone.

Liferaft Launching To Be Studied

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal inquiry into the collision between a Soviet freighter and the British Columbia ferry Queen of Victoria asked Friday for more information about the launching of a liferaft.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart, who is heading the inquiry, said at the close of the hearing's 21st day, "This rather unusual incident has certainly not been described to our satisfaction."

Evidence has been presented that Wilfred Van Sickle, a helmsman aboard the ferry, took 25 passengers off the ship in a liferaft. The master of the ferry, Captain R. J. Pollock, has said he did not order passengers taken off the vessel. He ordered the liferaft's return to the ferry.

John Bird, representing the B.C. Ferry Authority, said he would produce a witness Monday to answer questions about the unauthorized departure of the liferaft.

In other testimony, steamship inspector James Albert Smith of North Vancouver said the ferry was not overloaded. It carried 626 passengers, 52 crew members and 145 vehicles. It is licensed to carry 1,250 and a full load of vehicles.

Three passengers were killed in the collision between th ferry and the Sergey Yesenin Aug. 2 in Active Pass.

Sharp Defends Policies

TORONTO (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Friday night Canadian foreign policy is aimed at shattering illusions of false greatness and using real power to its fullest.

In a hard-hitting defence of the government's recent review of foreign policy, Sharp said Canadians must realize that Canada's post-war strength has been replaced by a substantially different kind of power.

Text of his speech to a teach-in on international aid at the University of Toronto was released in advance.

To develop an effective foreign policy, Canada had to find roles other than that of "international fixer" in a world plagued by disputes that in most cases could only be settled by the great powers, Sharp said.

To do this, the government decided that its priorities abroad should conform to those at home. These were: Fostering economic growth; protecting sovereignty and independence; promoting peace and social justice; improving the quality of life and protecting the environment.

Everybody Loved Diefenbaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Nearly 400 persons, including Prime Minister Trudeau, Friday gathered in a Pariament Hill committee room to throw a surprise birthday party for former prime minister John Diefenbaker.

They came from all parts of Canada, most of them personal friends of the 75-year-old Diefenbaker.

Among the guests was former prime minister Lester Pearson. Trudeau and Pearson flanked Diefenbaker on the platform as the Conservative member for Prince Albert was presented with gifts.

"I can't say how deeply touched I am," said Diefenbaker, as he was applauded to the microphones.

Pearson presented him with a card which said, "Dear John, how I miss you."

From Trudeau he received a copy of a letter written by a "Montreal Liberal" to Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister.

Brig. Michael Wardell publisher, presented Diefenbaker with a portrait. Wardell said that in the Maritimes, there is for Diefenbaker "a true devotion and gratitude which will never die."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield was at the party to wish Diefenbaker a happy birthday, but he had to leave for another appointment before the presentations had been completed.

'Trudeaumania Waning'—NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — "The reaction is yet to come," predicted New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas, as he talked about the government holding its own in public opinion polls.

The latest polls, showing the Liberal government higher than at the last general election, were obviously much in mind Friday when the federal council of the NDP opened a two-day meeting.

But Douglas told the delegates it was not a discouraging picture although "there must be some concern about the apparent continued support for Trudeaumania." actors," he said. "They are not volitile, they are not hysterical.

"I find there is a growing disillusionment with the government, and Trudeaumania seems to be receding in some parts of the country."

The challenge for the NDP is to get out and take the initiative and "get it across to the public that he government has done nothing."

"Never was there a better case to be presented to the Canadian people — this is a do-nothing government."

Clifford Scotton, party secretary, said in his report to the meeting that if the opinion polls are to be believed "a stalemate seems to have developed."

He said a situation of continuing inflation, rising unemployment and depressed economic conditions would have been expected to result in a shifting of political alliances.

Party president Allan Blakeney, said the party is in a much improved financial situation largely because "we're not doing the job we should be doing."

Douglas said that next April's leadership convention, when he will be replaced as leader, must be made "one of the most momentous in our history." The enthusiasm must carry over to the next general election, probably in 1972.

"It's the greatest opportunity we've had for a long time," said the party leader. With Trudeaumania expected to decline, and with the Liberal Party's "ideological insolvency," the NDP has a unique challenge to get its message across.

He said Trudeau's "goal of 6-per-cent unemployment is the only goal he has been able to reach."

She Really Put Her Foot In It

WENTBRIDGE, England (CP) — Jean Barber, wife of the chancellor of the exchequer, put her foot in it at a party at her Yorkshire home. Everyone chatted happily until Mrs. Anthony Barber sat down — under her long evening dress peeped a pair of garden boots which she had put on by mistake. She laughed and said: "I am rather absent-minded. I remember getting into a lift once and asking for a pound of coffee."

Fire Fighting Costs Set Record

Firest fire fighting costs have hit a record of close to $8.5 million this year, with six weeks remaining in the forest fire season, the British Columbia Forest Service said Friday.

Previous record was $7 million in the 1967 season. Fires this year have burned through 212,000 acres, below the 10-year average of 266,000.

For the first time since the 1970 fire season opened, the hazard rating throughout the province was low Friday. But the service said late September and October have been problem times in the past.

Another Plane Hijacked to Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — A young man armed with dynamite, gasoline and a gun hijacked an Allegheny Airlines jet shortly before it landed in Philadelphia today, ordered 90 passengers off, then took the plane on to Cuba with eight crew members aboard, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The Boeing 727 landed at Havana's Jose Marti Airport at 4:32 a.m. EDT, the FAA said, after leaving Philadelphia at 1:46 a.m.

FAA officials said the plane carried three flight crew members, three stewardesses and two men believed to be FAA inspectors or airline employees.

The plane was bound from Pittsburgh to Boston with a stop in Philadelphia when the hijacker took over, the FAA said. He ordered the aircraft refuelled before leaving for Havana.

A passenger who asked not to be identified said she saw the man grab the pistol from a canvas bag under his seat. An Allegheny spokesman said the pistol appeared to be .22-calibre.

John Balderama, another passenger, said the man "grabbed one of the stewardesses by the neck and took her to the front seat of the plane" just before the Philadelphia landing.

Reporter Facing Contempt Citation

TORONTO (CP) — Reporter Gerald McAuliffe of the Hamilton Spectator has the weekend to decide whether he will disclose to a provincial inquiry the names of his informants about George Clinton Duke's relationships with police and with persons alleged to be known criminals.

If he does not do so when the inquiry resumes at 10 a.m. EDT Monday he faces a possible contempt citation. Under the terms of the inquiry he could be held in jail until he consents to the identification.

Mr. McAuliffe, 31, chief of the Spectator's Burlington, Ont., news bureau, told the inquiry Friday members of the provincial police and of the Burlington force gave him the information.

He told Mr. Justice Campbell Grant he felt morally bound by a guarantee to his sources that he would not identify them.

The justice said he would defer ruling the newspaper man in contempt until the inquiry resumes.

Mr. Justice Grant said he did not want to hear from any more witnesses until he is satisfied that Mr. McAuliffe has presented all the relevant information he possesses.

CONFERENCE PLANNED

Before the hearings resume, inquiry counsel J. J. Robinette will confer with the reporter and Spectator lawyer J. F. Howard.

Lawyers acting for Mr. Duke, an Oakville, Ont., millionaire businessman, and for other persons named in the inquiry insisted that the names were needed in order to give them an opportunity to cross-examine the informants.

Mr. Robinette criticized articles written by Mr. McAuliffe which he said implied that a provincial judge, a Crown attorney and a justice of the peace had tried to protect Mr. Duke after Elizabeth Citron complained that Mr. Duke had threatened her with a gun.

Under questioning, Mr. McAuliffe said he wrote his story about the threatening case without asking Justice of the Peace W. E. Daniels or Crown Attorney Douglas Latimer to comment on Mrs. Citron's allegations of a misadministration of justice.

The threatening case was dealt with in a closed hearing at Milton before Provincial Judge Kenneth Langdon. Mr. Duke, who pleaded guilty, was ordered to post a $2,000 bond to keep the peace and his permit to carry firearms outside his home was withdrawn.

FOR DISCUSSION BY CIVIL AVIATORS

Proposals to Stop Air Piracy Postponed

By DAVID BARKER

MONTREAL (CP) — Proposals to stop air piracy by suspending air services to nations which aid or harbor hijackers were postponed Friday for discussion Sept. 29 by the governing council of the International Civil Aviation Organization.

John A. Volpe, United States secretary of transport representing President Nixon, had called for the "new and drastic action" of a multilateral boycott of any state that:

—Detains for "international blackmail purposes" passengers and crew of any aircraft that has been unlawfully seized;

—Or failure to extradite or prosecute persons responsible for such a seizure for international blackmail.

And Canada resurrected a proposal, turned down at ICAO in June by the U.S. and other countries, urging similar action on a bilateral level of agreements between various nations rather than through a treaty binding on many nations.

AGREES TO DELAY

But several delegates on the 27-member council said their governments had not yet authorized them to act on the proposals and the council agreed to the Sept. 29 meeting at ICAO's Montreal headquarters.

Mr. Volpe told a news conference immediately after the council meeting he was "happy" that ICAO has moved speedily on the proposals but warned that the U.S. reserved "the right to take unilateral action."

He said he hoped for an ICAO decision Sept. 29 and the U.S. would not take "any arbitrary action" before ICAO has a chance to do something.

Friday's meeting had been urgently requested by President Nixon in the wake of hijackings by Palestinian commandos who blew up four planes and held nearly 300 passengers hostage for a time as ransom for the release of arrested Arab hijackers.

Police in civilian clothes kept a close eye on hallways and locked entrances to guard against any incident.

ICAO is a technical and legal organization with 119 member nations of which 27 are chosen to sit on the council for three-year terms.

ISRAEL OBSERVES

Observers at Friday's meeting came from Israel, Switzerland and Algeria, all non-members of the council, as well as the International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations, the International Air Transport Association representing airlines, and the Internatonal Transport Workers Federation.

The U.S. wants to have the boycott proposals included as clauses in international treaties.

A draft ICAO treaty on "unlawful seizure" is to be discussed by a diplomatic conference at The Hague in December and possibly opened for signing by nations.

ICAO legal experts are also scheduled to meet in London at the end of this month to discuss and prepare a second treaty on sabotage and armed attacks, which, if ready in time, could also go before The Hague conference.

But the inclusion of sanctions in international treaties is rare.

Andre Bissonette, Canadian assistant deputy minister for external affairs, explained to a news conference that some countries do not want to be bound in an international treaty with other nations.

He said the Canadian proposal might avoid this problem by depending on negotiated bilateral agreements rather than multilateral treaties.

He also strongly denied suggestions that the Canadian proposal was intended to sideline the U.S. boycott idea which, if it were ever tried, could seriously disrupt airline traffic.

Besides the political problems of a boycott, planes would have to detour around several thousand square miles because navigation, meteorological and ground services would not be available in the area and perhaps not even in nearby areas not included in the boycott.

And in the recent hijackings to Jordan, the government said it was powerless to act against the Palestinian guerrillas who had actually hijacked the planes.

Hair Dyes Linked To Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chemical linked to cancer in laboratory animals is a component of some human hair dyes, the Food and Drug Administration said Friday.

FDA officials said, however, that the suspect chemical is beyond the regulatory reach of the agency because of a special congressional exemption for coal-tar derivatives used in hair dyes.

Dr. Elizabeth Weisburger, a chemist at the National Cancer Institute, said that in several experiments the chemical, called 2,4-TDA, caused cancer in animals. Malignancies were produced both through feedings and injecting the substance under the skin, she said.

Officials of the FDA's comestic division said 2.4-TDA is used in the formulation of some permanent and semi-permanent hair dyes. The substance is not found in the more commonly used dye rinses, they said.

No estimates were available on how many of the approximately 43 grades of permament and semi-permanent dyes contained 2,4-TDA.

Police Request Help In Probe

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Police investigating an attack on West Vancouver Alderman Jack Forster last Saturday night have pinned their hopes on identifying an oriental jute sack.

West Vancouver police have asked the help of the public in identifying the sack which was tied over Forster's head when he was rescued from the waters of Eagle Harbor last weekend.

Forster said he was out walking his dog along the shore when he was clubbed from behind and dumped into shallow water at the edge of the bay.

RUSSIA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL CITY

Leningrad: Window on West

By JOSEPH ADLER

The city whose name was changed three times from St. Petersburg (1703-1914) to Petrograd (1914-24) to Leningrad is the most beautiful of all the Soviet cities I have visited.

Built by Peter the Great in 1703 on the Neva River delta, it is the most European oriented of Soviet cities. Much of its beauty is due to the fact that for 200 years, young as capitals go, it was designed by great architects both Russian and European.

★ ★ ★

Located at the east end of the Gulf of Finland, 400 miles northwest of Moscow, it was Russia's window on the West, the major Soviet port on the Baltic Sea. It is the home of great palaces, cathedrals, monuments, parks, gardens, fountains, beautiful bridges (600 of them) and in the summer there are the "white nights" — a midnight twilight but no real dark, much like the summer nights in Scandinavia, its near neighbor.

Here, the revolution of 1905 was fought; here the Feb. 1917 revolution against the tsar took place; and this was the scene of the October, 1917 Revolution.

Leningrad is the second largest city in the U.S.S.R: 193 square miles in area, over 3,700,000 population.

During World War II, 650,000 of its people perished, 10,000 buildings were destroyed. Its citizens withstood a seige that lasted approximately 900 days. For its heroic defence, Leningrad, together with four other cities (Odessa, Kiev, Sebastopol and Volgograd) received the title "Heroic City."

So beloved is this city that immediately following the war, its people set about the enormous task of restoration. During my tours on an Air Canada flight, I did not see one trace if the terrible destruction.

★ ★ ★

The hotel to which I was assigned, the Astoria, is located in the heart of the city. My room was attractive, comfortable, with all modern service for breakfast, promptly served at no extra charge. The food in the main dining room was good but here, as in Moscow, service was slow. In addition to the main restaurant (seating 350) there is a cafe, a cafeteria and a bar.

★ ★ ★

The windows over look the square with its majestic St. Isaac Cathedral. A panoramic view of the city can be seen from the top of the dome (made of beaten gold) open to the public. The Cathedral was designed by A. Monferrand, a French architect, in the 19th century in the Imperial Russian style. As many as 15,000 people can attend services at one time. It took 460,000 serfs 90 years to build.

During my stay in Leningrad the annual fur auction took place. I met interesting people from Canada, U.S., England and many other countries, here to attend the auction.

Nearby the Astoria Hotel is the magnificent Hermitage, one of the world's greatest museums and in itself well worth a visit to the U.S.S.R.

It is housed in the former Winter Palace and is an enormous group of buildings occupying an area of more than 2,500 square yards. It is the lagrest museum in the Soviet Union and ranks as one of the world's most outstanding.

ARE YOU FIT TO DRIVE?

Temper Traffic Risk

LONDON — Bad temper in automobile drivers is the main cause of the lack of concentration that often leads to accidents, according to a doctor who has made motoring his special study.

Dr. Keith E. Jolles, author of a booklet, "Are You Fit to Drive?" says this may arise from a heated argument with a passenger, from rage goaded by the antics of another driver, or from whether the driver's wife sent him off with a loving kiss or not. The man with a marriage problem on his mind can constitute a grave traffic risk, he added.

The booklet lists statistics on accidents, such as the average accident happens when a car is traveling below 30 miles an hour, and occurs within 10 miles of home.

Tropical Animals Thrive in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — At one time a wold-game safari took time in planning an extensive voyage and above all, courage.

Today it takes only the time in deciding, an hour's drive from Toronto and no courage at all.

Situated just 60 miles west of Toronto near Rockton, Ont., is the African Lion Safari and Game Farm, featuring 52 lions and 60 East African baboons, just two of the species not native to south-western Ontario dwelling on the 450-acre site.

Opened last August, the park has already been visited by more than 300,000 persons.

A partnership between a native of Winnipeg, Col. Don Dailley, and Jimmy Chipperfield of England resulted in the establishment of this unique farm.

The main goal of the originators was to show an exhibition of wild animals in an environment close to their natural state.

Visitors are warned at several points to keep their car windows rolled up during their trip through the lion and baboon enclosure.

Col. Dailley says lions "have been known to pull people out of their cars" or swipe at them through open windows. This is particularly true of a lioness with cubs.

No accidents have occurred on this farm as yet.

He said farm officials don't mind windows rolled down "a few inches in open areas," but "we can't allow them to wave their arms out of their windows — they're liable to lose them." Apparently the king of beasts is exactly that. As. Col. Dailley says, he is "not afraid of anything or anybody."

All wardens are equipped with necessary weapons to combat the wild animals and other extensive precautions are taken to ensure the safety of all visitors.

Beef heads and still-born calves are fed to the cats, treated with the necessary vitamin supplement to promote correct bone growth. Adult lions eat an average of 10 to 12 pounds of meat daily.

One day a week is set aside as a "fast day" when the cats are fed nothing. This starvation period adjusts for the irregular eating habits in their natural state.

KIDS MAKE CONTACT

Part of a lake system to be expanded as a "water safari" trip, one pond is the home of seven dipping and diving sea lions. In the middle of the pond, a small island is the home of two Malaysian gibbons.

Long-armed and long-legged, Fred and Roopy, as they are called, swing along the rope strung between two trees or clamber over the roof of their house.

A pet corner has been set up on the farm enabling children to view at close quarters wallabies, peacocks, four lion cubs, two sea lions and three king penguins. Additions are planned.

Next year an elephant is expected at the farm to provide rides for children, and another attraction, a scenic railway, is planned.

Vietnamese Girls Popular as Brides

By GLORIA EMERSON

SAIGON, South Vietnam (NYT) — "Hey, honey, what is your name?" The 22-year-old lieutenant asked his Vietnamese fiancee at the United States Consulate here, where they were applying for a marriage affidavit.

The girl giggled. In wiggly letters she carefully wrote her name: Nguyen Thie Le. The lieutenant, looking surprised, tried to pronounce it but gave up.

"You're still Lee to me, honey," he said. The couple fell silent as they went on filling out forms.

It was not an unusual conversation in the crowded waiting room of the consulate, where an increasing number of Americans, military men and civilians, are applying for the papers needed to marry South Vietnamese.

* * *

Since Americans can be legally married only in a Vietnamese civil ceremony, they must apply at the consulate for the papers that Vietnamese officials require of foreigners. Servicemen must have military permission — a process most of them find too long and confusing.

The consulate also handles applications for immigrant visas of the Vietnamese fiancees or wives of Americans, normally a routine procedure. It is vastly complicated, however, because of the requirements of the Vietnamese ministry of the interior, which must issue a passport and an exit permit before a U.S. visa can be granted.

Analysis of the available information on American-Vietnamese marriage does not yield what would appear to be a typical case history.

Specialist Frederick Black, a 23-year-old native of Stockton, Calif., hopes to marry 20-year-old Nguyen Thie Thieu, whom he met seven months ago in a U.S. Army supply depot in Danang, where he drives a truck and she works as a clerk-typist. She had not been outside her home town until the couple came to Saigon to begin filing their papers. She lives with her oldest brother and her mother, who is a 69-year-old laborer.

The soldier, who hopes to become a highway patrolman after his discharge in November, has tried to explain to his fiancee that most Americans wear shoes and that there are indoor toilets and kitchens and big buildings. She has no idea of her new life.

* * *

He has not met her family. Miss Thieu, speaking in Vietnamese, which her fiancee does not understand, said that she had asked her mother and brother for permission to marry, but they refused it and she is afraid to admit her intentions.

"Marrying an American and going away is better than staying home and marrying a Vietnamese," she said. "Excuse me, but I hate Vietnamese boys very much. They are lazy and most of them spend money like princes. They steal money from their mothers to spend on girls and on drinking. Even when they are married, they are not faithful to their wives."

Car Runs Over Driver —Twice

PORTLAND (AP) — Thomas L. McFall was run over twice—by his empty car—before state police stopped the auto by firing four shots into it.

McFall's car sideswiped a truck and went out of control.

McFall and a passenger were thrown out. They began running when the car approached them after its front wheels jammed in a tight turn and its accelerator stuck.

Police fired four rifle shots into the car. One of the bullets hit a tire and the car ran into a telephone pole and the engine died.

Sea Travel.
For people who thought they couldn't afford it.

"I wish I'd made my husband take a cruise with me while he was still alive. He might still be alive now. He never took a vacation in his whole life.

We don't wish to cause alarm.

But it has come to our attention that a whole generation of Canadians may miss out on one of life's great experiences — sea travel — simply because they think sea travel is only for the very rich.

Rubbish.

Once you have studied our prices, and what they include, you may conclude that the very rich stay that way because of sea travel.

Where else can one live so well with a minimum of worldly irritations?

Once you come aboard a P&O ship, you hardly need any money at all.

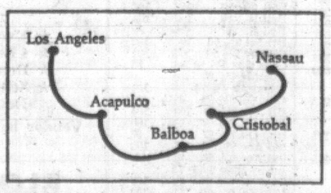
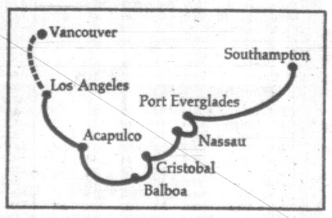
In fact, with the world and its prices being what they are today, it may no longer be prudent to stay ashore.



The Caribbean. $278
10 days aboard the S.S. Oriana sailing from Los Angeles October 15. Stop at Acapulco, sail through the Panama Canal and across the Caribbean to Nassau, arriving October 24.



West Coast to Europe. $468
16 days of relaxation. The S.S. Oriana leaves Los Angeles October 15, sailing south to Acapulco, through the Panama Canal to sunny Nassau and Port Everglades, across the Atlantic to Southampton arriving November 1. (The price even includes airfare from Vancouver to Los Angeles.)

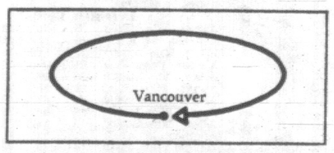
For under $20 a day (which even includes most shore excursions) you can visit San Francisco, Los Angeles, Honolulu, the Fiji Islands, Auckland, Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Fremantle, Durban, Cape Town, the Canary Islands, Casablanca, Lisbon, Southampton; Bermuda, Port Everglades, Nassau, and Jamaica in the Caribbean; then through the Panama Canal to Acapulco, Los Angeles, arriving in San Francisco May 19. (P&O will fly you to Vancouver the same day for no extra charge.) Ask about our optional 23-day Morocco-Spain-Portugal land tour of 17-day tour of England, France, Denmark, Sweden and Norway.



Around the World. $1457
86 days. Sail March 5 from Vancouver on the S.S. Oriana and sail south to San Francisco and Los Angeles; then to Acapulco, through the Panama Canal to sunny Nassau, Port Everglades and Bermuda. Cross the Atlantic to Lisbon, Cherbourg and arrive in Southampton on March 29. (Optional land tours are available in Europe at extra cost.) Sail for the Canary Islands and Cape Town; on April 15 around the Cape of Good Hope to Durban. Then cruise Down Under to Fremantle, Melbourne, Sydney; over to Auckland and north to Suva. Sail across the Equator (again!) to Honolulu then east to Vancouver, arriving May 29. All this for under $20 a day.

Sharp Contrast In Performances

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets moved upward this week, despite an absence of optimistic news or economic developments.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, the broadest indicator of share prices, was up .89 to 163.06 at the end of the five-day trading period.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up .87 to 161.62.

Performance on Canada markets contrasted with price activity on Wall Street. At the New York Stock Exchange, the Dow-Jones industrial average of key rail and transportation issues dropped 2.35 points to 758.49.

Main reason for the weakness on Wall Street, analysts said, was the United Auto Workers' strike against General Motors Corp. which acted as a catalyst to bring together other negative factors influencing prices.

Canadian markets moved higher on three of the five trading sessions.

Observers suggested that domestic stock prices were not affected by as many of the negative influences which plagued Wall Street.

In addition, oil index advanced 5.04 points to 183.73. The index was unchanged at the end of four days of trading but made a sharp advance of more than five points on Friday.

Biggest movers during the week included the three major auto manufacturing stocks.

Denison Mines 'Shocked' by Uranium Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — The manager of Gulf Minerals Co. of Toronto said Friday an announcement by Energy Minister J. J. Greene clearing the way for his company to sell uranium holdings to foreign interests came as no surprise.

"It simply confirms our November, 1969, deal," N. M. Ediger said.

In a statement released at Ottawa Friday, Mr. Greene said four foreign-owned companies —Gulf Brinex Ltd., Consolidated Canadian Faraday Corp. and Kerr-McGee Canada—can go ahead with a transfer of interests in Canadian uranium properties to foreign owners.

A spokesman for Denison Mines Ltd. of Toronto, which also has plans to sell uranium property but was not named, said Denison was "shocked."

Mr. Greene said he made the announcement to clarify the position of the four companies, which were awaiting promised government regulations on foreign ownership of uranium resources.

STARTED EARLY

The four began negotiations for transfers before restrictions were imposed on major transactions by a government policy statement March 2.

Mr. Greene said the forthcoming legislation has not been cast in its final form but will incorporate rules proclaimed in March that no more than one-third of uranium-producing property should be foreign owned.

The ownership issue came to a head early this year when Denison announced plans to sell controlling interest in its Elliot Lake, Ont., uranium property to Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co., a U.S.-controlled firm.

The sale was blocked by the March policy statement.

Stephen Roman, Denison president, said Friday he would not comment before reading the government statement, but a spokesman for Denison said: "We are shocked."

He said the minister appeared to be making different sets of rules for foreign and domestic companies.

Mr. Roman told a shareholders' meeting earlier Friday they should write to the government to protest the blocked sale.

The foreign ownership regulations "clearly only apply to Denison," considering the fact that the government has allowed Gulf to enlist West German participation, he said.

Spokesmen for the other three companies named in Mr. Greene's announcement could not be reached for comment Friday.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Advance Rulings Significant Reform

According to a press report released in Ottawa on Monday, the department of national revenue is about to introduce an advance tax ruling system. Depending on its mechanics, it can be one of the most significant and welcome tax reforms ever introduced in Canada, equal in impact to many of the major changes proposed in the tax reform white paper.

At the present, when one embarks on a commercial venture or reorganizes his affairs there is no way in which he can know with certainty how the tax law will treat him. He can consult his professional advisers but because the law is so complex, each case depends upon its own peculiar circumstances so that the advice he gets is usually vague and noncommital.

CAN PROVE COSTLY

The tax cost of guessing wrong can be overwhelming. Indeed, there are many cases where a taxpayer completed a transaction in the belief that it provokes no tax, only to find that the government's view is the reverse and years of tax litigation follow. Often the taxpayer would not have engaged in the transaction at all had he known in advance the tax department's attitude.

In recent years, the need for an advance ruling system has been heightened. Because of the uncertainties of the tax implications of certain kinds of business transactions and the overwhelming and often crippling effect of making a tax judgment error, many normal business transactions have been stymied. The tax law provides the revenue department with many discretions as to whether or not to levy taxes in given cases. The department has generally refused to disclose in advance how it will exercise that discretion. You do your deal and take your chances.

It now appears this highly unreasonable situation may be remedied. The government proposes that taxpayers will be entitled to apply for and obtain a ruling as to the tax consequences of a proposed transaction before they embark upon it. The ruling will be given in writing and be binding upon the government.

WITH EYES OPEN

That doesn't mean that if the tax officials give an interpretation of the tax law which the taxpayers believes is incorrect that the taxpayer is bound by it. All it does is tell him that if he goes ahead, he will have a legal dispute with the revenue department. In all likelihood, those cases will still go to court but the taxpayer will at least be proceeding with his eyes open.

Apparently the revenue department intends to charge the taxpayer a fee for the advance ruling service. The minimum fee is to be $150 and presumably much higher in complicated cases. This is quite unnecessary and detracts from the quality of this major and enlightened reform.

The government makes the law and no citizen should ever be required to pay a fee to his government for the pleasure of being told how that law affects him. If the law is so vague or complex that its meaning and interpretation is ambiguous then clearly it should be the obligation of the state, and not at the cost of the individual to freely and openly advise the public as to its rights and obligations under the law.

AGAINST TRENDS

Indeed, the concept of charging a fee for access to justice is against all trends. This feature of the new system should be withdrawn.

The proposal doesn't spell out the very important mechanics of the plan, and many important questions remain unanswered. Who will make the advance tax rulings, a group of revenue officers whose enthusiasm for collecting more revenue has been known to influence their interpretation of the law, or will government show wisdom by establisishing an independent board composed of legal, economic and accounting authorities who give an objective interpretation of the law regardless of whether it results in more or less revenue for the crown?

It is also to be hoped that the system will permit a taxpayer to appeal to the tax courts for a final interpretation of the law when he receives an advance ruling with which he disagrees. This is the practice followed in the United States where an advance tax ruling plan has been in force for a long time.

BEST SERVED

Also, justice will be best served if all advance rulings across the country be made by the same board so that the rulings in Victoria don't differ from those in Halifax. A great deal of time will be saved and duplication avoided if the government publishes all rulings it makes and discloses the facts of each case, giving anonymity to the taxpayer so that his affairs may remain private.

This new law should provide that all advance rulings as published will be binding on the government not only as regards the particular case on which it has ruled, but also on all other situations which are considered subsequently if the facts and circumstances are similar. That will avoid the necessity of the government having to make rulings in every case.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

Sask. Gets Tough On Rates Problem

REGINA (CP) — Mineral Resources Minister A. C. Cameron said a fourth meeting of potash and railway company and Saskatchewan government officials on trimming potash freight rates has been set for October.

He said that if the railways don't bring about substantial reductions in freight rates, the province will proclaim legislation passed in the spring, boosting mineral taxes sharply on railway-owned property.

Government and company representatives have met three times in the last four months on the problem and Cameron said, "the time for study has passed."

Ford Announces Price Increase

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has announced an average $153 price increase in the manufacturer's suggested retail price of its 1971-model automobiles.

On most cars where prices were raised, the increase amounted to five per cent. Ford cut the Mustang Mach I by 1.5 per cent and raised the Torino GT by one per cent and the Torino Cobra by 0.8 per cent, making the average increase for all lines 4.6 per cent.

Ford raised prices an average of $108 last year, bringing the two-year increase to an average $261.

What happens if you ask your son, your brother-in-law, or your next door neighbour to be your executor?

Carrying out your wishes under your Will is the culmination of your life's work, ambitions, frustrations, and achievements.

Too often we've seen the problems of having relatives, friends, and business associates act as executors. For example, being brutal but realistic, chances are one or two of them are your own age so you can't count on continuity of the executorship (as you could with a corporate executor). Again, relatives tend to be too close to the situation — it's difficult (even embarrassing) to be completely objective. Finally, estate taxation is a very complicated subject for someone not completely familiar with ever changing taxation situations in major countries.

We suggest you name us your executor. The foundation of our business is, and always has been, handling estates. You're assured of continuity and objectivity. We have the special knowledge and expertise in investment management and taxation you need. And we have offices right across Canada and overseas, so your wife and other beneficiaries can establish themselves comfortably and without worry wherever they please.

If, on the other hand, having a large corporation looking after your family affairs seems a little too impersonal, remember, we at Royal Trust have wives and children, too.

CANADIANS NOT DULL AFTER ALL

Zesty History of Our Great Adventure

By JACK SCOTT

Perhaps the secret to the awesome versatility of Pierre Berton is simply the natural-born, journalistic gift of recognizing, cherishing and telling a good story.

That surprisingly rare talent, at various times ornamenting Canadian newspapers, magazines, books, film, radio, television, lecture platforms and any party that will hold still for the acrobatic Berton recitation of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," is now displayed in its finest showcase since his award-winning "Klondike."

In "The Great Railway, 1871-1881," first of a two-volume history of the building of the Canadian Pacific under the title "The National Dream," Berton has a cracking good story of heroic, epic proportions that he tells with all the stops open. It is a virtuoso performance.

— Purists may object that the Berton version of this tumultuous decade of nearly a century ago that cinched an infant and empty nation in steel is more flamboyant melodrama than cool, objective history.

Certainly the risks of zestful, dramatic story-telling, as opposed to mere analytical, bloodless re-appraisal, faced the author from the outset.

Berton's own account of his motivation — to prove that Canadians are not nearly as dull as they traditionally believe, to prove that Canadians have a past to be proud of, to recapture the vision of bold, magnificent men that profoundly changed a nation's course — demonstrates the inherent perils of making history read like a cliff-hanging novel.

All too often the reader of this massive first volume will find himself reflecting that pride in that segment of the Canadian past or those larger-than-life characters who peopled it must be tempered with a certain amount of shame and outrage.

As a record of the political and business morality of young Canada it documents a shabby heritage of scandal, corruption, bribery, chicanery, double-dealing, sell-outs, pay-offs, corporate fraud and assorted other forms of larceny and banditry.

The wonder, perhaps, is not that a tiny nation of fewer than four million population could build the world's longest and costliest railway across a barren, empty land, but that the nation could survive at all the machinations of so many unscrupulous, arrogant, intriguing rogues.

Berton, wisely, does not allow this seamy aspect of Canadian history to divert the grand sweep of the whole incredible adventure, but it is all there in impeccable detail. Indeed, he has gone to many an original source to dramatize the human foibles, failings and treachery that, at times, made the national dream seem more of a national disgrace.

Now, to the previously well-documented record of Sir John A. Macdonald's tarnished image in the so-called Pacific Scandal, Berton adds the fulsome, hitherto-unpublished evidence of Alexander Mackenzie's part in the sordid political payoffs of contracts to great and good friends. It was a fact never referred to by the Liberal prime minister's biographer, if veracity in historical reporting is to be considered.

In Berton's longer perspective the swindle system that prevailed takes second place to the more significant themes of American efforts, and subsequent failure, to build the line by subterfuge and establish U.S. control over the Canadian west and the role of British Columbia — a little bit of classic blackmail, in itself — in making that steel road to Pacific tidewater a reality.

There is, too, the story of the first Canadian Pacific survey, the search for the eventual pass through the Rockies, that gives an inkling of the saga to come in Berton's second volume, "The Last Spike," scheduled for publication next year.

These chapters on the truly heroic men against the wilderness, far from the wheeler-dealers of Ottawa, show Berton at his best in the frontier element that made "Klondike" such a memorable book.

Here, too, he and his research assistant, Norman Kelly, have somehow found a treasure of original sources of previously undiscovered episodes and giants. Notably, he adds to the gallery of unforgettable Canadian characters the name of Marcus Smith, a hard-drinking, hard-driving surveyor who would surely make a book in himself.

Smith, the most obdurate proponent of a terminus at Esquimalt, by way of the Yellow Head Pass to Bute Inlet, is just one of the extraordinary men who figure in Berton's detailed account of British Columbia's fractious, secessionist role in this absorbing story.

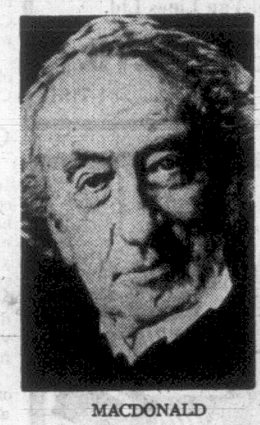
BERTON

What began in 1971 with Sir John A's promise of a trans-continental railway in return for B.C.'s entry into Confederation — an act of "insane recklessness," as it was seen by his Liberal opponents — was fully as divisive in the west as it was nationally.

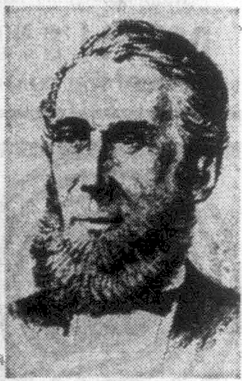
The "terminus war" between Vancouver Island and the mainland was to go on until 1880 if, indeed, it ever quite ended.

The dream of Victoria that the railway would leap Seymour Narrows from the mainland, by causeway or steamship, proceed down the east coast of the island and transform a village of 5,000 population into a great Pacific port rivalling San Francisco, died hard, if for no other reason than the fact that Victorians had speculated wildly in property for just such an eventuality.

Lord Dufferin, the Governor-General, on visiting the battle-grounds, was to confide to his diary that "the common preoccupation of every Columbian citizen" was "in some ... way to put money into his pocket." It seems to have been the national obsession.



MACDONALD



MACKENZIE

It's a measure of Berton's way with a story that these tangled affairs seldom intrude on the impetus of his narrative.

His sharp eye for descriptive detail is as keen as it was in "Klondike." It is not enough simply to record that Parliament, meeting for the final act in the Pacific Scandal that brought about Macdonald's resignation, opened on a raw, wet Thursday in October, but that "Millards, on Sparks Street, was enthusiastically advertising "thick-soled, water-defying, slush-repelling, damp-excluding, snow-dispelling, cold-defying, heat-contracting boots.' "

This you-are-there kind of historical reportage, in Berton's case, means a melodramatic writing style that perfectly evokes the period. Thus, in describing Dufferin: "The noble figure in the carriage, acknowledging the cheers that engulfed him, had just turned fifty and was still devilishly handsome. Such was his profile that, save for the short, dark beard on his chin, he might have posed in a later era, for an Arrow collar ad . . ."

For better than 400 pages that is the way it goes, an important and significant part of our background, but, more than that, an enduring example of how a story should be told.

The culmination of it all: the last spike

LOST IN WOODS OF OLD TORONTO

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

In "Little York" back in 1810, the living was easy — at least for upper Canadians. Ominous details appear, though, in this account of life in the 17-year-old town that was to be Toronto.

Rumors of an Indian uprising were only 12 years in the past, yet pioneer attitudes were already dying; the pioneers showed a disquieting interest in how they were governed.

The new province's bureaucracy and its masters, guardians of English class-structure and life styles, were shored up only by a 250-man garrison; unsympathetic U.S. immigrants were everywhere.

Business was bad; with threats of a U.S. invasion and reports of far-off French victories over the Mother Country, who could be surprised? Certainly not 600 independent souls (and two dozen slaves) around a strategically important harbor.

These are scattered plums in a stodgy pudding. Subjects with other delights range from architecture — the author's profession — to taste in clothes and reading material. Their organization under 34 headings is designed "to avoid a wearisome narrative," but the technique leads to wearisome repetition and feelings of lost-in-the-woods panic.

Mr. Hounsom has a depressing style. He is given to ponderous phrases redolent of a bygone era. Pages are junglishly lush with commas, many of them unnecessary, and some of them, grammatically, absurd.

Still, the subject is interesting and intentions were honorable. The facts have been drawn together with care; they should help someone else to do a similar job much better.

Eastern Front Reopened For the Armchair Warrior

By TORCHY ANDERSON

A devoted armchair warrior, one of those buffs who likes to clutter the living room carpet with armies, corps, divisions, artillery, tanks and what not should have fun with this book.

In its 500 well illustrated pages he will find the detailed history of the Russian-German war after Stalingrad. And there are enough maps and diagrams to keep him moving his troops with after-sight not granted to Stalin and Hitler.

SCORCHED EARTH, by Paul Carell. Little, Brown. $15.

This volume follows Paul Carell's Hitler Moves East, which concluded with Stalingrad. Most of us think of the Russian victory at Stalingrad as the definite turning-point in this struggle that broke all records in men, machines, blood and guts.

Not so, says Carell.

The real turning-point was the battle of Kursk, touched off by Hitler's often postponed operation Citidal. The sketch map of the front from the Gulf of Finland to the Sea of Azov shows the Kursk salient about 300 miles south and slightly east of Moscow.

* * *

It is not a book for casual reading. The man who can and will follow the great strategic movements of millions of men as a result of the "inspiration" of Hitler and Stalin—sometimes pretty blind and crazy inspiration—will, no doubt, find it fascinating. The ordinary reader will welcome the occasional human touch. These must have been snatched from countless personal accounts available to the author.

The personalities of some of the leading generals on both sides are lighted up by anecdotes. Even a few of the ordinary joes who take orders emerge momentarily in a nightmare of destruction and slaughter.

* * *

Carell brings home the importance of spies on both sides. Apparently the Russians had a pipe-line into the Nazi holy-of-holies.

He says that most of the leading spies have been identified. But not Werther, cover name for a man, or woman, who had the inside track with the OKW—highest German command. Werther made one bad mistake but he made up for it with his complete, detailed information on Hitler's Citadal operation.

Carell wonders: who was Werther? Is he alive today living on his loot?

It is your guess.

He's Been Bypassed by 'Absurd' Generation

By PETER McNELLY

My first contact with Paul Goodman's writing was electric.

Late in 1963 after the horror of Jack Kennedy's assassination had begun to recede into a memory which could not wholly be reconstructed by glancing at the newspaper photograph of his widow I had taped above my desk, I found myself a thoroughly unhappy college freshman.

Little seemed important then, and I wandered dully through the library, shelving books while memorizing Randall Jarrell's poems.

A friend, whose sense of humor bordered on the bizarre, suggested that Goodman's Growing Up Absurd might cheer me up. I read it immediately.

Its impact was formidable. Infused with his righteous anger and swayed by his commonsense humanity, I opted for the most radical application of his arguments and dropped out of school.

Eventually I returned to school and read more Goodman. Each time the effect was the same. The man was right. Pure and simple. His works read like a scholar's mantra, the message turning itself over and over in a repetition freshened by a kaleidoscopic meld of information.

His latest book, New Reformation: Notes of a Neolithic Conservative, does not, sadly, produce the same wonderful effect.

Where his themes in Growing Up Absurd, Compulsory Mis-education, The Community of Scholars and the essay Drawing the Line once carried a persistent persuasiveness, they now seem merely familiar. Shopworn.

THE NEW REFORMATION, by Paul Goodman. Random House. $6.95.

Part of the problem is his prose. There's too much of it. If he'd only shut up and get to the point. The first three chapters of New Reformation are out of place. He should have begun the book on page 47 where chapter four starts to outline his critique of young people. That's what New Reformation is all about.

When Goodman does tackle his argument, he is again challenging. But much of what follows from page 47 is also buried in a dubiously seasoned word salad.

If you wade through the words to abstract the argument, here's what you get:

Today's young people—those who haven't been brainwashed by school and advertising—are personally and structurally alienated from the real society of the adult world. Knowing little of how that world actually operates but saturated with a moral understanding of its moral, human and ecological failures, young people strike out against society in destructive, haphazard fashion.

Lacking real knowledge of power, history, economics and literature, their morality lacks the courage to effect genuine change. The result is moral chauvinism, bigotry and chaos.

"I have learned, to my disgust, that the reason why young people don't trust people over 30 is that they don't understand them and are afraid to try. Having grown up in a world too meaningless to them for them to learn anyting, they know very little and are quick to resent it. Their resentment is understandable; what is disgusting is their lack of moral courage."

Goodman is understandably depressed that the generation he did so much to arouse now scorns him, or worse, no longer knows he exists.

But Goodman is a classical critic. He never damns without praising what he can or without suggesting alternatives. Consequently, he sees the tribal behavior of young people as the beginnings of a new religion. And he says many political young people are learning the importance of community co-operation from a necessity generated by harassment.

He's pessimistic, though, because society may have passed the point where it can improve itself through reform. As always, Goodman offers any number of ways to redistribute power, reform the economy and overhaul the schools—a change which he'd enact by junking most of them.

Academic degrees no longer represent real achievement, but society honors them as job tickets. Therefore, says Goodman, society is being molded into its academic image of itself. In other words, society has bought the jargon of the bureaucratic academy.

If this is true, Goodman's whole attack on young people collapses. For, contrary to his assertion that schools teach nothing, their processing itself becomes significant knowledge.

Schools may not transmit a sense of history and love of literature any more, and they may not prepare for a career by teaching real skills. But they do teach the young what the rules are. Even the dumbest kid learns that lesson.

GOODMAN

Goodman returns in New Reformation to his old themes of education by example, distribution of small powers over a wide area and the reaffirmation of the human personality as a prelude to social order. He is depressed that society continues to centralize production and social control. He is angry that the young have failed to take up his cause.

He is crying in the wilderness between equally unacceptable opposites. New Reformation is the voice of a man who has been beaten by history.

A Gentle Tale Of Lonely Fate

By BEATRICE CARROLL

"I will not know the harvest of this spring's sowing;

A sickle slices and my work is done.

I entrust to other hands the reaping and the mowing."

These lines, written by the author, set the theme for this first novel; the story of the last few months in the life of a dying woman, spent in a West Coast setting.

In the form of a journal, Jane Darrow, nearing middle age, looks back over the uneventful life, and with little fear and no morbidity wonders about the future, and what it will be like to exist no longer.

The time is short, as the doctor who diagnosed her incurable disease has told her, so she discards with no regret her teaching job and her sterile city life and goes to live in a tumbledown, weather-beaten shack on the coast near Sechelt.

Her only neighbors — and often only on weekends—are her doctor and his wife who have taken an interest in her, and who slowly become friends, among the first she has ever had.

Here Jane spends her last days — often alone, swimming in the icy water, exploring between the tides and on the shore, writing in her journal; and sometimes with Val, the doctor's wife, who is putting away the past too, and relinquishing her lover.

Days go on in formless pattern until the sudden arrival of Steve, the young, half-Indian drifter and his dog Buff, returning to the old shack which has sheltered him and his migratory friends many times in the past. Life for Jane takes on a new and different dimension with the stranger Steve, who becomes companion, friend, lover perhaps, yet remains always unknown. All they can share is their common humanity.

It has been said by a great Russian writer that man is a pliable animal, who gets accustomed to everything. He was referring to prison life in Siberia — a far cry from Jane Darrow's west coast shack by the sea, although she too is a prisoner of her impending fate. Is she too submissive, too acquiescent?

Can anyone have lived to nearly middle years and have had so little — an unhappy home and wretched parents, a dull adolescence and a duller maturity? It is difficult to imagine Jane going through even a comparatively short life so unenriched and unencumbered until a chance and brief meeting with a young Indian lad lights her last days.

The story moves along gently, with no protest and little anguish. Perhaps the central character is pathetic rather than poignant, and certain situations have a curious quality of unreality. However, this is a first novel, and Miss Brandis has written a sensitive tale that holds the reader's interest, even though he is not much moved. And in her poetic portrayals of sun and storm, the sea and the natural magnificence of the West Coast Miss Brandis excels.

Steiger: 'I've Tried Not To Play Safe as Actor'

By STACY HADDY
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Rod Steiger was packing for a jumbo-jet to New York. "It's ironic, transportation is bringing us more together than thousands of idealists ever have."

He paces to and fro in a black kimono, talking in the rapid, flat staccato that confirms all one's preconceptions of the "method"; it's hard to distinguish the man from the method.

"Transportation has made the world too small for nationalism and rival religions. We're all citizens of the world, brothers and sisters under the skin, not because of idealism, but because jumbo-jets are going to take us all over by the thousand."

Back from filming "Napoleon" in Russia, he was going to New York to sell his large appartment there, while his small one here is being fixed. "Black drapes . . ." he tells someone over the phone ". . . I want a cave." He turns back.

"I'm trying to get rid of things, I'll try to keep my material things down to a minimum so I can have more artistic freedom — so I can have more time not to be employed. It comes down to basic things: to win your battle in this society you've got to have your cave. Then food. Then some kind of mate.

"After that, everything's a luxury. For the artist, the less you own, the less the danger of working for wall-to-wall carpeting. I'm a little tense right now because I haven't worked in five months. Because I haven't found anything I want to do.

"All the scripts are such junk. If time goes on, I'll have to take something I half like, which is like sleeping with someone you half like. It's never satisfactory, though I guess half the world lives like that.

"As an actor I've tried not to play safe. I've played in some terrible movies, but I've tried to ask: was the idea intelligent? Was the effort honest? Like 'The Sergeant.' The idea was good, the attempt was fair, though it didn't come off. I try not to insult the audience. I try not to cheat them of their money.

Steiger knows what it is to be out of work, not at the beginning of his career, when he went from steady television straight to the acclaim of Kazan's "On the Waterfront" but — such is the caprice of success — after the "Pawnbroker" and "Dr. Zhivago" (1964).

He was out of work for nearly two years until "In the Heat of the Night" (1967) finally won him an Oscar.

But as he says, in that staccato axiomatic way: "there's no such thing as success. Only renewed arrival." He carries about a big note book and refers to it to amplify his philosophy. It contains his own writings. "Some of the world's great undiscovered poetry is in that journal. I think it should remain so."

Although his outstanding successes have been in films of clear social message, he is slightly hesitant over commitment. He is afraid of "filmed lectures," and yet feels that it is crucial for an actor to have a sense of belonging in the society he lives in.

He doesn't think there's much to say about acting except, if it's going well, leave it alone. "You're a human being first, an actor second." He talks in a personal way. He refers constantly to his daughter, who's eight, and his broken marriage to Claire Bloom.

It's obviously bitter and bewildering. "You change from day to day, one day you get up a champion, next day you get up a louse. It depends on who helped you come back alive the night before. I believe a woman gives a man back his strength and vice versa. If you have a good night, you wake, get up next morning like a king . . . even if it doesn't last. I think these are things that men and women should know.

"I don't know what I'm talking about most of the time, but I know it's important to keep talking. And keep alive. The only way to keep alive is to maintain curiosity. I see this peculiar resigned fatigue in people round me. They're middle aged. I'm 45. I guess I'm that horrible term too.

"I've got to fight that resigned fatigue. It starts a chain of destruction. It starts the minute you say 'That's the game, baby, and that's how it's played.' The minute you play what they call the game, you begin to calcify."

Sir Alec Carries the Ball In a Darkhorse Tryout

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

GUILDFORD, Surrey, England — Having seen Alec Guinness on the screen, for so many years in so many roles, it seemed strange to be sitting about 25 feet from him in the front stalls of a live neighborhood theatre.

Almost like looking over your garden fence at the all-too-familiar face of the man next door. And, wearing the plain brown coveralls of a laboratory assistant, Sir Alec could well have been the man next door raking up September leaves.

GUINNESS

Actually, this was a stage try-out in Guildord's prized local playhouse — about the size of the McPherson in Victoria, but rather more austere. Sir Alec, with a small but talented cast, was testing a new play entitled Time Out Of Mind for possible production in one of London's top West End theatres.

★ ★ ★

Guildford is an old Roman town, 30 miles from the heart of London. Many of its residents are big businessmen who travel to the city four and five days a week. Many more are retired tycoons and a considerable number are creative people engaged in various forms of art.

So Guildford provides a fairly critical audience, and if Guildford likes a play, it could well have a promising future. Having persuaded Sir Alec to take the leading role in an unknown play, playwright Bridget Boland and her sponsors had got off to a good start.

Certainly the local audience was responsive and the many arguments heard in the licensed (yes licensed) bar of the neighborhood theatre between the three acts suggested the play was controversial enough to be interesting.

The main objection seemed to be that Miss Boland — a comparative newcomer to playwriting — had mixed fantasy and reality to a rather confusing degree.

★ ★ ★

In Time Out Of Mind, Sir Alec is a kind of lost soul (after the fashion of The Wandering Jew) who turns up in a British government research establishment as a wise, world-weary but very courteous laboratory assistant.

It transpires that, in the 14th century, he was assistant to an alchemist who discoevered the elixir of life. So, for 500 years, he has been immune to death or injury.

The play uses this situation to comment on the relationship between political power and scientific invention. At one point, after his sanity has been called into question by bureaucratic officials, the laboratory assistant comments on the defoliation of vast areas of forest in Vietnam and on the pollution of water supplies with substances likely to produce deformity in children yet to be born.

The irony bites deep.

This is without question a thoughtful play, but whether it would have registered so well without Sir Alec's expressive, authoritiive acting is a debatable point. I don't think he could be uninteresting if he tried and, with his finely-modulated voice and technical accomplishment, he makes much of many sensitive passages in Miss Boland's new play.

★ ★ ★

There were some good supporting performances by London professionals, but Sir Alec's philosophical speeches were largely substituted for dialogue and he was on stage fully three-quarters of the time.

My guess is that Time Out Of Mind will be produced later in London's West End and other parts of Britain and could conceivably finish up as a movie. But, along the way, it will be well worked over by the brutal British critics; — perhaps to its benefit.

Back to Little Caesar

TORONTO — People who find today's movies lacking in the richness and vitality of films from the past are becoming increasingly captivated by films from the early 20th century.

Films such as Little Caesar, The Mask of Fu Manchu, Foreign Correspondent and Philadelphia Story continue to hold fascination, both for those who saw them the first time around and for a new generation of movie-goers.

A number of showcases for these fine old films have sprung up around Toronto: The Silent Cinema, Cinematheque and the Ontario Film Theatre in the Ontario Science Centre.

Ron Anger, president of the Toronto Film Society, which has shown the best of the movies for 22 years, puts it down to a general movie famine:

●

"There is a tremendous interest on the part of young people in films today and most commercial theatres just show whatever is coming off the production line. A lot of recent movies are difficult to follow or boring."

The society tries to cover a bit of everything with series ranging from musicals such as Star Spangled Rhythm with Sonja Henie to foreign movies that would not otherwise be available.

Independent enthusiasts have started their own programs. Cinematheque, which shows Hollywood movies of the '30s and '40, was started by three students.

And the Silent Cinema, which opend its doors last September, finds that people are lining up to see Douglas Fairbanks Sr., John Barrymore and W. C. Fields.

Cinema Lumiere is devoted to movies of more recent vintage but not regularly available in a commercial way—Fellini's 8½, Resnais' Je T'Aime, Je T'Aime.

Most old movies are not available commercially and must be obtained through film libraries such as the Canadian Film Archives and the Museum of Modern Art in New York. Film clubs and archives have developed an international network of exchanging and preserving films that would otherwise be lost.

Hollywood studios used to dispose of old films in the garbage. And many that were stored in basements disintegrated or burned by spontaneous combustion. This happened to an extensive collection of the National Film Board.

'Spend Holidays In Canada'

TORONTO (CP) — Quebec's tourism minister said Friday Canadians should spend their vacations more often in Canada instead of leaving the country.

Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, speaking at a dinner to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Toronto Business and Professional Women's Club, said Canadians are among the world's most-travelled people.

"They spend more money outside the country than is drawn by tourists into the country," she said.

She said as a result there has been a deficit in the balance of trade in Canadian tourism.

A possible solution to the problem would be greater tourism promotion by Canadian provinces, Mrs. Kirkland-Casgrain said.

SPECIAL SYMPHONY SEASON

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is doubtful whether any of the people who attended the first concert of the present Victoria Symphony Orchestra in May, 1941, in their most optimistic imagining could anticipate what enormous strides the ensemble would make in the next three decades.

Nor even feel any certainty that it would survive so long.

It was then only the latest in a series of attempts to form a symphony that had blossomed hopefully and faded quickly.

Good will on the part of public and business; hard work, nearly all of it voluntary, courage among dedicated officers of the society to make drastic decisions when such were necessary—these were factors contributing to the Victoria Symphony, now embarking on the celebration of its 30th season.

It also had going for it in a highly crucial period of its development, two totally committed people in Jack Barraclough and its second musical director-conductor, Hans Gruber.

These two, supported by a dozen or so others, sustained and built the orchestra in the face of the totally discouraging attitude of Greater Victoria's elected officialdom.

Otto-Werner Mueller's tenure on the podium strengthened the orchestra and then came Laszlo Gati, a man of ideas and great organizing ability with an exceptional gift for alerting public interest.

This triple jubilee season is a case in point. Heralding the symphony's biggest, most expanded season ever, Gati has chosen his artists and his music to pay tribute to the Beethoven bi-centenary, the 30th season and B.C.'s entry into Confederation.

Four Beethoven Festival concerts incorporating all five piano concertos, the triple concerto for piano, violin and cello, the Choral Fantasy and Choral and Pastoral Symphonies and performance by the American Alma Trio of the "Archduke," commemorate the master of Bonn.

A series of special events proclaim the 30th season as a super-season, especially the appearance of the famous Spanish guitar family, the Romeros, in December, and the Bach Aria Group which includes world-renowned Canadians Maureen Forrester, Lois Marshall and Richard Lewis.

As for the box office, reports show that public interest is at an all-time high as the Victoria Symphony mounts its third decade with such a great number of season subscribers—well over 2,000 have been sold already—that wating lists could be the order for the fourth decade.

In Beethoven's Footsteps

By KENNETH LOVELAND

LONDON — Bonn was where he was born, but Vienna is where it all happened, and, in his bicentenary year, it is to Vienna that the musical tourist goes to learn about Beethoven.

The trip involves not only listening to almost every note he wrote and walking round exhibitions seeking some sign of personality, some touch of the living man, but it also involves trying to get behind it all and finding the lost Vienna of a century and a half ago.

The Viennese police have a look of patient tolerance for the visitor who demands to be shown where Beethoven lived. For posterity's purposes, he was an inconsiderate tenant, and lodged at 25 different houses in the old city, to which can be added all those suburban houses where he liked to go in the summer. Many still exist, and to help the eager explorer the city tourist office has prepared a Beethoven map. There are even conducted tours.

The Theatre an der Wien is a surprise. The stranger would expect something much bigger than this little gem of a theatre, with its steeply raked floor. Gone is the annex in which Beethoven lived in admirable confusion, something which could probably have been said of every lodging he had.

In the city itself, the Pasqualati house on the Molkerbastei, is the recognized place of pilgrimage. It is worth the climb up the steep path; in Beethoven's time, this would have been part of the city walls.

But he would have had a view vastly different from the wide, busy Karl Kruger Ring which now runs beneath it. Beethoven must have liked his perch here for he stayed longer than anywhere else, and the fourth floor apartments saw the birth of many of his masterpieces.

You get closest to the man and the music in the northern suburbs. Doblinger Haupstrasse, with its Eroica house on the right-hand side, and some restored addresses in the side streets, start the climb out to the village at the foot of the hills and woods to which in summer Beethoven liked to take his smoldering energies, to fan them alight once more, or ponder his heartbreaks.

Magic in Textiles

... With Gordon Rice

The hottest, the hippest, and the most famous works of art will seldom if every be seen in Victoria. Our art museum (the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria) is one of the best attended small galleries in Canada, but its financial resources have been for a long time severely limited.

This means the big touring shows of paintings and sculpture pass us by, and that little top-reputation stuff can be aquired. The director, Colin Graham, has remained sensitive to all ideas and changes in the visual arts, and has consistantly tried to give us the most varied and interesting shows available with the Gallery's resources.

Often this means obtaining shows of high quality within little-known fields of the arts; last season's display of Japanese textiles and stencils, for example. The fall season has opened this time with a show of Contemporary German Textiles (through October 4).

Most of the artists are women, and most of them reveal the influence of the Swiss Artist Paul Klee, who unwittingly seems to have dominated the German art scene in the same way Charlie Parker has influenced the jazz scene in the last 30 years.

●

Fairy tales and folklore play a good part in these textile pictures and patterns (as they did in Klee's work).

Depicted here is that kind of magic bird so universal in folklore, and the artist has combined cotton, linen, wool, silk, and metalic threads to convey the sense of fabulously rare plumage.

The craftsmanship is really amazing, but the character of the work will undoubtedly strike a variety of reactions is a variety of viewers. One imagines that some will find it flashy and sentimental, and others will see it as exquisite and sensitive. You should decide for yourself.

●

Sophia Dawo's work in black mohair and paper achieves, like many of the works in this exhibit, an equivalent of so emkind of graphic art; in this case charcoal drawing.

Beads, vegetable fibres, lace, and many other materials are employed in the textiles that comprise this colorful exhibit.

Worth noting are his "Brilliant Bluffs from Selkirk College", "Creek in Summer, West Kootenays", "Rock Face, Fletcher Creek", and "Below Kokanee Creek Bridge."

Campbell is pursuing a craft (landscape painting) which has fallen into low regard in the eyes of many of the authorities in the arts today. Fortunately he has chosen to be his own authority, the only sound course an artist can take anyway, whatever his style.

He combines vivid straight-out-of-the-tube colors with highly subtle mixed ones, often with a very refreshing effect.

The artist has made two color films widely circulated on the educational film circuit in Britain. These are "The Everchanging Sky", showing the paintings and the locales painted by John Constable, the English master, and "Artists in Today's World", a study of three contemporary Britons (one of the artists being Campbell himself).

Next Thursday the 24th, at 8:30, both films will be shown at the Chelsea Gallery.

'No One Knew Of Plans'

LONDON (AP) — "Absolutely no one in Russia was aware of my intentions," says Soviet ballerina Natalia Makarova, who fled to the West and obtained political asylum in Britain earlier this month.

Miss Makarova, at 30 one of the world's leading classical dancers, disclosed in a television interview Friday with the BBC that she had considered fleeing to the West for two years.

"I never spoke about this to any of my friends or family," she said.

Miss Makarova said she defected because the West offered more opportunities to broaden her career and that she was weighing offers from a number of dance companies.

Oh! Calcutta Network Plan Revived

TORONTO (CP) — Color Media Communications Corp. of New York announced Thursday it is negotiating for a group of Canadian outlets for the Sept. 28 closed circuit telecast of the New York revue Oh! Calcutta.

A spokesman said the negotiations were expected to be completed this week to add Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec City to a network of 110 theatres, arenas and auditoriums in the United States.

* * *

Ticket prices in both countries will be $10 for the show which will be broadcast from Broadway where it has been playing to sell-out audiences for more than a year.

Its creator, Kenneth Tynan, literary manager of Britain's National Theatre, has called it "tasteful pornography for the thinking Voyeur."

* * *

Originally, Famous Players Corp. was to show Oh! Calcutta! in theatres across Canada but the chain withdrew its participation without explanation.

Color Media is negotiating with independent operators to establish a Canadian network. The show will be beamed in color to Toronto and Montreal.

FALL THEATRE season gets under way next Saturday night with the Victoria Theatre Guild's production of Tom Stoppard's comedy, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead. Principals in the cast include Barbara Meiklejohn as Queen Gertrude and Ron Way as King Claudius. The play will run through Oct. 3 at the Langham Court Theatre. Box office opens at Eaton's on Wednesday.

Clapton Disc Has Unique Flavor

By RITCHIE YORKE

There was Graham Bond and John Mayall's Bluesbreakers. There was cream backed up by Blink Faith. Then there was On Tour with Delaney and Bonnie, and numerous other records with Aretha Franklin, King Curtis, the Plastic One Band, the Beatles.

Now at last there is the Eric Clapton-himself album, the record on which Eric writes, sings and plays, and does them all well.

The album is simply called "Eric Clapton."

It was produced by Delaney Bramlett, and thus has that unmistakable Delaney and Bonnie feel. But some of the songs have a Beatles circa 1968 flavor. Although not as clearly progressive as the Blind Faith album, the Eric Clapton LP has a unique, good-time taste to it.

It is mainstream pop rather than blues, extroverted rather than intense, romance rather than reason. Eric's friends on the album include Steve Stills, Leon Russell, and a bunch of Delaney and Bonnie people such as Rita Coolidge, Bobby Whitelock, and Carl Radle.

Most of the tracks were recorded in Los Angeles, but finishing touches and mixing was done in London. I attended the final mixing session in England, and Eric offered the following track-by-track rundown of the album.

"Slunky, the first track, is an instrumental we did, a jam that went down with Leon Russell. It sounded nice and I was really pleased with it.

"Lonesome and a Long Way From Home was written a long time ago by Delaney. He used to perform it with acoustic guitar, and the Hertz rent-a-car people tried to buy it from him for a commerial

"After Midnight is a long song that J. J. Kale wrote. He's one of the Delaney's people from Tulsa, and I think he used to be an engineer. He cut a record of the song, and I dug his record so we did our version of it.

"Lovin' You Lovin' Me started out as a thing which Delaney and Leon wrote for Blind's Faith's second album, which never happened.

"But I always liked it, and I don't think Ginger or Stevie ever heard it. I told Delaney that if I ever did a solo album I'd record it. So we just changed it around a bit to suit my singing and did it.

"I Don't Know Why is a ballad written by Delaney and myself. He had an idea and we worked on it when he stayed at my house during the English tour with Delaney and Bonnie last year.

"Bottle of Red Wine is another ballad. We were driving to the studio in L.A. and we had no songs to cut. We were getting a bit panicky and suddenly we thought up the song and did it as soon as we got to the studio. It's just a shuffle thing.

"Leon wrote Blues Power and it feels like he wrote it with me in mind. I don't exactly want to be pretentious and say that he did, but it's easy to sing and the lyrics say exactly what I wanted to say.

"Told You For The Last Time is another of Delaney's acoustic songs. We changed it around, and arranged it for a big band, and it came out kind of country.

"The last track was called She Rides. The two words came from the original lyrics, but when we went into the studio, the track came off so well that we abandoned the original lyrics and since then I've been trying to think up a new set of words to go with the track."

The day after our rap, Eric got together with Steve Stills and they wrote a set of lyrics entitled Let It Rain. Without doubt it's the finest track on a general first-class LP. It will probably be a monster single hit, and the love-one lyrics enhance its chances.

"The sun is shining through the midst of sorrow,
That surrounded me:
They could never take away, the bliss that's all around me,
Let It Rain, Let It Rain,
Let love rain down on

ERIC CLAPTON

Eric sings well on this album. His voice is not particularly strong or abrasive in the David Clayton Thomas sense, but it has a nice Paul McCartney-like roundness to it.

Any comment about Eric's guitar playing seems superfluous. Clapton has a reputation for being the most tasteful picker on the scene, and this album emphasizes that fact. Not a lick or a run is out of place. Everything is right on.

As I said, there is a touch of the Beatles to some of the songs. But the real feel of this excellent album is best summed up in the opening line of the Blues Power track:

By CLIVE BARNES

LONDON — Although in the West we have had visits from individual Soviet dancers — during the thirties even the great Chabukiani danced in New York — it has been less than 15 years since full-scale Soviet ballet companies have been regularly coming to the Western world.

Today it seems almost as if the leading Soviet troupes spend more time out of Russia than in. One can see why.

Not only do they vastly improve Russia's cultural and political image, but they also provide a steady, and perhaps quite sizable, source of hard Western currencies for the Soviet Union.

Last weekend Leningrad's Kirov Ballet completed its longest ever London season. For six weeks it packed the Royal Festival Hall — partly, naturally enough, with Londoners, but partly with tourists, most of them American.

It was in 1961 that the Kirov first arrived in the West, playing Paris with Rudolf Nureyev and, after that young man's precipitate departure, London and New York. Nureyev's absence apart (incidentally, in London Nureyev frequently went to Kirov performances this season) the company has not changed a great deal. Its director is still Konstantin Sergeyev and his wife Natalia Dudinskay is still the company's principal teacher. In 1961 the leading dancers were Irina Kolpakova, Alla Ossipenko, and Vladilen Semenov and, nearly a decade later, they still are.

Of the younger dancers, probably the most promising in 1961 were Alla Sizova, Natalya Makarova, Yuro Soloviev and Sergei Vikulov, and all four have fulfilled their promise and become considerable artists. (Miss Makarova obtained political asylum in Britain Sept. 4 as the Kirov's visit ended). Now there are young new stars, Elena Evteyeva, Vadim Budarin, Natalys Bolshakova and, most important of all, Mikhail Barishnikov, who is almost unquestionably the most perfect male stylist in the world and even at 22 a great dancer. Yet the company itself hasn't changed. I find this a little strange, but perhaps it is less strange than it at first seems.

In the last 10 years many, many changes have taken place in the leading Western dance companies. New York City Ballet has moved to a new home and Balanchine — as beautifully creative as ever — has celebrated with certain larger-scaled productions; and Jerome Robbins has discovered a new style for the company. Ballet theatre has taken on a new lease on life and repertory; Britain's Royal Ballet has absorbed Nureyev and, more important, his peerless example; and the lovely Royal Danish Ballet has made energetic attempts to join the 20th Century.

NATALYA MAKAROVA

But the Kirov — mother of us all except the Danes — have gone their own, untroubled and unchanging way.

Western ballet has been enormously influenced by Soviet dancing. The other night I arrived a minute or two late for "Swan Lake" and stood at the back with a group of teenagers who were obviously seeing ballet for the first time.

When Jonny Markovsky lifted Miss Ossipenko (who must surely be the most sensuous of ballerinas) right up above his head, these kids gasped with amazement at his strength and dexterity. Unhappily, more blase than they, I knew that this kind of lifting was standard in Western ballet and though well done was in no way remarkable. But then I remembered that, in fact, the Russians had introduced that kind of partnering to us and following their example we had made it our own.

However, it is possible that comparisons with the West are really illusory. All of our major companies (excepting the Danes) are still in the actual process of establishing themselves. A company, such as the Kirov, has a tradition far longer than anything we can show, and to it creativity is of no more significance than it is to the great opera companies.

No one could dance this grand pas from "Paquita" the way the Kirov do. Apart from the technique, apart from the style, there is a generosity of spirit that is breathtaking.

Barishnikov is a special Leningrad marvel. For years Leningrad or St. Petersburg has prompted this kind of dance perfection. In Barishnikov they have the most cultivated of male dancers.

He has been the success of the season, and one of the most poignant aspects of the weeks at the Festival Hall, has been to see Nijinsky's sister, Bronislava Nijinska, applaud this new, young giant of the Russian ballet.

TV Studio To Be Built

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president George Davidson announced Friday approval has been received for construction of a $20 million radio and television studio in Vancouver.

The studio will permit consolidation of the CBC's English- and French-language radio operations and the English language TV facilities in Vancouver.

Eventual inclusion of a French-language TV station would also be possible, Mr. Davidson said.

BILL WALKER

Oops, and it most certainly is hockey time again judging by ye olde mail bag. And first to one missive delivered by hand. No, we won't get hockey cablevision of each and every home game of the Vancouver Canucks, and if you have other information on the matter, please pass it on. It all sounds ridiculous to me.

But then there is always a compensating moment, such as when a reader strikes a responsive chord, and echoes sentiments that may be harbored by a number of hockey fans, and yes, even players.

Mr. P. Lewis of Sidney is 80 years of age.

It's all yours, Mr. Lewis.

"I just can't resist now that the new hockey season is approaching to vent my feelings in regards to the changes that the National Hockey League brass is putting into effect this season regarding the banana hockey stick.

"My only regret is that they didn't go all the way and throw it out altogether, and also prohibit the slap shot for I think both these innovations have been a retrograde step in our national game.

My memory drifts back to the days in Toronto when I watched players like Newsy Lalonde and Jack Adams taking care of the centre-ice chores. That Newsy certainly could manipulate a puck and he didn't need a banana stick to do it.

"I remember watching Stanley Cup playoffs in Toronto during the First World War between a westen and an eastern team, and on the western team there was a player by the name of Mickey McKay, who I really enjoyed watching."

●

(Regarding the curved stick, it still is the most popular, a check of the L.A. supply discloses. But it has been agreed by others that stickhandling has become a lost art because of it. The slap shot has to be here to stay, because how can you bar it?)

"Ever since those days I have watched the hockey greats come up through the different stages. I watched King Clancy and Frank Nighbor, with his great poke check, when they performed with the Ottawa Senators, and I watched Howie Morenz when he played centre for Stratford senior OHA team, and he was flanked by Dr. Frank Carson, and Butch Keltorburne.

"When I watch some of the mill-pond shinny displayed in the centre ice area now, and I think of plays performed by the Cook brothers and Frank Boucher, I get a feeling of nausea."

(Boy, with those names you've probably touched a few tender spots, and started some arguments, too. There still are a number of people around who love to reminisce on "the good old days." But the argument is as ageless as the game, which still is undergoing change. But for better, or worse? Your question is not irrelevant.)

●

Mr. Lewis adds:

"In the old days a forward would give a pass to a forward across the rink, and the receiving forward in stride would slip his hands down on his stick and stop the puck from bouncing all over the rink. But today a player with a crooked stick throws a pass across to a mate like a lacrosse player—most of the time two or three feet above the ice.

"What kind of hockey is that?"

(Well, the height may be exaggerated but the message is clear. And one true hallmark of a pro still is: How does he take that pass? That's one play which separates many rookies from the NHL).

Of the hitters, Mr. Lewis says:

"I don't think the hockey of today is much rougher than it was 40 to 50 years ago, for defencemen like Sprague Cleghorn, Red Horner, Bucko McDonald, and Eddie Shore weren't exactly angels on ice . . . and I guess there is more stupid boarding today."

(There can be no argument there).

●

The writer also comments:

"The freezing of the puck against the boards should be outlawed, also shooting the puck down the ice when a team is a man short."

(On the freezing the puck rule, the NHL is taking some steps to put some sting in the penalty by the introduction of the "free faceoff" during exhibition games. Although the players can't shoot the puck directly at the goalkeeper, it is tantamount to the same thing. A quick drop pass, and fellows like Bobby Hull and Gordie Howe get a "free shot." And that can be dangerous, not only to goalkeepers, but to any defencemen who may have ideas of blocking the shot. Goalies won't like it, that's for sure. On the latter, opinioion is divided, always has been, and I'm not sure it would improve the game either.)

Regarding the slap shot, Mr. Lewis says:

"It bugs me when I see a forward or a defenceman skate to the red line, wind up like a pitcher, let go a terrific slap shot, and then hit every board in the end of the rink, but seldom the goal."

(It bugs the coaches at times, too, but that's the way the players practice. Yes, it is.)

But Mr. Lewis has some kind words, too, for one particular hockey player.

It's Bobby Orr, who else?

Of Orr, he pens this message:

(G'night all, and you, too, Mr. Lewis.)

Fund for Centennials Continues to Expand

There was a big boost Friday for the fund drive being conducted to help Victoria Centennials meet their share of expenses for their November trip to the world amateur baseball tournament in Colombia.

Centennials, who will have travel costs handled by the federal government and the Canadian Baseball Association, are hoping to raise the additional $3,500 required for the journey.

They received cheerful news Friday when an anonymous donor, who described himself as a "long-time senior baseball supporter, contributed $100 to the fund.

Additional donations received Friday and this morning included $10 contributions from the Jade-ets Baton Corporation and the instructor of the Treasure Island Sweethearts.

Donations may be sent or taken to the Ingraham hotel, Imperial Centre, Radio CFAX, Canada Trust or Bell's Men's Wear.

Other donors:

F. M. Gerrie, Keith Dagg, Chuck Mudrak, Keith McCallion, Gordy Cruse, Bob Warner, Mrs. Warner.

Kings' Wingers Displaying Zip

Manager-coach Larry Regan had just finished announcing that he detected extra aggressiveness on the wings of his National Hockey League squad. That's when Lucien Grenier skated into the picture and backed Regan's claim.

The aggressiveness of such as Edward Shack and Larry Mickey had been established long before Kings opened training camp in Memorial Arena. The part that pleases Regan, however, is the size and zip of some of the rookie wingers on hand.

Grenier did his bit to support Regan by scoring two goals, including the winner, as the Johnny Wilson-coached Golds defeated the Purple squad 3-2 Friday. Gord Labrossiere also scored for the Golds in the intrasquad game while Doug Robinson and Juha Widing replied for the Purples.

PULFORD SIGNS

Off the ice, the big news Friday was the announcement that Bob Pulford has signed a two-year contract. Pulford, who can play either centre or on left wing, signed a day after reporting to camp.

More players were expected to be signed at the weekend.

The Kings, who will be given a day off from training on Sunday, will launch their preseason exhibition grind next Friday by playing Vancouver Canucks in Edmonton.

The two squads also will meet in Calgary Sept. 26 and in Red Deer on Sept. 27 before Kings return to their Victoria headquarters.

Rain Delays Golf Classic

ROBINSON, ILL. (AP) — Tournament-weary professionals had a day of leisure Friday as rain washed out the second round of the $100,000 Robinson Golf Classic.

Weather permitting, the second round will be played Saturday with a 36-hole windup Sunday in the chase for the $20,000 first prize.

Taking a one-stroke lead in a par-smashing first-round frolic over the compact par 35-36-71 Crawford Country Club course Thursday was 29-year-old Rich Bassett of Miami, Fla., who shot 65.

Ace Kicker Won't Play This Season

TORONTO (CP) — Zenon Andrusyshyn, the 23-year-old Oakville, Ont., place kicker and punter who ended a five-day trial with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League's Eastern Conference, said he does not plan to play football this year.

In four years at the University of California at Los Angeles, Andrusyshyn broke all United States college kicking records. He was drafted by Dallas this year but was released before playing a professional game.

'RANSOM RULE' . . . . . . WOULD BE TARGET

Joe to Play . . . or Else

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pro football may soon have its counterpart to baseball's Curt Flood case.

"Joe Kapp will play football for somebody this year—or else," John Elliott Cook, attorney for the quarterback, said here.

The "or else" means a suit against the pro football establishment, Cook indicated, although not saying it flatly.

"Everyone knows what we'll do . . . although it's the last thing in the world I want," Cook said.

A suit by Kapp, who led Minnesota Vikings to the NFL title last year, would be aimed at what Cook calls "Rozelle's ransom rule."

Kapp is now a free agent. The Vikings have refused to meet his price on a new contract, reported to be $1,250,000 for five years.

Players' Demands Out of Line

Times News Services

Alan Eagleson, the 36-year-old Toronto lawyer who organized the National Hockey League Players' Association three years ago, says some player salary demands are getting out of line.

"Public opinion, which got us where we are today, is swinging the other way," Eagleson said in Toronto this week. "Some of the salary demands are getting way out of line."

"We've got to be reasonable," said Eagleson. "I'm aware the public is shifting the other way. They're close to that way now."

Eagleson didn't name the players he feels have made excessive demands. But Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs is reported seeking $125,000, an increase of about 300 per cent, Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks, is aiming for a reported $50,000, an increase of about 280 per cent, and Derek Sanderson of Boston Bruins, who is reported to want a 500 per cent increase to $70,000.

However, Eagleson says he doesn't agree with some owners who say players "are killing the golden goose."

"Some clubs, like Pittsburgh and Oakland, are having tough times right now, but I have no sympathy whatever for teams like Toronto and Montreal who have made millions off the players, and now they're crying because we're catching up."

★ ★ ★

"It wasn't super hockey," said Frank Selke Jr., general manager of Oakland Seals, but "from our performance tonight I would say we are definitely going to be an improved club."

He was talking Friday night after the Seals bombed Buffalo Sabres 6-0 in one of four National Hockey League exhibition games.

In other games, Chicago Black Hawks, after only three days at camp, took the Stanley Cup-champion Boston Bruins 7-5, New York Rangers trounced St. Louis Blues 5-1 and Minnesota North Stars needed a late-game effort to subdue Vancouver Canucks 3-1 in the Canucks' NHL debut.

Carol Vadnais caught Buffalo flatfooted in the first and scored while the Sabres were in the process of changing lines. Norm Ferguson with two, Gerry Ehman, Joe Hardy and Gary Croteau comvleted the rout.

★ ★ ★

Rookie Larry Romanchyk scored the Chicago winner at London, Ont., early in the third period. Cliff Koroll added the insurance marker with 17 seconds remaining and Boston goalie Ed Johnston out of the net in favor of a sixth attacker.

Bobby Hull, Dennis Hull, Chico Maki, Pit Martin and Doug Jarrett tallied the earlier Black Hawk goals. Bobby Orr, with two, Phil Esposito, Ed Westfall and Reg Leach scored for the Bruins.

★ ★ ★

Syl Apps Jr., son of Hockey Hall-of-Famer Syl Apps, former Toronto Maple Leaf great now a member of the Ontario legislature, and veteran Dave Balon each scored twice in the New York victory.

Vancouver Canucks, newcomers to the NHL this year along with Buffalo, held Minnesota North Stars 1-1 until the 17:01 mark of the third period when Bill Goldsworthy scored the winner and Marshall Johnston, formerly with Canada's national team, adding the insurance marker about a minute later.

Len Lunde gave the Canucks a 1-0 lead in the first period until Joe Johnston got the equalizer for Minnesota at Edmonton.

Philadelphia Flyers had their first full-scale game at Quebec City and Sentre Jim Johnson and winger Bill Sutherland scored two each in the Flyers' 7-4 victory over Quebec Aces, their American League farm club.

Last-Second Field Goal Gives Riders 23-22 Win

REGINA (CP) — Eagle Keys isn't a man to wear his heart on his sleeve at a football game, but when Jack Abendschan booted a game-winning field goal on the last play Friday night, the Saskatchewan Roughriders' head coach just couldn't contain his joy.

"It wasn't that I had any doubts as to whether Jack would make that field goal, but when he did I just had to run out there and jump on him," Keys said after Roughriders defeated British Columbia Lions 23-22 in a Western Football Conference cliff-hanger.

The 47-yard boot strengthened Saskatchewan's hold on top spot in the WFC, and foiled Lions' attempt to break out of a second place deadlock with Calgary Stampeders. Roughriders have 16 points on eight wins and two losses, while B.C. and Calgary have 5-4 records and 10 points each.

The fourth-place Edmonton Eskimos, with a 3-6 performance to date, travel to Winnipeg for a match at 12:30 p.m. PDT Sunday against the Blue Bombers. The game will be broadcast on the CTV west network. Edmonton head coach Ray Jauch doesn't plan any lineup changes against cellar-dwelling Winnipeg.

Abendschan, in addition to booting the game-winning field goal, contributed two others from 43 and 14 yards out and converted touchdowns scored by fullback George Reed and flanker Gordon Barwell.

Young Provides Two Touchdowns

For lions, Jim Young got two touchdowns on 51-yard and 34-yard passes from Paul Brothers, while Vic Washington snared another throw for a major. Ted Gerela kicked three converts and got a single on a field goal try that went wide.

"I've never seen anything like it," said the Lions' coach. "It's not right for guys to play like these kids did tonight and have that happen to them.

"We beat the daylights out of those guys and still came up losers," said Parker. He was pleased with the defensive effort that resulted in four interceptions of Lancaster pass attempts.

Lancaster, who played the whole game despite an ailing throwing arm that has been sore all season, earned the unenviable record of top career interception-tosser in the Canadian Football League. His 202 in 11 seasons surpassed the 201 mark set by Bernie Faloney in 12 seasons.

Two of the interceptions were by Jerry Bradley, while Greenard Poles and Bill Whisler got one each. Brothers had no passes intercepted and completed 15 of 24 tries for 264 yards gained, compared with Lancaster's 12 of 25 and 268 yards.

Saskatchewan had the edge in rushing, 136 yards to 97, as Reed rolled up 62 yards on 16 carries. Jim Evenson, who holds a three-yard edge in the WFC rushing stakes this year over second-place Reed, lugged the ball 17 times for 40 yards.

Ickx' time, however, will not go into the books as an official lap record. Official records must be set during a race rather than in qualifying.

Roman Has Rams Off on Right Foot

By The Associated Press

A 60 will mark the 1970 debut of professional football tonight when Chicago Bears play New York Giants.

A sellout crowd of 62,000 is assured for the game in New York, the only scheduled Saturday action in the National Football League, and it will mark the 10th consecutive capacity crowd to watch the Giants at Yankee Stadium, dating back to 1962.

The NFL season was launched Friday night when Los Angeles Rams, unbeaten during the exhibition season, routed St. Louis Cardinals 34-13.

HITS A 16

Gabriel hit 16 of 26 passes for 185 yards and Haymond contributed another 50-yard kickoff return to set up another score. Meanwhile, the defence held the Cardinals to only two field goals until the final period.

The other NFL teams will be in action Sunday except for New York Jets and Cleveland Browns, who will play in Cleveland Monday night in a nationally-televised game.

Sunday, Denver is at Buffalo, Houston at Pittsburgh, Baltimore at San Diego, Miami at Boston, Oakland at Cincinnati, Atlanta at New Orleans, Dallas at Philadelphia, Detroit at Green Bay, Washington at San Francisco and Kansas City at Minnesota.

The national television game Sunday will pit the last Super Bowl opponents, Kansas City Chiefs and Minnesota Vikings, at Minnesota. The game will be shown on NBC starting at 1 p.m., EDT.

Added Points Make It Wide-Open Scramble

With double points riding on the 75-lap Vancouver Island championship race, any one of the top seven stock car drivers has a chance to walk off with the season's point crown tonight at Western Seedway.

Earl's son, Larry, is occupying third spot with 370 points and seventh-place Jim Gicas is still in contention with 351.

Any driver clocking fast time, as well as winning the fast heat and main event stands to pick up a total of 96 points along with his purse.

ACTION SUNDAY

On Sunday, foreign stock drivers and pilots of figure-eight vehicles will be battling for their separate championships.

Some Seattle and Vancouver foreign stocks are expected to show up although they will be ineligible to capture the Island title.

Top Rider Paralyzed After Spill

CANANDAIGUA, N.Y. (AP) — Jose Olivares, the country's sixth leading jockey, probably will be paralysed for life because of a spinal fracture suffered during a riding accident Thursday at Finger Lakes Race Track, doctors said Friday.

A spokesman for Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, where the 29-year-old jockey was listed in satisfactory condition, said Olivares' "chances of completely recovering are about one per cent."

His legs were paralysed, the spokesman said.

Olivares was taking Cy's Mistake around the stretch turn when the mount clicked the heels of another horse and went down, spilling the rider to the track.

Thus far this year, he has had 114 victories, 100 seconds and 81 third-place finishes, a record that places him sixth among riders.

Trotting Triumph

YONKERS, N.Y. (CP) — Canadian-owned Fresh Yankee, given a perfect drive by Joe O'Brien, defeated Une de Mai of France by 1¼ lengths Friday night to win the $50,000 United Nations Trot.

Mets Dropped to Third By Patched-Up Pirates

By The Associated Press

If Danny Murtaugh's Pittsburgh repair shop keeps turning out spare baseball parts on demand for the next two weeks, Sparky Anderson will have to regear his Big Red Machine in Cincinnati for the National League pennant playoffs.

Utility man Jose Pagan's seventh inning home run followed a two-run homer by Bob Robertson Friday night and gave Murtaugh's patched-up Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over New York Mets in a showdown between two of the three contenders for the east-division championship.

The loss, coupled with Chicago Cubs' 3-2, 5-4 doubleheader sweep at Montreal, dropped the Mets to third place in the stretch race . . . a few hours after Cincinnati manager Anderson picked the Mets as the most likely foes for his West Division champs in the final confrontation.

"I'm guessing . . . and it's strictly a guess . . . that the Mets will win it," Anderson said before the Reds, who had secured the west title the previous night without lifting a bat, swamped Atlanta Braves 11-6.

In other National League games Los Angeles Dodgers nipped Houston Astros 3-2; San Francisco Giants edged San Diego Padres 3-2 in 10 innings and Philadelphia Phillies outscored St. Louis Cardinals 9-7.

"Pittsburgh and Chicago are right up there with Baltimore when it comes to hitting," Anderson said when pressed for a prediction of the outcome in the east. "The Mets have the pitching."

Fourth 20-Game Season For Fergie

most effective pitcher in recent weeks, battled Pittsburgh's Steve Blass through six scoreless innings at New York before Willie Stargell beat out an infield hit in the seventh and Robertson slammed nis 27th homer.

Pagan, filling in at third base for ailing Richie Hebner, then hit his sixth homer and the Pirates hung on to win with Dave Giusti registering his 25th save in relief of Blass.

Murtaugh put Pagan in the lineup after Hebner was stricken with the flu. The Pirates, playing without injured Roberto Clemente and Al Oliver, also lost Robertson in the eighth inning when he fouled a pitch off his left ankle.

Despite the run of injuries, the pirates now lead the Cubs by 1½ games and are 2½ ahead of the Mets.

Ferguson Jenkins launched the Cubs' sweep by tossing a five-hitter in the opener to become a 20-game winner for the fourth consecutive season. Ron Santo won the nightcap with a run-scoring single in the 10th inning.

Billy Williams hit his 40th and 41st homers for the Cubs, who capitalized on a third-strike passed ball by John Bateman for the deciding pair of unearned runs in the opener, then overcame a 3-0 deficit in the second game.

Johnny Bench drove in four runs with a single and his 45th homer, Bob Tolan drilled a three-run double and Dave Concepcion poked four hits as the Reds mauled Atlanta before holding a belated division-clinching celebration.

Yanks Sporting Satisfying Record

The three best records in baseball belong, loically enough, to Cincinnati Reds, Baltimore Orioles, champions in the American League east, and Minnesota Twins, who are closing in on the American League west crown.

The fourth best record in baseball belongs, rather illogically, to New York Yankees, who are 13½ games behind Baltimore and, of course, have been eliminated from any race this season.

The yankees, who have the poor luck to be playing in the right division but the wrong league, won their 8th game of the season Friday night, blanking Detroit 5-0 on Ron Klimkowski's three-hitter. If they were in the National League east instead of American League east, their record would be good enough not only for first place but for a four-game lead as well.

The 84 victories are the most the Yankees have won since 1964 when they captured the pennant with 99 victories.

Elsewhere in the American League Friday night, Baltimore edged Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 11 innings, Minnesota trimmed Chicago White Sox 5-4, Milwaukee Brewers took Kansas City Royals 4-3 and Oakland Athletics edged California Angels 3-2. Washington's game at Boston was postponed by rain.

The hero was Dave Baylor, who singled two runs home in his first major league at bat, and then drove home the winning run with another single in the 11th. Rookie Roger Freed walked to open the decisive 11th and pinch-hitter Paul Blair stole second and reached third on an error before Baylor delivered his hit.

State Intervenes In Grid Dispute

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert J. Magnum, New York state commissioner of human rights, says he has been asked to intervene in the dispute involving black football players at Syracuse University.

"I firmly believe from the facts available to me that it can be conciliated to the satisfaction of all parties concerned," Mangum said Friday in a telegram to Ben Schwartzwalder, Syracuse's football coach.

Mangum urged the coach to restore eight suspended blacks to the football team and permit them to play in Syracuse's opening game tonight at Houston.

The state official said he was available to meet with the coach, university officials and the players Tuesday "as a first step toward resolving the problem."

The blacks weren't invited to participate in fall drills after boycotting Syracuse's spring practice. They first refused to sign a statement committing themselves to follow team rules recently, but said this week they would sign.

Room For Highsmith

MONTREAL (CP) — Harry Olszewski, an import offensive guard with Montreal Alouettes, has been placed on waivers by the Eastern Football Conference club to make way for Wally Highsmith, an import from the National Football League Pittsburgh Steelers.

KINGS WON'T JOIN PEEKING COUGARS

Newcomers in Victoria Cougars' camp will have to fend for themselves when the British Columbia Junior Hockey League team stages its "sneak peek" intra-squad game at Memorial Arena tonight.

The newcomers form a "rookie" team that will face last year's "holdovers" in the game scheduled to get under way at 8 p.m.

Expected additions from Los Angeles Kings of the National League failed to materialize. Most of the young candidates who started training with the Kings have since been "shipped out" and Cougar coach Ron Maxwell declined to use any player over 23 years of age.

Consequently, tonight's game will be an all-Cougar show.

The game will help Maxwell determine a lineup for the first of two exhibition games Cougars will play against Western Canada League opposition.

Scotty Munro's Calgary Centennials visit Memorial Arena on Wednesday evening and Edmonton Oil Kings follow on Sept 27.

Fog Blankets Aussie Hopes

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Gretel II lifted eyebrows and raised Australian spirits Friday, but it was all lost in the fog.

The second America's Cup race was called on the fourth leg of the six-leg race with Intrepid slightly in front.

Jim hardy had his Australian challenger flying as he took on Intrepid and skipper Bill Ficker at their own game—windward sailing—in the second of the best-of-seven America's Cup series. Intrepid leads 1-0.

Gretel II led at the first two marks—the first time a challenger has done so since Briain's Endeavor in 1934.

PASSES ON THIRD

Ficker slipped by on the third leg. but Hardy was back at him when they rounded the third mark and started tacking upwind again. As he was climbing right up on the Americans, the New York Yacht Club Race Committee ruled it too dangerous to keep sailing and shot off three rounds on the committee boat cannon. It was the most exciting Cup racing since Weatherly-Gretel in 1962.

The spectator fleet had to take most of the excitement as hearsay.

By the time Gretel II rounded the first mark with a one-minute, 54-second edge, the fog blanketed the spectacle from view. At the end visibility was down to 200 yards.

RULES AMENDED

B. Devereux Barker III, head of the race committee, said the NYYC rules had been amended to permit cancellation of a race after Baron Marcel Bich had complained when the fourth race in the France-Gretel II elimination series was continued even though fog had cut visibility to 50 yards.

The original rule said no race once started could be stopped within a six-hour completion limit.

Ficker said the committee "did the right thing. It was deteriorating fast and it would have been no test."

Bob Gets Basement-Raid Bonus

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — "I reckon I've got a touch of the Arnold Palmers" says Bob Rosburg.

He should—he's using one of Arnie's clubs.

Rosburg, using a putter he picked up in Palmer's basement, moved into second place Friday one stroke behind Australian Bruce Devlin in the "Alcan Golfer of the Year" Tournament.

Rosburg, from Winthrop, Me., shot a six-under par 66 Friday for a two-day total of 141. Devlin had a two-round score of 140, including Friday's 71.

The field of 25 went into the third round today, shooting for a first prize of $53,625.

"I was using a putter that I happened to collect when I raided Palmer's basement," said Rosburg, the 1959 American PGA title holder.

SANK 30-FOOTER

Rosburg used the putter on each of the last 11 holes and sank one from 30 feet with Arnie's putter at the eight.

Rosburg, who has twice finished second in the U.S. Open, losing by only a single shot in the 1959 and 1969 championships; said:

"Maybe this putter of Palmer's is going to do me a lot of good this time.

"I made every putt I hit on the last 11. The rain made the greens much more friendly.

"It was like putting down a trough."

NEIL COLES THIRD

The championship over Portmarnock's 7,117-yard par 36-36 —72 links on the edge of the Irish Sea had Neil Coles, England, in third place, with a two round total of 143. He was followed by Bert Yancey from Ponpano Beach, Fla., and Christie O'Connor, Ireland, both with 144.

Peter Ocsterhuis, of England, Howie Johnson, Palm Springs, Calif., Lee Trevino, El Paso, Tex., and Bruce Crampton Australia, were at 145.

Peter Thomson, five-time winner of the British Open, disqualified himself early Friday when he read the morning papers and found that he had signed for a 78 when actually he had scored 79.

The mistake was made in Thursday's wind-swept round, when gale winds gusted to 60 m.p.h.

'Soviet Science Restricted'

LONDON (AP) — Soviet scientists are forced to take a back seat to Western researchers because of severe restrictions on freedom of scientific inquiry in the Soviet Union, says a smuggled book written by a noted Russian scientist who was put in a mental hospital last spring because of his views.

The manuscript was published Thursday by Macmillan and Co. in Russian. By Dr. Zhores A. Medvedev, it is called The Medvedev Papers: The Plight of Soviet Science. English versions will be published next year.

Medvedev, a 45-year-old geneticist, was detained in a mental hospital for three weeks last May because he challenged the government. He was released after protests from fellow Russian scientists, but at the moment he is said to be unemployed.

In the book Medvedev claims Soviet scientists are denied full contact with colleagues abroad. Information reaches them slowly through official channels, he says, and great waste results from unnecessary duplication.

That's Because It Provides the Wonderful, Floor-to-Ceiling Warmth of HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING

Operates by a Revolutionary Principle—Electrically-Heated, Sealed-in Water!

Rich man! Poor man! Beggar man! Thief! Doctor! Lawyer! Merchant! Chief! Nobody wants to leave the soft, gentle, floor-to-ceiling warmth of INTERTHERM Hot Water Electric Baseboard Heating.

For the INTERTHERM—both permanently-installed systems and portable heaters—produces the most comfortable, healthful, economical, cleanest, safest heat possible today. For entire homes, apartments, lodges, hotels, motels, schools, commercial buildings—and hard-to-heat single rooms, offices and other small areas.

Hot Water Heat Without Plumbing is Made Possible by the INTERTHERM's Inner Works, shown in the diagram at the right. This consists of a copper tube Inside of which an electric heating element and a water and anti-freeze solution—which never needs replenishing—are permanently, hermetically sealed. The electric element heats the water. And the water heats the room.

A Permanent INTERTHERM System Can Be Installed in a Home or Any Building at Lower Installation Cost Than a Conventional Central Heating System of Any Type. That's because it requires no furnace, boiler, pipes, ducts, flues, chimney, fuel tank and other costly components of a properly-installed, heat-wasting central heating system.

The Portable INTERTHERM is easy to carry anywhere. And plugs into any 115-volt outlet.

Thermostat Control Maintains the Heating Solution at Exactly the Temperature Necessary for perfectly-balanced, floor-to-ceiling warmth at all times—regardless of outside temperatures. When the electricity is shut off—the water solution continues to heat the room.

Keeps Floors Warm—No Chilling Drafts. No heat wasted at ceiling. No alternating too-hot and too-cold periods. No overheating to carbonize lint and dust particles that irritate nose and throat membranes; smudge walls, drapes and furniture. Can't cause a fire hazard. Can't scorch furniture or drapes—can't burn child or pet—if they come in contact. Many more advantages.

THE $10,000 BET, A FABLE

A chess master who was always hard up one day met a millionaire who wanted to play the master, offering to bet him $10,000 to $10 if he gave him the odds of a Rook. All the master had in his pocket was $10, but the temptation was just too big. So he accepted the incredible bet. After fours hours of hard battle, the chess master screamed out, "I've got you, it's mate in ONE!!!!!"

As he started to execute the mate, the poor wretch, overcome with the excitement of winning that fabulous sum of money and being able to come home and prove to his nagging wife and unruly children that he wasn't a chess bum after all, keeled over dead. In the excitement of this unexpected turn of events, the millionaire knocked over his own Black King, which rolled onto the floor. Without it, the position looked like this:

WHITE: King on KN1, Rook on KR1, Bishop on Q3, pawns on QR4, Q2, KR3 and KR2 (7 pieces).

BLACK: Rook on Q1, Bishop on KN5, pawns on QR4, QN3, QB2 and KR4 (6 pieces).

The rich challenger could not remember where his King had stood, but told the chocked spectators that if anyone could replace the King and find the mate in one, he would be happy to give the chess master's widow the $10,000. Fortunately, another master stepped up and solved the problem.

Can you?

We will give the solution in the column three weeks from today. If, in the meantime, you send me your solution, explaining where the Black King stood and identifying the key move complete, plus a self-addressed, stamped 9½ by 4½ envelope. I will send you a chess pamphlet free of charge!

Send solutions to the Chess Editor of this paper.

Storks of Denmark Diminishing

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — The famed storks of Denmark are dying out.

Hans Christian Andersen once called this country "the land of the storks" and there was a time when every village had a stork or two. It was regarded as unlucky if a village did not have one.

But today the Danish stork population has gone into a catastrophic decline. There may be none left by 1975, says one expert.

* * *

"If the development continues it is to be supposed that the stork will soon become extinct," said Tommy Dybro, stork expert at Copenhagen University's zoological museum.

Before 1900 there were more than 4,000 breeding pairs in Denmark. But this year, Dybro said, only about 65 pairs are breeding.

Toward the end of the last century an enormous program to reclaim land was begun in Jutland — draining marshes which were once a favorite breeding ground for storks.

* * *

Northwestern Europe now is undergoing a colder period and the cooler waters of streams and marshes discourage stork breeding and kill many young storks.

Other factors believed to be reducing the numbers are collisions with high-tension cables and the eating of insects poisoned with insecticides, including winter feeding grounds in South Africa.

Prospects for stabilizing the stork population at its present level seem slim.

"The only thing which would help would be a warmer period," Dybro said.

In 1900, the human birth rate in Denmark was 3.2 per hundred of the population. Last year it was 1.38.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

GLEN CAMPBELL. 7 p.m., Channel 8. Glen's third-season opener features Brian Keith, the 5th Dimension, Ruth Buzzi and Norm Crosby. Glen sings Everything a Man Could Ever Need, A Thing Called Love, It's Only Make Believe and Let It Be.

MUSIC MACHINE. 7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Singers Rhonda Silver, Brian Russell and Terry Black of the Machinery are spotlighted. Feature songs include Ain't No Mountain High Enough, Patches, Black Cat and When This Battle's Over.

ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (season's premiere). Brother Andy, his bear, and the Weirdos are back for the fall, along with The Supremes and the Martin Landaus. Williams takes a beating from his cast except in the musical portion. The Supremes offer a medley of their hits and join their host for "Peace in the Valley." Martin Landau and Barbara Bain cavort in short bits with Andy and sing about their youth. A celebrity walks on following custom, and Williams sings numbers like "Close to You" and "I Just Can't Help Believing."

THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW. 8 p.m., Channel 8; 9:30, Channel 7 (premiere.) Dick Van Dyke's TV wife flies solo as a stunning sinster, age 30, starting a new life playing a Minneapolis-St. Paul TV newsroom girl. Amid bright chatter reminiscent of "He and She," Mary battles over an apartment, lands a job, and says goodbye to her old boy friend. The dialogue has bite, but the characters surrounding Miss Moore may leave viewers cold. Mary's tough, wisecracking neighbor is almost a cliche by now; her drinking editor may take getting used to, and her scenes with boy friend Bill (hardly her equal), brought in to establish her past, don't jibe. Let's watch those flights ahead for Mary.

MY THREE SONS. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (season's premiere.) With two sons and Dad married, number three boy Chip, now a college student, becomes the romatic interest for season 11. Chip and a California blonde, Ronne Troup, daughter of pianist Bobby Troup, share the opening episode with little Dodie, who plans a surprise anniversary party for Mom and Dad. Coerced into appearing, the Douglas males present a united front at the party, and are upstaged by Dodie, broken-hearted over her inadequate home-made gift. The moment is calculated to bring a lump to your throat, and it works. Further developments between Chip and the Troup girl, who looks real, come later.

ADAM-12. 8:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (season's premiere). "Log No. 174—Loan Sharks." Marty Milner and Kent McCord begin their third season as Officers Malloy and Reed with a tight if routine case of police deduction while they continue their tours of duty as squad car cops. The best part of the show features a hip teen-ager with a keen eye for detail, particularly where a classy car is involved, who is also the only witness to a beating by hoods willing to testify because "I gotta do my thing."

ARNIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7 (Premiere). After playing "Zorba" and "Fiddler on the Roof" on Broadway, skilled Herschel Bernardi dances on, a big winner as a hard-hat foreman from the loading dock who becomes a company executive. Bernardi's charm as Arnie Nuvo is buttressed by Roger Bowen's polo-playing boss, a "Heck, fella" type who wants to be with it. Bowen's character, with his habit of writing notes instead of speaking outright, plus the sheathing of his mallet hand, is a welcome surprise, but this is Bernardi's show. Known for his boyish enthusiasm, "Mr. Peepers" creator David Swift surrounds Bernardi with an upbeat, positive property. Arnie's scenes with his family aren't too cute, and Swift's explanation for the sudden job jump seems reasonable after meeting the boss.

Sunday

THE GROUP. 5:30 p.m., Channel 2. Guest is singer-composer Joey Gregorash. Songs include United We Stand, Yellow Submarine, Daddy's Little Man, Little Green Apples, When I Was a Cowboy and Three Wheels on My Wagon.

GUNSMOKE. 5:30 p.m., Channels 6 and 8. A stranger arrives in Dodge City to settle an old score. Who he is, and what he's after, is a mystery that unfolds only after he kidnaps Kitty.

WALT DISNEY. 6 p.m., Channel 2; 7:30, Channel 5. (Season's Premiere) "The Boy Who Stole the Elephant," Part One.. Pleasant family show in which Mark Lester, the youngster from "Oliver," steals a circus elephant to prevent the owner from selling him to a zoo. It seems that the circus owner, David Wayne, a good sort, is a confirmed gambler who's been sliding along with his broken-down tent show. Rival owner June Havoc bails Wayne out by lending him an elephant (Queenie), after which the action really begins. No villains in sight tonight as all the characters are appealing, particularly Queenie, the big eater.

THE YOUNG REBELS. 7 p.m., Channel 4 (Premiere) "Father And I Went Down to Camp." Here's a novel idea for a TV series that makes a strong bid for teenagers' attention. It's a well-produced adventure series about a small band of youthful partisans known as the Yankee Doodle Society, whose exploits are chronicled during the Revolutionary War, in Pennsylvania. Rick Ely is the attractive leader of the band which includes a freed slave (Lou Gossett) and a very resourceful inventor (Alex Henteloff), and the trio plays well together. The opener concerns a meeting between the members of the Society and young General Lafayette (Philippe Forquet) which leads to a daring raid on a British munitions' hideout.

HOGAN'S HEROES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (Season's Premiere). New time for this polished comedy series starts its sixth season smartly as POW LeBeau heeds De Gaulle's call for Frenchmen to meet in London. Rather than cook goodies for Col. Klink, he will fight for France, and the little man is almost pinched by the Gestapo along with a cute French girl while he's making his escape. Robert Clary is always a charmer as LeBeau and he has a bit more footage here.

ED SULLIVAN. 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7, 12. (Season's Premiere). For his 23rd season premiere, Ed devotes his show to the presentation of the first "Georgie" Awards chosen by the American Guild of Variety Artists for "excellence in 'live' entertainment." Presenters include Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, Lucille Ball, Danny Thomas, Sergio Franchi, Milton Berle, and Marc Copage. Winners are Bob Hope, Barbra Steisand, Carol Burnett, Melba Moore, the musical group Blood, Sweat and Tears, The Flying Alexanders, Tanya the Elephant, Radio City Music Hall, and Jimmy Durante.

TIM CONWAY COMEDY HOUR. 1 p.m., Channel 7. (Premiere). After failing with a slapstick flying series, Tim boots home a winner, using the variety show format. Effective in sketches, host Conway plays to his strength in the opener. His third sketch on a Japanese flying officer briefing World War II pilots is hilarious. Tim follows up with a silly TV cooking course where nothing goes right, and a wild private eye chapter on a drunken sleuth staggering around in an office awash in beer cans. Lana Turner and Dan Rowan appear in the latter without extending themselves, and Miss Turner is seen as a theatrical maid receiving tremendous applause for her line of dialogue in an earlier routine. If Conway's material remains at tonight's level, he should be a runaway hit.

THE BOLD ONES. 10 p.m., Channel 5. "This Will Really Kill You." Tonight, the doctors' segments begin a new season in a show about drug addiction, and soon there won't be a young actor or actress in Hollywood who hasn't played a junkie. This time round it's Tisha Sterling, who is pregnant as well as addicted, which means our doctor-hero must not only save her life but treat her addicted newborn child as well. The drama is absorbing enough, and one can only hope that all these shows do something about beating the drug problem to death, or drive it away, perhaps, by over-exposure.

NASHVILLE CALLING

Cousin Clem Alive and Well

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Did you hear the one about Cousin Clem?

It seems h popped up regularly on Canadian radio and television for 20 years, entertained the Canadian armed forces 54 times, was dropped by the CBC and never won a citation from the government for entertaining the troops.

Then Cousin Clem got a call from South of the border and now the country character is earning his creator Gordie Tapp $75,000 a year. Beats all, don't it?

Only a year ago, Gordie Tapp had been dropped from his CBC radio show. He was back on the nightclub circuit, working one-night stands and dong a CHCH-TV talk show in Hamilton.

"I'm living off the publicity I got on national TV," he said then. "There's a tremendous market for real country humor and music but the CBC pulded out because it doesn't know how to present it.

"Mailmen, bankers, lawyers, all kinds of people, like downhome shows because they get taken back to their childhood."

He was in Flin Flon, Man., headline star of an RCAF show, when a call came from Hollywood. Two ex-CBC writers, Frank Peppiatt and John Aylesworth, wanted him as a writer and performer on a new series they were trying for summer, sort of a country Laugh-In called Hee-Haw.

That call projected Tapp into a newly-revived career which made Cousin Clem an international star immediately recognized throughout North America.

"I was a nonentity and I am still to wome extent," he said recently in the den of his 96-year-old farmhouse near Burlington.

"But now when I walk on airplanes the pilot sidles back, slaps me on the shoulders and shouts out 'Hee Haw.'

"In the U.S. if you're on a show that's popular they can't do enough for you. They have people to take your instruments from your car in the studio parking lot. At CBC you were lucky to get into the parking lot at all because they don't want performers to use it. And if you had instruments, well you had to drag them in yourself."

Actor Lorne Greene used to laugh at Gordie for doing Country Cousin Clem, he recalled. But the character's popularity even in Canada alone helped him buy a 36-acre spread here, where he lives with his wife, Helen, and a 47-acre farm nine miles up the gravel road. He raises horses and rides them for relaxation and does most of the farm work himself with some help from his daughter and three sons."

At 56, when most men are looking forward to retirement, Gordie is saying:

"It's started all over again, the whole cycle, and I'm pinching myself to make sure it's real."

IN EXILE, a Canadian short story by David Helwig, is a tale about one of society's outcasts. It is to be presented Thursday evening at 9 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6 in the CBC Theatre Canada series. Chris Wiggins, who was named best actor in the 1969 film awards, and Casey Jones the trusty canine, are followed through a day in the life of a vagrant in the vortex of big-city life. (CBC Photo)

U.K. Issue Marks 'Philympia' Show

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Friday the United Kingdom placed on sale three adhesives commemorating the international philatelic exhibition "Philympia."

That show opened Friday in the Empire Hall, Olympia, London, and it will close Sept. 26.

There are hundreds of invaluable exhibits at Philympia, and just three of the more eminent displays there consist of some never-before exhibited treasures from the archives of the Crown Agents, and a few selections from the Queen's collection, and from the collection of Monaco's Prince Rainier III.

The British stamps for Philympia were photogravure printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd. in these colors: 5d, gray, brown and black; 9d, green, yellow, gray and black; and 1s 6d, blue, carmine, black and gray. They are vertical-in-format.

Represented are three celebrated British stamps, namely: 5d, the "penny black" (issued May, 1840); 9d, the embossed one-shilling of 1847 (Scott's number 5); and 1s 6d, the surface printed four-pence of 1855 (Scott's number 22).

Gibraltar released a pair (1s and 2s) for Philympia also yesterday.

Sept. 15 was the date on which St. Helena released a foursome commemorating the British Red Cross Society's centenary. Values: 6d, 9d, 1s 9d and 2s 3d.

The United States issued a 6-cent pictorial today in Stone Mountain, Georgia. Pictured is the Stone Mountain Memorial, a titanic bas relief on the north face of Stone Mountain which depicts (on horseback) the president of the Confederate States, Jefferson Davis (1808-89), and the Confederate generals "Stonewall" Jackson (1824-63) and Robert E. Lee (1807-70).

That carving, the world's biggest sculpture (it's about the size of a football field), was begun by Gutzon Borglum (d. 1941) in 1923. In 1925 he quit, and was replaced by Augustus Lukeman (d. 1925). It was finished by Walter Hancock, and was dedicated last May 9 by Vice-President Agnew.

Royal Naval crests are portrayed on a quartet placed on sale Sept. 7 by Ascension. (A souvenir sheet containing the four also appeared.

On Sept. 7, British Honduras issued a fascinating "hardwoods" foursome.

The Gilbert and Ellice Islands issued 2c, 10c, 25c and 35c stamps Sept. 1 for the centenary of the london Missionary Society in the Southern Gilberts.

Western Samoa released four lithographed multicolors Sept. 14. They pay tribute to Capt. James Cook (1728-79) who made several notable discoveries in the Pacific two centuries ago. Shown are: 1-sene, Kendal's chronometer Capt. James Cook's sextant; 2-sene, a statue of Cook (situated in Whitby, England); 20-sene, a portrait of Cook; and 30-sene, a tropical Pacific island, Capt. Cook, and His Majesty's barque Endeavour.

Strange This Should Happen Here

A farmer delivered 100 pounds of potatoes and 100 pounds of carrots to the house at 953 Balmoral last week. He charged $1.

Yes indeed, something very strange has been spreading through Victoria the last couple of years. The potatoes and carrots indicate it has even reached beyond the city limits.

The house on Balmoral is a hostel for travelling kids. The parish hall of St. John's Anglican Church, four houses down the street at Quadra, is part of the same show.

The show is Cool-Aid, where the long-hair set and the Establishment are continuing to work a sort of quiet miracle in this backwater of Canada while in the big progressive centres they continue to bash heads.

If that sounds a bit provincial, a trifle insular, it's also true.

The something strange is embarrassingly simple to summarize. It's a mutual trust, belief, faith—exhausted words which have somehow quietly come to life under our noses.

So this is a progress report, not just on Cool-Aid but on the community, on how it met a lot of kids who wandered this way over the summer and made them glad they did.

Over in Vancouver there are hassles with the long hairs at the armories and the barracks. On Toronto's Yorkville Street there are drug busts daily. Elsewhere the kids have been breaking things and getting tear-gassed or shot, generally contributing to municipal miseries.

By DON VIPOND

How come nothing in Victoria this summer? Yet the kids have been here in droves, walking the parks and squares, thumbing rides up Douglas.

Because Victoria gave them a place to stay and meals, for 25 cents a day if they had it, otherwise free.

Because municipal and provincial governments helped pay for it, after local young people showed Cool-Aid could work.

Because St. John's Anglican Church contributed its hall rent-free and added $1,000 cash.

Because 22 doctors, including five psychiatrists; 12 dentists, four lawyers and a dental mechanic gave (and continue to give) free emergency service to transient kids.

Because the Department of National Defence loaned 40 bunks, mattresses, pillows and blankets.

Because 28 families are ready to handle any overflow of young travellers, making room in their homes free.

Because the six who staff the Cool-Aid hostels (they are 16 to 25) work for peanuts.

★ ★ ★

Because the Cool-Aid hostels have the kind of neighbors we all dream of. (One of them nips across the street when she can to help out by making beds for staff or cooking.)

(Another, who runs a boarding house, has kids arrive late at night at her place by mistake. She has them stay rather than rouse the hostel staff.)

Because a farmer troubles to haul in potatoes and carrots to help feed the visitors.

★ ★ ★

Because, while Cool-Aid has few rules—no dope, no sex, no sheltering minors without adult authority and no harboring fugitives under any circumstances—they're important and it makes them stick.

Because—and maybe this is the crucial one—there's a limit of three nights for staying.

"Community support has been incredible, just incredible," says Charles Barber, one of the Cool-Aid workers.

Maybe because Cool-Aid—the hostels, the log books, the budget—are available for anyone to see anytime. It's always harder to hate once you've met your enemy, says Barber.

Maybe because the adult community buys the way Barber and the others feel about travelling kids.

Travel is cheap, it's effective and it's happening, he says. It should be encouraged because it makes for maturity, for knowledgable young people.

Travel is democratic. You go there and you come back sort of propaganda-proof."

In More Progressive Cities Kids Were Hassled and Busted But in Stodgy Old Victoria They Got a Bed, Meals and . . .

So what Cool-Aid has been trying to do for the kids who came here is reinforce the positive experience by helping out for one, two or three nights.

"We support travel. But travel means moving on, with a good taste in your mouth," says Hugh Wade, one of the adults who are helping.

Both are equally positive on one point. If the program isn't backed by the community it will fail.

So far it's done nothing but grow but there are problems in sight.

From the start in May of '67 to the spring of this year Cool-Aid housed 3,507 young people, provided 5,570 meals and counselling for 752.

But those figures have been dwarfed by the totals this summer.

From April 1 to Aug. 31, 4,025 kids have been housed and 5,832 meals provided. A total of 402 have been counselled, most of them local. Counselling is a part of Cool-Aid's work not affected by a summer influx.

In all of 1969, the biggest crowd for one night was 28. There were 60 and 70 regularly this summer and the biggest night was Sept. 2 when the total housed was 82.

That was possible because of the church hall but the loan of it ends shortly. The church needs it back for Sunday school.

The inter-municipal grant for Cool-Aid works out to 47 cents per capita. What sort of value are you getting for your 47 cents?

★ ★ ★

The grant money towards food for August was $200. With that and some private support Cool-Aid provided 2,053 meals.

Cool-Aid and the law? In the past two years there has been not one raid, not one warrant, no complaints.

Welfare Faces Hospital Suit

A B.C. government move to force nursing homes to make one-third of their space available for welfare cases faces a court test if it is enforced.

Details of the government move, announced in general terms earlier this week by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, were spelled out in two cabinet orders Friday.

One amends regulations under the Hospital Act governing private hospitals, administered by the health department. It states that where the number of social aid patients in such hospitals is less than one-third, priority shall be given to welfare cases in new admissions.

Homes for the aged, licensed by Gaglardi's department, face a similar one-third requirement.

William Olmsted, owner of Richardson Manor, at 1037 Richardson, said he would continue to give priority in admissions to private patient applications. The Manor now has one welfare patient out of 20 in the home.

"One patient is considered as good as another, but it's simply a case of not being able to survive on what the government pays for welfare patients," Olmstead said.

He said court action would be based on the constitutionality of the provincial government dictating to private enterprise.

DECISION PENDING

Nursing homes are bound by a new clause which states that payment for their care would be paid for at the rate established under the Social Assistance Act. Current rates set by the government are $9.25 a day for nursing homes.

Several nursing homes have challenged this rate in court as being too low. A decision on an appeal in that case is pending.

The new government edict will be particularly harmful to smaller, newer hospitals with high capital and building costs to meet. Older, larger institutions already have more than the required minimum number of welfare recipients as patients.

FEWER BEDS

Jon Parker, manager of Glenwarren Private Hospital, said today the government move could have the effect of making fewer beds available by forcing operators to convert to rest homes.

Glenwarren already has plans to add a rest home addition and eventually to convert entirely to rest home care.

"This sort of dictation to private business might only have the effect of speeding up the process for us," Parker said.

MORE THAN HALF

More than half Glenwarren's 63 patients now are welfare cases. Glengarry Private Hospital also reports its welfare patient total is over the new one-third requirement.

There are about 600 boarding homes for the aged in the province and 60 private hospitals.

Parker said the Gaglardi edict was unfair to staff and investors in nursing homes, in that it limited revenues available for salaries and returns on builders' investments.

"It's high time someone besides the private home operators were made to take on the responsibility of taking care of elderly persons on welfare," Parker said. "Passing the buck, with the responsibility always falling back on us, has got to stop."

Was Her Pot The Real Thing?

A pretty 25-year-old American school teacher charged with possession of marijuana said in provincial court Friday sne was hesitant to plead guilty because she wasn't sure the pot she bought was the real thing.

She was arrested Thursday as she passed through customs at the Inner Harbor.

She told Ostler she was hesitant to plead guilty to the charge because such a plea would mean the alleged narcotic would never be analyzed and she was not sure it was really marijuana.

"I understand a lot of what people buy isn't what it's said to be," she told Ostler.

"I expect you'd have been disappointed if it wasn't marijuana," said the judge.

She finally pleaded guilty when told analysis at the Vancouver laboratories would take at least a week.

Mrs. Silver's husband had already returned to the United States, court was told.

Ostler fined her $350.

THE BARE BEGINNINGS OF TODAY'S Shinerama campaign by University of Victoria students were pretty slow due to wet and dreary weather downtown this morning. Volunteer shiner Marie Stillin looks eager to get down to work, but it looks like all Elaine Kwasney's feet could do with is a toenail shine. The students' shoeshining project is to raise funds for fight against cystic fibrosis. (William E. John photo.)

TOTALS SOAR AT MUSEUM

Attendance at the Provincial Museum has soared by 59 per cent for the first eight months of 1970, museum director Dr. J. Bristol Foster said Friday.

He said 650,682 visited the museum up to the end of August compared to 408,834 for the same period in 1969.

He said the addition of new exhibits currently planned or under construction combined with increased interest among tourists and school children will increase the figure in the future.

"With some astonishment," he said, the museum faces the possibility of having a million visitors in 1971.

Trustees 'Out of Line'

Two Saanich Peninsula school trustees today were accused of spreading "blatant misinformation" about the high operating costs of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

Greater Victoria trustee Peter Bunn said trustees Zachary Hamilton and G. M. Ewan were far out of line in their reported statement that Victoria is paying $25,000 in membership fees to the association.

Bunn said his board paid only $9,075 this year.

BCSTA president J. M. Campbell of Saturna Island said the association carried out a number of functions in the field of education and these were described recently in a letter to all school districts in the province.

Hamilton was reported to have said the association's budget for the coming year would be about $500,000 which was coming right from the taxpayer.

"I anticipate in 1971 about $411 million will be spent by the school boards and the association's budget will be a tenth of one per cent of that," Campbell said.

Campbell said there had to be an agency to promote in the minds of the public the positive interest of education and this was the association's function.

TAKING EXCEPTION

Ewan was reported as taking exception to the cost of the trustees' convention to be held in Victoria Oct. 11 to 14 in addition to fees.

Ewan said he could not see a single item on the agenda that would benefit Sooke students or the public at large and added that he would not spend his own money to attend let alone ask ratepayers to foot the bill.

Campbell said the importance of the convention with its $25 registration fee per delegate is for the trustees to get outside their own districts and gain ideas from other trustees.

He added that a function of the meeting was to decide on how to use the money of the association's budget and this was voted on by delegates.

He suggested that the two Saanich trustees attend the convention and present their objections to delegates.

Kuhn Hearing Date Set

Five days were set aside Friday for the provincial court preliminary hearing of a non-capital murder charge against Saanich contractor Egon Kuhn.

Judge William Ostler set aside a period from Oct. 15-21 to hear the case against Kuhn, charged with murdering business associate William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Kuhn was remanded to Sept. 25 for a statutory appearance.

Outfall Job Moves On

The second 1,500-foot length of steel sewer pipe was floated into a foggy Strait of Juan de Fuca from Macaulay Point this morning.

Charlie Archibald of Associated Engineering Services estimates the final length, which will extend the outfall to 6,100 feet into the Strait, will be in place Monday.

Will Lawther of Vancouver, manager of the firm's marine division, was on hand to watch progress of what he describes as "the longest, deepest steel outfall in North America."

He and Archibald said the only project of this type carried out in North America was an installation on the Mississippi River.

But it was much smaller and officials did not have to contend with tides and adverse weather conditions.

Lawther said the new Macaulay outfall, due to be in operation by the end of the year, has been designed to handle the estimated population growth for the next 50 years.

An additional 1,000-foot length bypass is included in the plans. This will allow repairs to be made to the 6,100-foot outfall, if they are ever needed, without disruption of services.

It could also be extended if density of the area's population in future years demanded increased services.

Lawther has high hopes that the sewage that will be dispersed at a depth of 210 feet will never reach the surface.

"It could well be like the big outfall in Seattle where the sewage hits a thermaclyne (barrier between layers of warm and cold water) and is prevented from reaching the surface."

He says there is no possible way the sewage "which will be dispersed in an almost colorless grey plume" can reach shore and cause pollution.

'Rich Playboy' on Pension Hit with Stiff Penalty

A 67-year-old man who lives on a $118 a month pension was fined $400 and prohibited from driving anywhere in Canada for nine months this morning in provincial court.

A young woman was escorted from the courtoom by a police officer when she burst out "My God!" after St. Jorre imposed the sentence.

"You were driving just blind, going all over the place. There could have been a dozen people killed," the judge said after being told Martin failed to stop for police and shot two red lights.

St. Jorre asked Martin if he could pay $100 a month on the fines.

"I only get $118," he replied.

'VERY LUXURIOUS'

"Your are only getting $118 but you were going around like a rich playboy — going through red lights, being chased by police," said the judge.

"You were engaged in a very luxurious form of living.

"We can't have this kind of thing going on. You'll kill yourself, you'll kill others."

St. Jorre told Martin to pay the fine in $50 monthly installments.

In another impaired driving case, a 39-year-old unemployed logger was sentenced to a total of nine months in prison and fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving, driving while under suspension and driving without insurance.

Court was told it was his fifth conviction for impaired driving since 1966 and his second conviction for driving under suspension.

"You're probably a hard working, decent person, but alcohol seems to be the bane of your existence," St. Jorre said before sentencing Borushko to six months on the impaired charge, three months on the second and ordering the minimum $250 fine for the insurance violation.

He ordered consecutive sentences.

"I'm not a thief, I'm an honest man," Borushko said, "My having a motor vehicle has always gotten me into trouble; I'm not going to own a vehicle again."

Insurance Agents Fight Government

Insurance agents will use "all the political muscle they possess" to fight government interference in their business, Victoria insurance man J. V. Harbord said Friday.

Manitoba's plans to take over the auto insurance business in that province next year is "just an example of doctrinaire socialism with no regard being taken for the public weal," he said.

MONOPOLY CREATED

Harbord assumes the association presidency at a time when the industry is facing problems in other areas too.

"There is a marked decline in the available insurance market as a result of inadequate rate structures," he said.

"The effect of this already has been felt by major industrial insurance buyers, some of whom have been forced to self-insure substantial amounts.

CONCERNED

"Agents and brokers are deeply concerned about this situation, and are determined to help alleviate it, but will require the co-operation of goverment, industry, insurers and brokers."

The association that controls 80 per cent of the $2 billion spent on general insurance annually elected him president at the annual meeting in Winnipeg this week.

He is past president of both the Victoria and B.C. Agents associations and former director and vice-president of the national association.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Sheer luxury from the waist down . . .

An elderly acquaintance of ours said not long ago that she considers panty hose the most important invention since that of the wheel . . . which gave us a laugh . . . but just goes to show that we're all wearing them, regardless of our ages! . . . The big trick, though, is to discover just the right panty hose for one's self from the multitude of types being offered . . . Impacts 'n' Imports have what we consider the cream of the crop . . . A new panty line on the market is called "Business Girl—Around the Clock" . . . One size fits everyone, whether you weigh in at 100 or 150 lbs. . . . They're sheer, have a nice soft feel and, we're assured, wear extremely well . . . The big feature, though, is the toe . . . an ingenious new shape that you can fold over and tuck under when you're wearing open-toed shoes . . . Only $1.50 for these panty hose . . . For you ladies who need a bit of help in keeping your tums in . . . I 'n' I have a new supply of "Hold-me-Tights" . . . the panty hose with built-in support . . . $3.50 a pair . . . Don't delay too long if you'd like some, because they're in great demand! . . . Other favorites are by Cameo . . . either bikini type or sheer . . . both priced at $2.50 . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Sharpen up your fashion sense at Eaton's . . .

Our visit to Eaton's Import Room the other day was like a shot of adrenalin . . . because happened we were a bit tired . . . and lacking in enthusiasm for looking at clothes . . . But we perked up in a hurry when we were shown a couple of Eaton's newest arrivals from Paris . . . You'd really have to be beyond all caring to remain indifferent to these beautiful French fashion interpretations! . . . A coat and a dress by Webe (should be a couple of accents on this but the printer doesn't have them) . . . actually have names! . . . Coat, called "Python", is in deep, dark chocolate brown . . . and big surprise are the crocheted sleeves (lined, of course, for warmth) . . . A matching snakeskin belt cinches the waist . . . Dress . . . same color . . . is named "Hulotte" . . . Has crochet stand-up collar, same as coat sleeves . . . and a deep wool fringe around the longuette skirt . . . Meant to be worn together . . . A stunning ensemble! . . . Philippe Vernet also interprets his superbly-cut pantsuit in dark brown worsted . . . Short-sleeved tunic top, straight pants, and long jacket in a very soft fabric printed in a coffee cream black and taupe block design . . . Soft crushed kid belt threaded through loops, rides low on the hips . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141, Local 242.

"The short dresses have everything in the world in their favor—the long dresses nothing" . . . complained a U.S. newspaper exactly 100 years ago!

For the woman who likes a conservative . . . yet contemporarily stylish shoe . . . with built-in comfort and light-weight foot support . . . we heartily recommend Murray Heel Huggers . . . new fall styles of which have now arrived at Munday's . . . All these shoes have lastex lining and elasticized inner binding . . . which makes for a good fit . . . heels and toes are pleasantly slim . . . and the $26.95 price tag is moderate . . . Among the new models are "Foursome" . . . a smart, simple pump with an overlay trim . . . brown or black calf . . . "Madrid" is cut quite high in front for the woman who likes her shoes fitting well up around the foot . . . Dark brown, black and navy calf, with faille collar and a faille and metal buckle . . . A very similar shoe with a little different buckle treatment comes in black patent . . . An excellent walking shoe which comes in wider fittings is named "Lady" . . . Black or brown grained calf . . . This latter model replaces an old favorite . . . "Melinda" is a black kid tie shoe . . . what we would call a dressy oxford . . . One more model which hadn't yet arrived when we were in . . . "Ringside" is a dressy shoe in medium heel height, with a double ring ornament on the side . . . a young-looking shoe . . . though, believe us, there's nothing matronly or "old lady-ish" about any of these Murray Teel Huggers! . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Economists at Chase Manhattan Bank estimate that a housewife's work is currently worth around $12,000 a year.

Fashion-wise clothes to greet autumn 1970 . . .

We really struck it lucky when we dropped in to Miss Frith's last week . . . They were in the throes of preparing a fashion show . . . and had rounded up some of their choicest fashions and the most exciting of the new arrivals . . . so we got a one-woman preview! . . . Talk about chic! The purple mid-coat collared, cuffed and bordered with curly white calgan is a show stopper if ever we saw one! . . . There's a celery green double knit ensemble we'd give our eye-teeth for . . . striped dress, solid colored tailored coat with gold filigree buttons . . . and only $129! . . . A pure llama coat with nicely detailed stitching, is in the new color, cognac . . . rich and mellow as fine Napoleon brandy . . . A luxurious worsted fabric in pale alabastair is used for a sleeveless dress and mink collared jacket . . . This ensemble comes with its own matching hat, and is nothing short of stunning . . . Another striking topcoat is a red, grey and black tweed simply dripping with silky black fox! . . . With this you might wear the exquisitely styled red Italian knit dress with the gored skirt whose action in motion makes you look like a dream walking . . . We took notes on several other exciting outfits too . . . but space runs out . . . So do go see for yourself what delicious fashions are on hand at . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

The prevalence of black in fall outerwear cries out for costume jewellery to give it the light it needs.

Just in is Pierre Berton's latest . . . first of a duet of volumes recounting the history of the C.P.R. . . . It's entitled "The Great National Dream" . . . Thoroughly researched . . . written in Berton's inimitable fashion, it reads like a novel . . . an engrossing document of Canadiana reconstructing an incredible decade . . . Nine maps . . . and priced at $10 . . . A first-rate man's gift, we'd say! . . . Another new and fascinating book is "The Tom Thompson Mystery" by William T. Little. It's a new slant on the 1917 unexplained disappearance of a Canadian artist who has since become famous . . . $6.95 . . . # The Groom's Mother Wore Sequins

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Everybody knows that many of the fashion rules have gone by the board, but there are times one wonders why.

I've just attended a wedding, by chance the first wedding I've been to in a number of years It was a formal wedding, the bride in white-gown-with train, four pretty bridesmaids in green, small nephew-of-the-groom as ring bearer, Catholic church, and so forth.

At that point, all decorum stopped. Never mind the fact of hatlessness. Apparently, that's all right nowadays. But several ladies arrived wearing black. Black has always been taboo at a wedding, naturally. Unfortunately, at this wedding it was particularly inappropriate because the groom happened to be the victim of a chronic disease. Were the ladies thriftily buying a dress for both the wedding and possible future use?

Then came the pants. Yes, pants in church, and at a formal wedding. No, they were not especially formal pants. One young woman was in pink knit that left nothing to the imagination and a bare tank top. Another guest, a matronly figure of a woman who should have known better, wore a white crepe jumpsuit with diamond-shaped cut-outs over her somewhat flabby midriff. A third lady thought see-through white lace pants-and-top were the thing.

After the pants some merely decollete evening gowns hardly caused one to blink but one did wonder what ever happened to the idea that a coverup should be worn when the dress was bare-topped.

And now the wedding party. The bride's mother wore a well-chosen gown of pale green organza, sleeved and with a covered top. But the groom's mother — ah, the groom's mother! Evidently, it was HER occasion, not the bride's. She was a vision, covered from neck to feet in violent blue sequins. Ann Corio herself never shimmered more on a runway than did the groom's mother down that aisle, especially as silver sequins adorned neckline and sleeves.

It would seem that today's bride is having a hard time outshining her guests. Perhaps one ought to send out instructions with the wedding invitations: "Please do not wear black. White is the bride's color. No pants, no bare tops . . ."

But how are you going to stop the groom's mother from wearing sequins?

DEAR ABBY . . .

Consider Baby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To start out with, I am an unwed mother. I kept my baby. Bobby is six months old now and is very sweet, but I don't feel I can give him the love and attention I should. You see, I work eight hours a day in a restaurant. It doesn't pay much. At night I usually have a date. I live with my family and they take care of Bobby. My father sort of shames me when I mention giving Bobby away. The only reason I kept the baby was I thought I would get his father to marry me. I am only 17 and want to live like other kids my age.

The boys have no respect for me and my girl friends let me know that they are better than me.

I would like to go back to school in another town and maybe start over again. Would it be so terrible to give my baby away? My folks can't give him much, and I think that giving him away would be the best way of showing him that I really loved him. Confused.

DEAR CONFUSED: I see your point, and appreciate your confusion, but let's consider the baby. An unwanted child is rarely fooled. He knows he is unwanted and he'll suffer because of it. Perhaps your parents love and want Bobby enough to raise him. They may not be able to provide him with material things, but if he is given love, he'll be all right.

You are honest to admit that you don't want the child, and think he deserves better. Perhaps giving him away is the solution. Talk it over with your parents.

DEAR ABBY: Is something wrong with my brother? He wears makeup. First he started to borrow my "blush" which is a pinkish tint for the cheeks. I thought he was just goofing around, but pretty soon I noticed that every time I wanted it, the blush was in my brother's room.

Next, he experimented with some of my liquid base. When I told him I thought it looked fakey, he said he was only fooling around and wouldn't use that stuff if he was going anywhere, but I noticed he did.

Now, I found out that he has bought his own! This really scares me, Abby. He is 15 and is a nice-looking boy. He has a real pretty complexion. Do you think using makeup will get him pimples? —His Sister.

DEAR SISTER: Not if he keeps his face clean. But worse than pimples are the jeers he may invite. Ridicule can be traumatic for a boy his age.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think my husband needs to see a head doctor? Or maybe I'm the one who should see one. Clem's brother called him in the middle of the night and told him that Rusty (Clem's dog) had died, so this nutty husband of mine threw on his clothes and drove 200 miles to go to bury a mutt. Do dogs have funerals, Abby? Rusty was an old dog, practically blind, and Clem had raised him from a pup, but in the two years we've been married Clem has lost aunts and uncles and he never went to any of their funerals.

Please tell me what you think of a man who will start driving 200 miles in the middle of the night just to bury a dog? Clem's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: A man's devotion for his dog cannot be measured in uncles and aunts. And if you think Clem is crazy, I know a lot of people who would be glad to pick that bone with you.

Law of Gravity Still Supporting Brassiere Industry

TORONTO (CP) — The trend towards bra-lessness is not hurting the foundation garment industry, says an executive of a lingerie company.

E. A. Turner, executive vice-president of the Gossard Foundation Company Ltd., says he is not worried about the trend.

"We're ahead in bras," he says.

He says most women cannot afford to be without a bra.

"Most girls can't resist the law of gravity. They're going to need some kind of support or they'll sag."

Mr. Turner says 18 out of 20 girls are walking around as "uncomfortalbe as hell" because they are wearing bras that don't fit properly. As far as he's concerned, it's all their own fault.

He says he doesn't know what keeps the women out of the fitting rooms, but buyers keep telling him girls are always insisting on 34-Bs whether that's their size or not.

It's like buying shoes you can't get you feet into, he says.

He says bra manufacturers now use soft materials that mould the figure as opposed to the old "structured" look. He mentions that now the coventional type of woman goes after the lacy, feminine garment.

Mr. Turner is not impressed by the young crowd, who go bra-less "because it's the thing to do." The industry, he says, has brought out the "nothing bra" for the type of girl he refers to as "the young rebel."

Paula Lewis, 21-year-old manager of The Store in Toronto's Yorkville district wears a bra only to work. She prefers going without around the house and when she's out on dates.

She goes to Women's Liberation rallies and opposes "the double standard that permits a man to run around as much as he wants, while a girl cannot."

New Feminist Judith Masters charges that the new soft, feminine look in bras is being used to emphasize that a woman is a woman, and once again its functional role is being played down.

Mary Lewkee, 20, who works in Yorkville's Junk Shop, doesn't even own a bra. However, she says her sister, a fashion model, wears one.

Mother of Six Gets Degree

In three years.

With six children.

"I wouldn't want to go through it all again," said Mrs. Williams, who this week became the third black teacher at predominantly white Normal Park elementary school here.

Mrs. Williams made it through the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga just in time to help her oldest child, Gregory, 18, pack for his freshman year at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Autistic Children: Trapped in a World of Their Own

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Thirty concerned parents have formed the Victoria Society for Autistic Children. Their goal is the establishment of training and educational facilities for their children.

They represent 20 known autistic children in the Victoria area who can find no place in the school system.

The society intends to prove that such children can be reached.

"I've always known he was in there if I could only get through to him," says Mrs. T. S. Cawsey of her handsome five-year-old son.

Most autistic children have average intelligence but are unable to cope with reality or relate to other human beings.

They pulse with undirected energy and frustration, erupting in seven or eight earth-shaking tantrums daily.

They are hyperactive, demanding, and enigmatic. Such a child will not react to his own name, but can hear a pillow slide to the floor. He will scream meaningless sounds for hours, oblivious of all attempts to distract him.

NO RELIEF

The tension created in the home by an autistic child is unending. Some sleep for only three or four hours at a stretch. Parents sleep in shifts for fear the child will damage himself or simply disappear.

Autism is an astounding bundle of paradoxes.

Preferring dark, lonely places, they are fascinated by light. For the autistic child—if he speaks at all—speech is not a means of communication but a private game with blank counters.

He will talk for hours in a private language that for him is as valid as normal communication. He is alone in his world and what he says is meant for his own ears.

Many parents report difficulty in convincing the family doctor that something is wrong. Time after time mothers have been told the child is just a bit slow for his age and they needn't worry.

HELP DELAYED

One mother suspected something was drastically wrong when her son was 18 months old. For three years she tried to convince her doctor, and succeeded only after throwing a magnificent tantrum of her own in his office.

She was hastily referred to a local specialist in child psychiatry, Dr. Phillip Ney.

Dr. Ney, a member of the faculty of medicine at UBC, works with autistic children and their parents at the Victoria Mental Health Centre. Experience with these children has convinced him that proper training and education can help them.

The embattled mother who won treatment for her son through sheer hysterics after sweet reason had failed found it well worth the effort.

For the first time she was instructed in proper training methods, with remarkable results. The boy now tries to communicate, while before he had refused to respond to words or echoed them senselessly.

His mother feels that his behavior has improved to the point where he would be ready to enter Grade 1 in a special school—if any were available.

Dr. Ney believes that "hypersensitive" is a more accurate description than "autistic." In his view such children receive so much sensory stimulation that in self-preservation they must block it out. He suspects that many of them are dampening down abilities that have much creative potential.

To preserve their fragile egos from a world that impinges with annihilating force, autistic children have learned to shut out everything that is not acceptable to them.

This means cutting themselves off from all love and communication.

Prisoners and rulers in their own lonely worlds, they recognize neither reality nor their own humanity. Like a fly in amber, their intelligence is frozen within layers of fear and withdrawal.

Teaching an autistic child that the real world is not a terrifying place takes patience and consistency. Dr. Ney favors training the person who has the most contact with the child, usually the mother. In a 10-week series of seminars he teaches the parents a method of "behavior modification."

EACH DIFFERENT

Desirable behavior is rewarded and reinforced while undesirable bahavior is ignored or punished. The handle varies for each child. A hug is a reward for one, but to another it could be a severe punishment.

The first step in training the child is to force eye-to-eye contact. Once this has been established the slow stages of communication can begin. When an autistic child is able to refer to himself as "I" and to describe his feelings he is considered as good as cured.

Parents have had remarkable results within the seminar's 10 weeks. One little boy ate with a spoon for the first time. A girl emerged from a dark closet to play in a carefully darkened room.

In Victoria there is no place for autistic children at any educational level. Public schools will not enrol them and the few private schools willing to accept them are beyond the means of most parents.

Tragically, the children find themselves in schools for the retarded or emotionally disturbed.

Mrs. Bridget Moncrieff, a social worker with the mental health centre, describes schools for the retarded as "the worst place for autistic children because they are outstanding mimics." At best they vegetate, at worst their condition deepens.

Two rooms have been offered at the Queen Alexandra Solarium. The society plans to set up a pilot program there to show the provincial government and local school boards that autistic children belong in the educational system.

With one trained teacher and five or six volunteers, Dr. Ney is convinced the children could enter ordinary classrooms in less than three years. Lacking this training they will be a charge on the community for life.

A school board official said first that the children were uneducable, and second that they could be educated for $25,000 to $50,000 per child. In view of Dr. Ney's proven successes in training the children of parents of modest means, the figures seem high.

Bulgarian Method Speeds Learning

TORONTO (CP) — Two women who have written a book called Psychic Discoveries Behind the Iron Curtain say they have discovered a teaching method in Bulgaria that "could catapult the undereducated ahead in a year instead of a decade."

The women, Sheila Ostrander and Lynn Schroeder, say the method was developed by Dr. Georgi Lozanov, director of the Institute of Suggestology and Parapsychology in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Miss Ostrander, a native of Winnipeg and Miss Schroeder, a former editor of Mademosielle magazine, spent several years behind the Iron Curtain doing research for their book which now is in its fourth printing.

HUNDREDS TEAM

Miss Ostrander says that at the Bulgarian institute records show hundreds of persons from all levels of society have learned entire two-year courses in as few as 20 days.

Tests made years later show that the students have retained the material learned, she adds.

The Lozanov technique, as they describe the teaching system, uses a mind-to-mind contact between pupil and teacher.

Dr. Lozanov, who is a psychiatrist and psychologist, describes the teaching program as acquiring an actual sixth sense.

CWL Urges Phosphate Ban

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — A ban on phosphate detergents and increased fines for polluters are being urged by the Catholic Women's League of Canada.

In resolutions passed Friday, delegates to the CWL annual meeting also agreed to urge the league's 120,000 members to buy only low-count phosphate detergents and cleaners.

The resolutions were voted on during the final day of the convention. About 300 delegates were attending.

They agreed to ask governments to take immediate action to halt pollution and voted to send their resolution to their counterparts in the United States to ask them to urge the same measure on their governments.

Delegates also agreed to ask the federal government to increase old age pensions annually to match consumer price index measures of cost-of-living increases and reaffirmed a 1969 resolution asking the federal government to resist pressures to relax the drug laws.

Feminists came under attack in discussion of a resolution asking that abortion laws not be made more permissive. Each league member will be urged to write to her member of Parliament, sending him a page from the Catholic Register that includes a fetus in the womb.

WANTS ACTION

Mrs. A. A. Boucher of Vancouver presented a resolution that local leagues start or support Birthright projects, as a positive way to oppose abortion.

Birthright, started in Toronto by Louise Summerhill, is a volunteer service that works with women who become pregnant against their wishes.

The woman is usually considering an abortion and Birthright volunteers attempt to steer her to counselling and concrete forms of assistance as an alternative.

Mrs. Boucher said Mrs. Summerhill has counselled 2,000 women in two years. Birthright has made a start toward organizing in Calgary, Montreal, Vancouver and Halifax.

It is not a Roman Catholic group exclusively, but Mrs. Summerhill has appealed to the CWL for financial help.

The delegates also approved a resolution that members petition network and local television to indicate in advertising and introduction to programs whether they are general, adult or restricted so that parents can decide whether they think their children should watch them.

Now is the time to have your children's eyes examined and if glasses are required, bring the prescription to PRESCRIPTION OPTICAL, where children receive special attention. CABBAGE SALAD RING

Tasty Vegetable Casseroles Begin With Boiled Cabbage

By HILDA BEASTALL

If you don't like or "can't eat" cabbage the reason may be traced to serving boiled cabbage as the only vegetable with boiled potatoes and roast beef.

There are other ways to prepare cabbage and many reasons why we homemakers should include this year-round green vegetable in meals.

Some reasons are tied up with nutrition, others with the low cost per serving, and still another the fact that cabbage can be bought fresh (or reasonably fresh, when imported) at any season.

Boiling wedges of cabbage head in lightly salted water is the first step to a variety of tasty, attractive dishes. Served as one of a collection of cooked vegetables it will be good just boiled with a tiny bit of butter on top.

Did you know that by leaving the pan uncovered during boiling the odor in the house is lessened. Try it. Boil rapidly, keeping the cabbage below water, until just tender but no longer.

Drain thoroughly but without breaking the pieces. It is then ready to use in several baked dishes.

CHEESE AND CABBAGE CASSEROLE

Cover cooked cabbage wedges with thick tomato slices, and top with grated cheese. Bake in 350 oven until slightly browned; the mixture will then be heated but not overcooked.

BACON AND CABBAGE CASSEROLE

Cover bottom of a 6x10-inch glass baking dish with thin slices of bacon. Arrange partly cooked cabbage wedges over these, then sprinkle with mixture of breadcrumbs and grated cheese.

A tasty top-of-the-stove dish combines raw shredded cabbage with thick slices of apple and thin slices of onion.

Cook in a little bacon fat in a fry pan for five minutes, then add salt and pepper, a teaspoon of brown sugar and about half a cup of hot water to a medium size pan.

Cover, and cook gently for 10 minutes or until apples are tender and most of liquid is absorbed.

Raw cabbage is more easily digested by many people than when cooked which helps to prove our point that desirable elements are lost in cooking.

Cole slaw and other raw cabbage salads have been popular on this continent for 50 years or more, before we began to need vitamins out of bottles.

While we still have local fresh cabbage, both red and green, is a fine time to start the family on this habit. Grated cabbage and grated apple with a teaspoon of grated onion, all mixed with a sour cream dressing and topped with chopped sunflower seeds makes any cold meat taste good. Or it is more marvelous for youngsters perhaps if heaped into a hamburger bun and topped with a slice of cold meat or chopped eggs.

For vitamin and mineral content essential for physical and mental well being, cabbage rates top in the list of vegetables when eaten raw. Cook it as little as possible to conserve these essentials and you'll still have something more interesting to eat than the old boiled cabbage.

Cabbage Served in the Raw

The cabbage plant was first cultivated a few thousand years ago and is still eaten today in one form or another in most countries of the world. Some authorities believe the word cabbage is an anglicanized version of the French word "caboche" which means head.

To make a Cabbage Salad Ring the home economists of the Canada Department of Agriculture mixed 4 cups finely shredded cabbage with 1 cup of ham cut in strips, 1 cup diced red apple, mixed it with ½ cup mayonnaise and packed it into a ring mold. While it was "setting" in the refrigerator they made a grated carrot-peanut combination to put in the centre.

GREEN AND GOLD SLAW

2 cups shredded cabbage.
¼ cup chopped green onion.
¼ cup diced cucumber.
2 tbsp. chopped sweet pickle.
6 chopped hard-cooked eggs.
2 tsp. prepared mustard.
2 tsp. cider vinegar.
¾ tsp. sugar.
¼ cup salad dressing or mayonnaise.
½ tsp. salt.

Mix vegetables, pickle and egg. Chill. Just before serving combine mustard, vinegar and sugar with salad dressing. Add to salad and toss lightly. Season with salt. (Makes six servings.)

CABBAGE AND BEET SALAD

1 19-ounce can diced beets, drained.
¼ cup finely chopped onion.
1 tsp. salt.
⅛ tsp. pepper.

SOUR CREAM DRESSING

⅓ cup dairy sour cream.
2 tsp. vinegar.
⅛ tsp. salt.
Dash pepper.

Mix vegetables, salt and pepper. Chill. Combine ingredients for dressing. Just before serving, add dressing to vegetables and toss to coat pieces. Serve on lettuce or green cabbage leaves. Makes six servings.

COLE SLAW AND CARROT RING

4 cups finely shredded cabbage.
1 cup cooked ham, cut in thin strips.
1 cup finely chopped unpeeled red apple.
½ cup mayonnaise
1½ tsp. prepared mustard.
½ tsp. sugar.
½ tsp. vinegar.
⅛ tsp. salt.
Dash pepper.
1 cup finely shredded carrots.
¼ cup chopped peanuts.
2 tbsp. mayonnaise.

Mix cabbage, ham and apple. Combine the ½ cup mayonnaise, mustard, sugar, vinegar, salt and pepper. Add to cabbage mixture and toss to coat pieces. Pack salad firmly into ring mold and chill in refrigerator at least one hour. Combine carrots, peanuts and remaining mayonnaise and chill until serving time. Unmold cabbage salad on serving dish and fill centre with carrot mixture.

Health Costs Discussed

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Increasing costs of general health services were discussed at closed meetings Thursday and Friday of health ministers from eight provinces, senior provincial health officials and an observer of the federal government.

No decisions were made by the forum which also discussed many items in the fields of hospitals and medical care.

Primarily a vehicle for an exchange of ideas on a policy level, the forum reviewed various viewpoints.

It was decided the health ministers would meet in 1971 in Newfoundland.

Saigon Chief Still Plans U.S. Visit

SAIGON (AP) — A senior aide to Nguyen Cao Ky said today the South Vietnamese vice-president is not reconsidering his visit to the United States to attend a March of Victory rally, and his decision right now is "irreversible."

"He will tell the American people why we are fighting," said Col. Phan Van Minh, Ky's chief of staff. "He is not reconsidering. He is all set to go. We are working on his speech. All arrangements have been made."

Ky will leave here Tuesday, stopping off first in Paris where he is the chief of the South Vietnamese delegation to the peace talks. He has boycotted the talks for 18 months. From Paris, Ky is scheduled to fly to the United States, arriving in Washington Oct. 1.

The March for Victory rally is scheduled for Oct. 3 in Washington. It is sponsored by Rev. Carl McIntyre, a fundamentalist radio preacher.

CNR Exempts U.S. Firm

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Canadian National Railways said Friday that Westours Inc. of Seattle will be exempt from new docking charges here pending a review, and probable reduction, of the new tariffs.

Westours had threatened to bypass the port in 1971 unless the new scale of charges was reduced. It said the new charges would mean a bill of about $600 a stop, compared with about $43 under the old scale.

The company has three ships which use the port on Seattle-Alaska cruises. It uses CNR facilities about 60 times a year and city officials say tourists spend $2,000 to $3,000 here each time.

Old-Type Publican Is Still Around

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON — The publican's disposition seemed akin to that of a short-tempered snapping turtle.

"Stop fiddlin' with the food," he barked at two long-haired youths who were toying with cheese and ham rolls on the bar counter.

The long-haired ones drank up their beer and left with a rather injured air. And really they had been no more fastidious about the food on display than many short-haired customers. It was clear the publican didn't like them, or their kind.

"Make me sick," he said. "We used to get men in here — real men who served their country in wartime. Now we get these drips. Think they own the country yet go around braggin' they wouldn't fight for it."

Exchange Yarns

This, of course, was the old-type publican. Served in Holland in the Second World War and was wounded at Nijmegen. Afterwards a London brewery firm saw his potentialities and he catered happily to hundreds of his own kind — leather veterans who enjoyed their pints of bitter and exchanged many a salty yarn over them.

Now this same pub had changed. The photos of famous music hall stars that once adorned its faded walls — Gracie Fields, Vera Lynn, Harry Tate, Stanley Holloway, George Formby — had gone and in their place were entertainers of the new Beatle era. Gone the white bow ties and shimmering gowns. These newcomers had maxi-hair and mini-skirts. And they suited the new clientele at The Blue Board.

Wartime Flavor

"Blue Bore," the old publican called it, and he was obviously out of his element. They should have moved him to The Grapes — an old-timers' pub that still keeps its wartime flavor, even if a few of the long-haired ones do slip in now and then. You'll find it at Oxford Circus behind that famous music hall, the London Palladium.

The Grapes is largely famous for the fact it has no gentlemen's toilet and the gentlemen are required to use the convenience of a rival pub across the street.

The ladies use the bathroom in the publican's private apartment over the bar. This state of affairs has existed for more than 200 years and, so far, no one has complained.

Show Went On

It was during the Flying Bomb era of 1944, when serving in London with the Canadian Army, that I first discovered The Grapes. In September of that year, producer George Black dared to put on the first full-dress musical show London had seen since the early days of the Second World War.

And, true to the grim tenets of British justice, he was heavily fined for obtaining theatrical costumery from the Black Market. But the show went on and it ran for more than two years — well into the days of peace.

... In One Heap

Into The Grapes, night after night, came a strange miscellany of human beings: leading men in tails and white ties; ladies in flowing gowns, chorus girls in short skirts, musicians in tuxedos, men and women in service uniforms, street vendors in cloth caps and scarves, but drivers, shop assistants and — the occasional bum.

We were an odd assortment of humanity, linked by a common bond — danger. Germany' flying bombs were crashing all about us and the tenure of our stay "here below" seemed decidedly precarious.

There was the historic night when a V-1 flying bomb came particularly close and, obeying some primitive but fraternal impulse, we all tried to pull each other down.

The tails and white ties, the evening gowns, the cloth caps, the service caps, the busmen's uniforms, all descended in one democratic heap to the floor.

The bomb exploded about 1,000 yards away and a whole office block was wiped out. But we, in The Grapes, suffered only a severe shaking. A window was blown in, but its fast-flying fragments injured no one.

We picked ourselves up, dusted ourselves off and a handsome man in tails and white tie celebrated our survival by calling a toast. He was Debroy Somers, a veteran military bandmaster who had adapted himself to theatre music and was conducting the George Black Show at the Palladium. He was a man of ebullience with a kind of magnetic charm and a number of servicemen gathered round him at the bar.

If You Survive

Some of us beefed about the rigors and restrictions of service life.

"I know how you feel" he said. "But if you survive this mess you'll be better men for it. Any success I've had in music I owe to the discipline of army training. And, believe me, that didn't come naturally."

Later I discovered that Debroy Somers had taken his military discipline with him when he entered the theatre. On the job he had to be called "Sir". In the pub he was plain "Bill" to anyone who cared to talk with him, including his own musicians, and he would listen to their troubles by the hour.

Poor Bill! He lost both his son and daughter in the war. And the day his boy was drowned at sea, while serving with the Royal Navy, he appeared as usual with his orchestra at the Palladium and was rewarded with a great burst of applause from a sympathetic audience.

In The Grapes that night, Debroy Somers proposed a toast to all the boys and girls who had died in the war.

Then he broke down.

Garden Waste Disposal Short-Sighted Move

By JACK BEASTALL

The disposal of garden waste seems to be a problem for some gardeners.

Garden waste is a term used to cover all plant material which has served its purpose as far as the gardener is concerned. It may be top growth that has withered, leaves that have dropped, or plants that are to be discarded.

By mid-September the waste dumping trips begin. Half ton trucks, utility trailers, and passenger cars with overflowing trunks are seen on roads and highways, the drivers searching for convenient dumping spots, public or private.

Each day gardeners in residential areas trundle wheelbarrows of garden waste to the nearest vacant lot.

* * *

Every face, of driver or wheelbarrow jockey, has that look of complete satisfaction that comes when a sticky problem has been solved.

A strange sidelight to these dumping picnics is frequently observed. Many disposers of garden waste have a continual complaint about the poor soil in their gardens and poor growth on their plants. Others search for "good top-soil" because their own soil has gradually reverted to sand or clay.

None seem to realize the very materials they so happily dump on another man's property are the essential ingredients of the medium for plant growing we call "soil."

The fact their gardens are slowly reverting to clay or sand shows the humus or fibre content has been used and the base materials predominate.

All that is necessary is to add the missing ingredient to the base materials and we are back to soil. The missing ingredient is the garden waste that has been dumped in the bush.

* * *

A few years ago I was called to a garden to determine, if possible, the cause of extremely poor growing conditions.

During conversation the owner expounded his philosophies on life, quoting frequently the inevitable dust to dust cycle.

Asked if he had applied these beliefs to plants he pointed out that animals and plants belong to a lower plane of life and cannot be compared with man.

Here I disagreed. The dust unto dust story is the basis of successful gardening. Our garden soils started as particles of rock disintegrated by the elements, or climate. Some rocks gave particles that remain separated which we call sands, others gave fine powders we classify as clays.

Crude plant forms added waste materials to these sands and clays and the result was the beginning of soil.

Over the ages higher forms of plant life were able to succeed, every plant donating discarded portions to make more soil.

* * *

When vegetation had become plentiful, animals appeared adding their waste materials and carcasses to enrich the accumulation of soil.

This mixture of sands, clays, mineral rocks, plant and animal wastes are the covering material of the properties we call our gardens.

In this mixture we sow and plant, producing gardens with variable degrees of success.

The scientist can tell us the percentage of each ingredient present in a given kind of soil, that is, in clay-loam, heavy, medium and light loams, and sandy-loam. By changing the percentages we change the type of soil.

The clay, sand, and mineral rock content of any soil remains fairly constant, but the fibre content changes every day.

In a good loam we have a high percentage of fibre (or humus) which comes from animal and vegetable wastes.

Most of this fibre is converted by soil organisms into its chemical components. Some is destroyed by oxidation and heat. Each process serves to reduce the amount of fibre left in the soil.

Here we have plant wastes converted into chemicals that make possible the growth of other plants: Dust unto dust.

Every inch a plant grows, every bit of air and warmth that has penetrated the soil, every flood of water over the surface, has reduced the fibre content of the soil. The lower the fibre content the poorer the soil.

Since soils are classified by percentages of their ingredients, we can obviously change any existing soil by changing one or more of these percentages.

As fibre is used so the soil type changes. Any fibre and we come back to the original condition. Add more fibre than the original soil contained and we have better soil.

* * *

Fibre, as we said before, is plant and animal wastes. The plant wastes are the problem gardeners overcome by fall excursions to country dumps, trips to the vacant lot, or rubbish fires.

Overcoming the problem this way starts another problem — loss of the fibre content in the home garden soil.

Fibre is essential in a soil for other reasons than supplying food for growing plants.

In sands it has a binding action which makes the texture more solid. In clays it has an opning acion which allows better aeration and drainage. In other words it improves the mechanical condition of a soil.

* * *

In all soils, fibre holds moisture in its sponge-like pieces for growing plants to draw upon when needed. It decreases the need for frequent applications of water (sprinkling) which tend to pack the surface and exclude the air needed by healthy roots.

Call it what you wish, fibre, humus or compost, it is an essential ingredient of soil, and soil is the medium we must have before we can make a garden.

Tips for Home Gardeners

WEEK'S WORK

Plant all evergreen shrubs, both conifers and broadleaved: skimmia, aucuba, pieris, drimys, rhododendron, juniper, thuya, chamaecyparis.

Reduce water for the tuberous begonias outdoors and the fuchsias. They will continue blooming until frost or heavy rain.

Perennial asters will be blooming now. Remove clusters of flowers as they brown off, and other side shoots will take over for another week or two.

Plant tuberous anemones of single and double forms to give fine flowers from late March to June. They like sunny well drained soil, rich in humus.

Also plant other tuberous anemones, smaller and daintier for rock crevices — A. apennina, A. blanda.

Montbretia (Tritonia) corms can be lifted for division now if crowded. Choose medium sized corms and plant singly in groups.

All ripe and nearly ripe tomatoes can be picked now if frost threatens in your district. Gather all squash before frost. Pumpkin will take a little frost, as will sweet corn.

Winter of Discontent in Australia

By STEWART HARRIS

CANBERRA, Australia (NYT) — Australia is coming out of a winter of severe industrial discontent which resulted in a record number of disputes in the first quarter of 1970 and almost two million lost working days in 1969.

Even in Canberra, where industry is not much noticed, the citizens were shocked by a recent nurses' strike, and almost crippling oil refinery strike, protest meetings against the budget last month, and recently, power restrictions in Melbourne and dirty dishes at Sydney airport because of a strike by the catering staff.

The situation in Australia is not as bad as it is in Britain but Minister of Labor Billy Snedden has been talking about "wage-push inflation," and appears depressed by the claim for a general wage increase of $9 (Australian) which was lodged recently with the Arbitration Commission by Bob Hawke, President of the Australian Council of Trade Unions.

BLAME AND PRAISE

Hawke, 40, succeeded the elderly Albert Monk on Jan. 1 and many people blame or praise him far too much for what is happening.

After 20 years of conservative government in Australia, Hawke believes it is time for more social and economic justice. He means to ameliorate the quality of life of the worker. He believes that the worker is not getting enough of Australia's Gross National Product, which has risen by an average of 6 per cent (at constant prices) in the last four years.

Hawke is determined to use Australia's conciliation and arbitration system to get higher wages, and he is arguing that the "profitability" of an industry, must be one new factor taken into account when wages are determined.

The time is opportune for this argument. Although average earnings have increased by 7 per cent and 8 per cent in the past two years, which is the most rapid increase in 20 years, company profits have been going up much faster, by 13 per cent and 14 per cent, as the new treasurer, Leslie Bury, pointed out in his budget speech.

The Wonderful World of Animals

NATIONAL DOG WEEK
9-20 Bal

By DR. FRANK MILLER

"Deserve to be Your Dog's Best Friend" by giving him proper and adequate training so that he can take his rightful place in a human-dominated society. Man's best friend is having a rought time of it lately in some circles. One group points accusingly at the apparently increasing number of packs of dogs roaming city streets, potentially capable of attacking human. Nightmare material, this, that makes for sensational, scary reading. In truth, this problem is — so far, at least — rarely encountered. But the incidence of bite cases is reportedly increasing; if this is so, it's because more and more dogs are coming into the world.

Still other dog detractors in the U.S. point with vehemence to something close to home — their homes. The real menace, they say, is pollution. Dogs are doing it everywhere. Sidewalks are becoming unsafe to step on, park picnic areas impractical for their original purpose. The resenters have proposed a simple and admittedly affective answer to the problem: Shoot The Dogs! Their philosophy is understandable. They want to pollute this planet their way. And they simply can't stand any obvious (though comparatively ineffectual) competition.

The clamor of the anti-dog people thus grows louder. Answers can and must be found — by those of us who love dogs. We must accept the responsibility for our dogs' behavior. If we don't, the fault is ours and we don't deserve the joy of owning a canine pet.

DEAR DR. MILLER: The trouble is with my aquarium plants. They've always had plenty of light and yet they turn yellow. A friend suggested adding fish fertilizer to the tank for the plans. I tried it. It was a mistake. The fish hated it, so much, in fact, that all but two of them died. The plants loved it, though. They began to turn green in about a week or so. Next time the plants turn yellow, is there such a thing as a fertilizer for them that won't kill the fish?—S.E.

DEAR S.E.: Yes, aquarium plants tend to need a little supplementation occasionally. Yellow leaves generally indicate a deficiency in some of the trace minerals, a condition that can be remedied by several conditioners now on the market. Obviously, it's best to stick with something sold for the specific purpose. Certainly, you should not fertilize a fish tank with anything not specifically designed to spare the fish while sprucing up the greenery.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Nellie, my parakeet, drives me crazy biting her fingernails. She chews on her nails making this grating, snapping sound that really gets to me. Why does she do this and what can I do to stop her.—L.C.

DEAR L.C.: It depends on whether Nellie's nibbling is pure perversity, a penchant for pedicures, or a problem of parasited pinkies. If boredom is a factor, giving Nellie something better to do, be it exercise, change of location, or improved TV programs (that's a tough one) could be helpful. If the toes are actually irritated and inflammed, Nellie's nearest parakeet podiatrist should have a look.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Last year about this time, our dog and cat really got snowed under with fleas, so we attempted this year to use flea collars on both of them. But we've heard so many damaging and conflicting stories about the use of these flea collars that we are hesitating. Do you advise their use? Or not?—G.O.

DEAR G.O.: Plastic flea collars do a good job in most cases of controlling fleas in both the dog and the cat, but unquestionably, these collars can cause problems, especially if improperly used. In susceptible animals, they may cause poisoning if used under any circumstances. To minimize reaction risk, let the new collar air out for a couple of days before applying it to the animal. Use only cat collars on cats or very small dogs and circle the neck only one time with the collar. Let it hang loosely on the neck, allowing room under it for two or three fingers comfortably. Cat collars, in my opinion, should have a stretchable section or be deliberately cut and sewn together with two weak threads so that it will snap if snagged, thus preventing the collar from becoming a hangman's noose. This is particularly indicated for the outdoor cat. Flea collars should not be used on very young dogs or kittens.

PROTEST MARCHERS DEFY AUSSIE POLICE

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Vietnam moratorium demonstrators marched through major Australian cities Friday despite government opposition to traffic-disrupting protest rallies.

Scores of arrests were made in Sydney — mainly for offensive behavior and refusal to obey police instructions — where 6,000 demonstrators chocked homegoing traffic with a three-mile march along city centre streets.

In Adelaide more than 100 arrests were made and four people were taken to hospital.

WILL PRESS GOVERNMENT

UBCM Backs Local Pubs Idea

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

PENTICTON — B.C. municipalities voted Friday to press the provincial government to allow the establishment of neighborhood pubs.

At the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention meeting here, delegates turned down a recommendation of the UBCM executive to vote against the pub resolution sponsored by Port Moody.

The executive said liquor outlets should remain in the downtown sections of municipalities.

The resolution's request for neighborhood pubs was along the lines suggested by the Morrow royal commission on liquor completed earlier this year.

The resolution, adopted at the final session of the UBCM convention, stated that it is an "established fact of social behavior that a considerable number of people consume alcoholic beverages and also exercise their privilege to drive an automobile, resulting in needless death and carnage on the highways."

★ ★ ★

During debate on the resolution, Mayor Norman Wild of Port Moody noted that "as we have seen here in the last few days, people do drink," and there should be no reason to vote against such a resolution.

The resolution asked for "permissive" legislation to allow individual councils to decide whether they wanted neighborhood pubs.

Councils with "peculiar, old-fashioned views" could ignore the opportunity if they wished, said Wild.

The convention in its final day also passed resolutions requesting:

Establishment of car testing stations in all communities of 10,000 people or greater;

A conference to redraw the Canadian constitution that would include representation of the municipalities;

1972 HOST NAMED BY UBCM

Times Staff

PENTICTON — Vancouver will be host to the 1972 annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Delegates to this year's annual convention meeting in Penticton's Peach Bowl convention centre voted to accept Vancouver's invitation, refusing that of the regional district of Okanagan-Similkameen.

The 1971 convention will be held in Victoria, a decision made last year by the 1969 convention, which turned down a Vancouver invitation then.

Police Abuse Protest Blocked

PENTICTON — Mayor Courtney Haddock's attempt to get protection for police against abusive language was refused a hearing Friday by the Union of B.C. Municipalites.

Haddock's resolution came too late to be in the official resolutions book but he said prior to the annual convention of the UBCM meeting here he was certain delegates would be interested.

Haddock wanted UBCM to press Canada's provincial attorneys-general to seek a change in the criminal code making it an offence punishable bu summary conviction to direct abusive language such as "pigs" at policemen on the job.

The UBCM executive refused Haddock a request to put the resolution before the convention anyway. Another late resolution was allowed.

Knowing in advance about the exectuvie decision, Haddock attempted to present a motion from the floor that the convention consider all three late resolutions.

Haddock's attempt was foiled by another resolution to consider only the one approved by the executive.

The mayor said later the refusal was "rather an indictment . . ." for the executive to "arbitrarily" refuse his resolution.

Ducks Poisoned

CALGARY (CP) — Between 2,000 and 2,500 ducks have been afflicted by botulism, a form of food poisoning, at Lake McGregor 60 miles east of here. A spokesman for the Canadian Wildlife Service advised hunters Friday not to take game from the area until cold weather kills the toxin-producing bacteria.

Mystical Religious Experiences Achieved Without Hallucinogens

NEW YORK (CP) — Two researchers using psychedelic sounds, lights and pictures say that people can have mystical religious experiences without the use of drugs.

The husband-and-wife team of Robert E. L. Master and Jean Houston say that "altered states of consciousness" so produced could become a normal part of North American church life.

The researchers are directors of the Foundation of Mind Research in New York City.

They contend that mystical experiences are possible for ordinary individuals.

"People think that mystics are cut off from the world, but actually the opposite is true," said Miss Houston. "The capacity for religious experience—including a deep feeling of unity with the universe — is built into human nature.

Masters and his wife arrived at their conclusions after years of scientific investigation of the psychological effects of psychedelic drugs on normal individuals. They found that some persons reported effects similar to mystical experiences.

In 1966, they published Varieties of Psychedelic Experience: The First Comprehensive Guide to the Effects of LSD on Human Personality.

The book is widely regarded as an authoritative analysis of the levels of consciousness achieved during psychedelic experiences.

Just as it was published, however, LSD became unavailable to most scientific researchers and the team bgan experimenting with non-chemical means of inducing psychedelic experiences.

These included "sensory overload" in which a subject is immersed in sound and light from colored slides; an "altsered state of consciousness induction device" whereby a blindfolded individual stands in a metal swing or pendulum that suspends his normal contact with the physical world; guided meditation in which subjects are given ideas or visual images — such as concentric circles or pictures of their bodies becoming smaller and smaller — and led through experiences such as symbolic death and rebirth.

The two researchers reported in an interview that such techniques have given many persons profoundly religious and mystical visions and experiences.

Miss Houston said that one area for practical application of their findings would be in worship services.

"If we can get the effects we do in laboratories, imagine what would happen in a sacramental setting where there were sacred symbols, high expectations of religious experience and strong authoritative figures such as clergymen," she said.

Adventist Program 'With It'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's on the wild side, sponsors admit. But the teenagers dig it. And they're snapping it up and calling for more.

"You don't catch fish with cement," says Pastor Harold M. S. Richards of Glendale, Calif., director of the board-casting arm of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, and in charge of the new program.

It's called "They Way Out."

It enlists the way-out styles of youngsters—their hard rock sounds, their flashy psychedelic colors and their monosyllabic hip lingo—to hook them on the truths of Jesus instead of drugs, astrology, vibrations and incense.

He "knows where it's at . . . about love and peace and digging life and each other," says one brochure. "He was on a genuine love trip without the use of artificial stimulants or religious coverups."

The program, developed by the Voice of Prophecy, the Adventists' 40-year-old broadcasting operation, was spot tested from February to June on eight of about 40 top rock 'n' roll stations in the United States and drew heavy response.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Bonhoeffer the Prophet Of Religionless Christianity

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

In 1953 a small book was published in England under the title, Letters and Papers from Prison. The author, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, was a German theologian who at the age of 39 had been hanged by the Gestapo in April 1945 because of his active oppositon to Hitlerism.

Within a year or two it had become the most discussed book in religious circles and its martyred author soon become one of the dominant forces in the making of the new Christian consciousness. (This book is available as a low-priced Fontana paperback.)

An earlier book, The Cost of Discipleship, first published in English in 1948, was well received in religious circles, but it was the success of Letters and Papers from Prison that raised Bonhoeffer to prophetic status.

During the past fifteen or so years a Bonhoeffer industry has developed. Books on him pour from the presses in intimidating profusion. Many doctoral dissertations have been written on his thought.

During the sixties he was a pretty up-with-it preacher who did not quote him at least seven or eight times a year in his preaching. Some students became ardent Bonhoefferites.

●

He is probably best known to the general public for his notion of "religionless Christianity". And that phrase has led to some curious misunderstandings. It has been taken by some to be a call for taken by some to be a callfor the abandonment of all the structures and trappings of institutional Christianity.

But that is not what Bonhoeffer had in mind. He did not think that a purer, more authenitic Christianity would come from the abolition of conventional Christianity.

Rather, he was asking his fellow Christians to remove from their religion the "religiosity" which obscures it and can eventually destroy its reality. ("Religiosity" can be defined as the affectation of being extremely religious: it is a matter of religion growing in on itself and becoming stagnant.)

●

Bonhoeffer condemned the ingrown piety which presumes on itself and is not actively concerned for the sufferings and needs and anxieties of all men, which will not fight injustice and cruelty everywhere. But he was a champion of biblical preaching. He was stauchly sacrasacramentalist.

He promoted private prayer and group worship. He contended that the devotions and disciplines of faith are necessary if faith is to be effective in the world.

He called for the radical reassessment and reorientation of the structures and practices of the Christian religion and for the dropping of the excess baggage which it had accumulated through the years.

●

Bishop J. A. T. Robinson, the Honest-to-God man, described Bonhoeffer as "the John the Baptist of the new Reformation." Incidentally, some of the most penetrating and appreciative studies of Bonhoeffer have come from Roman Catholic theologians.

Letters and Paper from Prison is a stimulating introduction to his general perspective: it is not heavy with theological terminology and can be read without too much strain. And if you read it and wish to read more of this modern prophet you might then try The Cost of Discipleship — rather heavy, but worth the effort of reading.

Two splendid biographies of Bonhoeffer have appeared recently. Mary Bosanquet's The Life and Death of Dietrich Bonhoeffer (Musson. $8.95) is written in an easy style.

Appreciably heavier (more than 800 pages, and excellently illustrated) is the biography by Eberhard Bethge (Collins. $18.95). Betrge was an intimate friend, and it was to him that Bonhoeffer addressed the letters he wrote in prison which Bethge afterwards edited and had published.

Communist China Now Producing Medium-Range Jet Bombers

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

Communist China is now producing its own medium-range twin-engine jet bomber able to carry nuclear weapons to targets 1,500 miles beyond its borders, says highly reliable U.S. sources.

The aircraft is a Chinese copy of the Russian TU-16 "Badger" that has been in service in large numbers with Soviet air forces since 1955.

Initial production versions of the plane—the first jet bomber ever manufactured inside mainland China—were recently spotted by high-flying U.S. reconnaissance craft, either satellites or U-2s.

American weapons experts estimate the Chinese may be able toproduce four of five TU-16s a month at the most, but say it is too early to tell whether they have made any improvements in the plane's performnce over the Russian version.

OBSOLESCENT

The Soviet TU-16 can fly at about 590 miles per hour.

By Western standards, however, the Badger is considered obsolescent. It would have trouble getting through any modern air defence system composed of high-speed fighters and surface-to-air missiles.

If a few did get through, however, they could cause considerable damage. The Badger can carry 20,000 pounds in its bomb bay, which means each aircraft can probably handle several small nuclear weapons in the 20-kiloton class, about the same explosive power that was used by the United States over Nagasaki in August, 1945.

Though the plane presents no threat to the U.S. mainland, several major Russian cities fall within its range, as do Soviet military concentrations along the 4,200-mile common border with Red China.

Targets in all of Southeast Asia, Japan, Korea, Taiwan and the Philippines would also be within striking distance.

Britain's Institute for Strategic Studies has recently estimated that the Chinese have enough nuclear material on hand to make about 150 atomic bombs.

Ironically, it was the Russians who got their erstwhile friends into the Badger business, supplying a few TU-16s in the late 1950s to the Chinese and helping set up a factory to produce them.

After Soviet technicians pulled out in 1960, however, the Chinese apparently had difficulty in mastering production techniques, for large aircraft, as well as financial troubles.

Until now, the primary means available to the Chinese to deliver nuclear weapons has been about 150 obsolete Russian-built Il-28 "Beagle" light bombers.

Also delivered before Sino-Soviet relations reached the breaking point in 1960, these craft are now some 20 years old, can fly about as fast but only half as far as the Badger and can carry only one-fourth of its payload.

The Chinese have also been striving to develop both medium range (1,200-1,500 miles) and intercontinental range ballistic missiles but both programs have run into trouble and neither is operational yet, according to Pentagon estimates.

TECHNICAL PROBLEM

U.S. intelligence had estimated nuclear-tipped MRBs would be in Chinese hands by 1967, based on a fast and highly successful nuclear test program which included in October, 1966, lofting an atomic warhead 400 miles down a test range aboard a modified Soviet missile, also provided earlier.

Several reasons for the NRBM delay have been advanced; trouble with the missile guidance system, disruption of work by chairman Mao's Red Guards, and an alleged decision to skip the first version and go on to a better one.

Well informed sources, however, now believe the principal problem has been technical, and remain convinced that deployment of operational MRBMs is close at hand.

The decision to forge ahead with the TU-16 may have come as an insurance measure when the MRBM development ran into trouble, but some defence analysts believe the Chinese have accepted the idea of having a mixed force of missile and bomber weapons.

Furthermore, the fact that scarce financial resources have been used to produce a medium-range bomber is seen by some China-watchers in this country as evidence that Chinese leadership indeed decided several years ago to concentrate upon strengthening their regional military capability as best they could, rather than attempting to make an even more costly and uncertain leap directly into ICBMs.

Analysts believe a growing realization that Russia had replaced the U.S. as the principal nuclear threat to China was instrumental in shifting Chinese attention closer to home.

Helping the decision along, however, was the massive American involvement in a land war at China's doorstep, and U.S. bombing of North Vietnam which, on several occasions, came very close to the Chinese border.

Once deployed, medium-range nuclear weapons, especially missiles which can reach Russian cities and against which there is no defence at this point, would probably serve as an effective deterrent against the Soviets, it is reasoned.

The United States could be held at bay by the spectre of several non-Communist nations in Asia held hostage by the threat of Chinese nuclear retaliation.

WHY OAK BAY?
Why indeed. Oak Bay has much to offer. Charm, for instance, to go with its stability. Vitality underlies its quiet dignity. This well-established municipality provides unquestionable value for your tax dollar.
Case in point — This 3-bedroom home, situated in an area of well-groomed curved streets has almost 1600 sq. ft. of comfortable living space. Included are two beautifully panelled and fully carpeted basement rooms. This would total five-bedrooms, or, with the adjoining three-piece bathroom, provide a comfortable well-lit basement in-law suite. Drive-in garage provides ample space for tools, work bench. Parks, golf, schools and shopping, are close at hand. Asking price is $31,000.

NOT FOR CHILDREN!
But for those seeking a spacious older home with a MAGNIFICENT PANORAMIC SEA VIEW in South Oak Bay, this is an unusual opportunity. This well-built home offers 5 rooms on the main floor and two additional bedrooms on the 2nd. It is built upon over ½ acre of property which faces two streets and offers excellent subdivision possibilities. Average size of the lot is 85 frontage by 315 ft. in depth. Certainly some renovations would be required to restore the dwelling to modern standards, however this has been allowed for in the very realistic price of —

POLICE COURT

They had tried to steal a pair of women's leotards worth $10.50 from Woodwards on Thursday.

Charles Edward Manson, 19, and Olesia Papish, 23, told court they had been living on Salt Spring Island for the past two weeks and hoped to settle there.

Miss Olesia gave her home town as Winnipeg, Manson said he was from England.

"You could have avoided all of this by behaving honestly," Ostler said and fined each one $300.

★ ★ ★

John Freeman, 19, of 2997 Brighton, was fined $350 when he pleaded guilty to possession of one marijuana cigarette Friday.

★ ★ ★

"The good Lord will provide," Edward Carlson, 49, of Vancouver, told police officers when they asked if he had any finances.

New B.A. Program Offered

University of Victoria's faculty of fine arts this fall will offer a new degree program for a B.A. in history in the arts, Dean Peter Garvie announced this week.

Garvie said the new degree would serve the needs of students not studying to become performing or practising artists.

"We have recognized for some time the need in the arts for broadly educated graduates whose work may take them into scholarship, teaching, or administration, or such related fields as broadcasting and arts management," Garvie said.

"There are many academically gifted, and no less sensitive, students who are not creators or performers themselves."

The history in art degree includes four courses each in art history, music history and theatre history, plus four electives, and four humanities courses, for a total of 20.

Chamber Backs Waterfront Renewal Plans

Directors of Victoria Chamber of Commerce Friday reiterated support for the city's waterfront urban renewal plans and Reid Centre proposal, despite federal rejection of the renewel scheme due to lack of funds.

The $25 million Reid plan, including residential and commercial development at the foot of Fort Street, is a feature of the urban renewal scheme proposed by the city for several blocks of waterfront.

Housing Minister Robert Andras told Mayor Courtney Haddock at the Penticton meeting of B.C. Mayors and Municipalities there is no allotment for this type of urban renewal at present.

Chamber vice-president Tom Denny reported:

"These things must be approached with patience and if it is not approved this year there is no doubt it will be next year."

presented to the city some two years ago.

He noted the scheme had been

Last week chamber president Philip Holmes and civic affairs director John Bovey endorsed the renewal and Reid Centre plans as being in the best interests of Victoria.

Denny said these and similar projects involving large undertakings are the only way to keep property taxes from killing the ordinary citizen. The Reid centre would raise about $1 million a year in tax revenue, he estimated.

Directors approved his motion that strong support be given to the mayor, council and planning authorities "who are trying to look at this thing logically."

The meeting also endorsed the principle of a regional college for Victoria.

Man Beaten, Robbed In Pub

A 59-year-old man robbed and injured Wednesday night in a downtown beer parlor is recovering in St. Joseph's Hospital.

James Morrison, 866 Craigflower, was attacked and robbed of $150 when he went into a washroom, city police said.

Car Lot To Close

A 400-car lot will be built in place of the existing 84-car site.

Bible Head To Visit Victoria

The general secretary of the Canadian Bible Society, Rev. Kenneth G. McMillan, will visit Victoria next week.

He will be accompanied on his visit by Rev. R. J. Tingley, British Columbia secretary of the Bible Society.

McMillan will preach Sunday Sept. 27 at Christ Church Cathedral at 9:30. Rev. Tingley will preach in Emmanuel Baptist Church at 9:30 and the Church of Our Lord at 11.

"Save-Your-Hair Day" Set For Mon. & Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

Now is the time to carry out that long delayed resolution to "do something about your hair." For Monday and Tuesday, September 21 and 22 is "SAVE - YOUR - HAIR DAY" in Victoria. The event is sponsored by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists. They have sent trichologist I. Edgar here to personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Hotel Sussex.

WHAT CAUSES BALDNESS

Actually, the two most common causes of baldness are neglect and mistreatment of the hair. The most conspicuous thing about hair trouble is that it's progressive. Common disorders like dandruff or itchiness lead to hair loss. And once hair loss starts, it doesn't stop voluntarily. It has to be stopped.

EXPERT ANSWERS YOUR QUESTIONS

As a feature of "Save-Your-Hair Day" Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists offer a consultation service.

All you have to do is take your questions in person to their suite in the Hotel Sussex and let the trichologist give your scalp a complete examination.

These are the questions most people want information about:

1. How often should you wash your hair?
2. Which kind of shampoo is best for you?
3. Is brushing necessary?
4. What about dry or oily scalp?
5. Are "tonics" helpful?
6. When is dandruff dangerous to hair growth?
7. Can your hair be thickened?
8. What are home treatments like?

Take this list with you Monday or Tuesday to see Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

CHECK YOURSELF HERE AND NOW!

Can't quite decide whether your hair needs expert attention? In general, it can be said that if you're concerned about your hair, you have good reason to be. But here's a check list of signs that point to a hairless future:

☐ Have noticeable dandruff?
☐ Scalp hard, tight?
☐ Scalp itchy or irritated?
☐ Hair dry and straw-like?
☐ Hair excessively greasy?
☐ Lose much hair in washing?
☐ Lose much hair in combing?
☐ Getting "highbrow?"
☐ Thin spot on crown?

If you've checked even one of these conditions, you should see Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists during "Save-Your-Hair Day".

DON'T PUT IT OFF

Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That's why we urge you to see the Harrison trichologist before more damage is done. Find out about our new home treatment methods for saving your hair.

Then you won't wake up a few years from now and find yourself bald — and painfully aware that you need not have been.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the new Harrison method permits you to actually save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

GET THE FACTS

He will tell you what's wrong with your hair and scalp, what can and should be done about it, how little time and money will be required to put your scalp in condition to grow healthy hair again.

'Good Summer' for Student Jobs Despite Predictions

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Aided by federal manpower programs, employment drives set up by business and campus placement offices, thousands of Canadian students found employment this summer despite predictions that the summer of 1970 would provide little or no work for them.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press indicates that although there were trouble spots, campus placement offices generally were successful in finding work for students.

A spokesman in Halifax said that "in a general way it was a very good summer, better than last year."

OPERATED BY STUDENTS

The office, set up by the department and the Saint John board of trade and operated by three students, will be opened again next year, said a board spokesman who found the program "very successful."

Canadian National Railways also employed more than 300 students throughout the Maritimes.

Although the University of Montreal refused comment, a manpower department official working through Sir George Williams University said only 376 of 1,680 students who registered were place in jobs, making 1970 the worst year in the last five.

At McGill University, only 15 to 20 per cent of students were placed through the campus programs, although an official said those who found work on their own did not show on placement records.

MINISTERS HELPED

At Laval University in Quebec City, however, about 80 per cent of 3,000 students who registered for employment found work. Emile Simard, Laval's placement director, said the Quebec government set an example for private business by asking cabinet ministers to hire as many students as possible in their department.

In Ontario, the University of Toronto placement service found work for 86 per cent of 5,019 students who registered.

David Currey, Toronto's placement director, said his office found there were fewer openings than last year but better placings were available.

Toronto took part in a manpower department operation which set up eight centres in the city and 50 throughout the province, John Nelles, program director, said referrals were up 34 per cent from 1969 and that although the manufacturing sector had fewer openings the project generally was successful.

In Ottawa, Carleton University and the University of Ottawa set up the University Students Employment Maison which co-ordinator Charles Levy called "highly successful."

The program placed 3,772 students. Those in engineering, economics, commerce and journalism had the most success. Many of 5,000 students hired for public service jobs were not registered with the program.

Many other Ontario centres did well. Manpower in Orillia placed 89.4 per cent of male students who registered and Hamilton helped nearly all of 3,500 post-secondary students. students.

Sault Ste. Marie tripled its 1969 performance with help from the Chamber of Commerce and Sarnia found work for 63 per cent of students who registered with manpower, up 10 per cent from 1969.

Manpower department authorities in Manitoba declined to release information pending results of the national survey being compiled through Ottawa headquarters.

Statistics were unavailable in Saskatchewan, but a placement official at the Regina campus of the University of Saskatchewan said there were fewer jobs available.

Saskatchewan's program, carried out by university, provincial and federal offices, found that with work scarce generally in the province, many firms gave preference to men supporting families. Many arts students simply helped at their farm homes.

Results of Alberta programs were mixed. In Edmonton, Michael Zuk, manpower department director at the University of Alberta, said, almost all of 7,000 to 8,000 students seeking jobs last spring found them.

Mr. Zuk said federal government action in bringing students into the militia helped, along with co-operation from the provincial youth department which had surveyed students' abilities and available jobs, then matched them where possible.

But in Calgary, Frank Dabbs, special projects officer at the University of Calgary, said only about 350 of 2,500 undergraduates who came to the campus employment office found work.

British Columbia, caught in a series of major labor disputes, had less to offer students this year and one civil service spokesman said the situation was complicated by large numbers of job-seeking youths from outside the province.

Manpower at the University of Victoria estimated that 645 of 2,000 students who registered there found work. A spokesman said lack of industry on Vancouver Island makes job-hunting more difficult for many students.

PM to Sign Science Pact With Soviets

By ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to sign an agreement with the Soviet Union for exchange of technological and scientific information, when he visits Moscow next month.

The agreement is in the final stages of diplomatic negotiation between the two countries and is a significant experiment in expanding national relations.

For Canada, it means an opportunity to sell advanced industrial equipment and to benefit from the Soviet technology of Arctic development.

For the Soviet Union, the agreement will give access to North American industrial advances and represents another step in opening its Communist economic system to Western ideas and influence.

A key figure in the negotiations is Dzerman M. Gvishiani, deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. state committee for science and technology and son-in-law of Premier Kosygin.

He was in Canada earlier this year, establishing useful working contacts with Polymer Corporation, the Crown-owned producer of synthetic rubber and plastics, and discussing with Trudeau over a long lunch the agreement to exchange information.

Gvishiani is one of the younger, progressive Soviet leaders who fears that Communist industry is lagging behind the West in technological development — partly because an undue proportion of the Soviet research effort goes into defence and exploration of space. He wants to import Western experience in applying science and technology to industry.

Italian Fiat auto company is already building a huge auto plant in the Soviet Union. France and Britain have agreements with Moscow to exchange information which gives them preferential places in the Soviet market.

Opens Door To Co-operation

Canada has been trying for years to expand trade in industrial goods with the Soviet Union, without much success.

Businessmen have found it frustrating to deal with state trading corporations which cut them off from direct contacts with their potential customers, the industrial planners and managers who have to make the choice about what equipment to buy, and then operate it.

Although the Soviet Union and Canada share many similar industrial problems—cold weather construction in the north, for example, and technological development in forest and mining industries—Moscow seems to have been slow to recognize Canada as an advanced country.

A Soviet delegation which visited the vast Churchill Falls power project in remote Labrador this year was astonished by winter construction techniques.

One of the delegation who inquired about the limit of the communication system on the site was hugely impressed to find himself, in a few minutes, connected through the regular system to his wife in Moscow.

The exchange agreement to be signed by Trudeau will establish a Canada-U.S.S.R. commission to encourage the exchange of industrial experts.

Study Teams To Be Exchanged

Teams of Canadian businessmen will go to the Soviet Union to examine industrial techniques and to look for opportunities ot buy and sell.

Teams of Soviet industrialists will come to Canada to study our industrial science and technology.

The joint commission should also help Canadian exporters to take their products directly to Soviet customers, and there are strong hopes of developing markets for pulp and paper machinery, tracked vehicles for use in the north, mining equipment and other products.

If trade develops as hoped, and confidence between the two countries grows, Canada may propose to broaden the agreement to permit joint research projects in the Arctic.

Moscow has been wary about opening its northern frontiers to foreigners, and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien cancelled plans to visit Siberia this summer when he found he would not be shown much more than the conventional tourist sites.

Trudeau will have to convince the Soviet government, during the Moscow talks, that Canada is not merely an agent of the United States in claiming Arctic sovereignty and in development of the northern areas shared with the Soviets.

Trudeau may also press in Moscow for faster progress toward a cultural exchange agreement, assisting Canadian artists to perform in the Soviet Union and Canadian students to study at Soviet universities.

Rebels Ignore Ultimatum

Guerrillas Reject Jordan Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Confusion surrounded the Middle East crisis today as Palestinian guerrillas battling Jordanian government forces ignored an ultimatum to surrender or face firing squads and the United States continued to move troops, ships and aircraft into the eastern Mediterranean.

Field Marshal Habis Majali, Jordan's military governor, ordered royal army troops to cease fire in their war against Palestinian Arab guerrillas today.

But a guerrilla statement broadcast from Baghdad, Iraq, said the Palestinian forces would not join in the shooting halt.

"The imperialist agent Habis Majali . . . wants to catch his breath. We are aware of these tricks and Majali will not be able to lead us into any ambush.

"Fire will not cease until the regime of the imperialist agents is completely crushed. The revolution marches on its path until victory."

Majali ordered his forces to stop shooting at 6 p.m. local time.

PROPOSED BY EGYPT

Earlier in the day, Egypt's Middle East news agency reported that King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian proposal for a 24-hour ceasefire.

But this was thrown into confusion by an ultimatum by Majali to the guerrillas to surrender in three hours or face death by firing squads.

The ultimatum expired at 4 p.m. local time (7 a.m. PDT) without any reaction by the guerrillas.

Majali's ceasefire order broadcast by Radio Amman, was addressed to all army, police and security units of the royal forces.

EXCEPTION

More than two hours after the deadline for Majali's ultimatum the field marshal abruptly ordered his men to stop firing except "where fire is directed against you and preventing you from carrying out your humane mission."

The ultimatum was issued by Majali shortly after the Middle East news agency said Jordanian King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian ceasefire proposal.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY OF PHILIP BLAIBERG

Before he died Phillip Blaiberg, the longest-lived heart transplant recipient, said "a heart transplant is worthwhile even for only 3 seconds of life."

His daughter says he lived a life of hell. His wife says the 19 months he lived with another man's heart were the happiest of their lives.

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the man responsible for the operation, sets the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically, in a special article coming Monday in the Times.

IWA Rivals Fight For Leadership

MacKenzie spoke first to the 185 delegates, charging that Moore shirked his duty to be bound by the will of the majority in union decisions.

On Aug. 20, the IWA coastal negotiating committee voted 7 to 3 against recommending acceptance by members of a provincial mediation report.

Moore resigned as chairman of the committee after that vote.

"We tried to get him back on the committee," said MacKenzie. "We sent two members out to try and get him back."

Instead, he said, Moore phoned B.C. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and talked to company representatives.

"This is like a general discussing his strategy with the enemy and expecting to win," MacKenzie said.

Moore, chairman of the convention, nicknamed Friday: "Get Jack Moore Day."

He suspended debating rules and told delegates the discussion was open for anyone who had anything "to get off your chest."

"I'm not ashamed of anything I've ever done for the working people," he said.

Moore said Judge Nathan Nemetz, who made the mediation proposals, was forced to report in a hurry and later agreed he did not have time to understand some of the side issues in the coast forest dispute.

"If we wanted to straighten out the Nemetz report, I know of one way it couldn't have been done," Moore said, "and that's by rejecting it."

On the question of majority rule, he said: "I believe in it. But I believe in the majority rule of all our members and not necessarily just part of them.

"I am not the president of the coast committee. I'm president of four provinces in this country. And I have responsibility to every one of these 42,000 members, not just the 28,000 coastal members."

Mediator To Stay On

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Mediator Clive McKee's term in the southern B.C. interior forest industry dispute was extended Friday for 10 days after negotiators failed to reach a settlement.

The extension came just hours before McKee's first appointment was to run out.

The 5,000 interior members of the International Woodworkers of America would have been in a legal position to go on strike against 39 companies if the term had not been extended.

Big Cambodian Assault Set

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command plans a big assault to smash through a Communist strongpoint that has stalled the government's largest offensive of the war there for nearly a week.

Limited United States air strikes already were being carried out in preliminary attempts to dislodge an estimated 1,000 North Vietnamese troops dug in at the village of Taing Kauk, 47 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Officers at the operation's rear headquarters in Skoun, 45 miles north of Phnom Penh, said today they were not sure when the assault against the North Vietnamese would start, but added they had been told by the high command that the attack would be preceded by huge U.S. air strikes against the village.

The operation, stalled in front of Taing Kauk since Monday, is aimed at reopening Route 6, to Kompong Thom, a provincial capital and reclaiming an important segment of Cambodia's heartland from Communist control.

Communist troops attacked the government task force south of Taing Kauk during the night, but the command said the assault was only of a harassing nature.

RCMP Arrest 25

BIKE GANGS AT WAR

RICHMOND (CP) — Battling members of two motorcycle gangs fired volleys of shots and hurled Molotov cocktails today in a 90-minute war that ended with a house destroyed by fire and 25 arrests.

Police and firemen stood by during the battle in the Vancouver suburb and didn't move in until the house was set alight by a fire bomb tossed from the adjacent house.

One 22-year-old man was shot in the leg and was in satisfactory condition in hospital. Police held their fire and said they had no real trouble arresting 21 men and four women.

Police said the battle apparently started when members of one gang tried to take bikes owned by the other. RCMP said the two gangs had previously been friendly toward each other.

No charges were laid immediately.

China Entry to UN Urged

NEW YORK (CP) — France made a strong bid Friday to have Communist China brought into the United Nations and into negotiations to end the Indo-China conflict.

In calling for this before the 126-country General Assembly and in a later news conference, Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France indicated that China would welcome an invitation to join the world organization it has scorned for many years.

And he added to speculation here about the possible early and successful conclusion of China-Canada recognition talks by saying it is his understanding that the negotiations in Stockholm are going "rather well and in rather an encouraging way."

He added to Canadian reporters, however, that he did not have definite information that the talks are nearing a successful conclusion. And he said his information did not come from Canadian sources.

On the Middle East, the foreign minister refused to lose heart in the peace talks under Gunnar Jarring, the UN's Middle East negotiator. He said neither the ceasefire in the Middle East nor the talks are "beyond reach."

TEACHERS URGE SCHOOL BOARDS:

'Guarantee Work Conditions'

By BOB MITCHELL

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation wants school boards in the province to guarantee basic learning and working conditions in written contracts, BCTF officials said Friday.

In the Greater Victoria school district teachers will seek a clause in their contract which states that a salary increase will not be offset by a reduction in staff, said Les Isaacson, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

This is the first year the federation has taken a stand on the issue of working and learning conditions, which in the past have not been written down or included in statements of board policy.

PERSONNEL REDUCED?

Isaacson was asked if he thought school boards, working under restricted budgets, might attempt to economize by reducing personnel.

"Provincially yes, in Victoria no," he said.

Burnaby and Vancouver now have contracts which guarantee working and learning conditions. Coquitlam and Richmond are negotiating for similar contracts.

Jim Campbell, president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, says such contracts are illegal and that they mean school boards have delegated some of their powers to teachers.

RUSSIA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL CITY

Leningrad: Window on West

By JOSEPH ADLER

The city whose name was changed three times from St. Petersburg (1703-1914) to Petrograd (1914-24) to Leningrad is the most beautiful of all the Soviet cities I have visited.

Built by Peter the Great in 1703 on the Neva River delta, it is the most European oriented of Soviet cities. Much of its beauty is due to the fact that for 200 years, young as capitals go, it was designed by great architects both Russian and European.

★ ★ ★

Located at the east end of the Gulf of Finland, 400 miles northwest of Moscow, it was Russia's window on the West, the major Soviet port on the Baltic Sea. It is the home of great palaces, cathedrals, monuments, parks, gardens, fountains, beautiful bridges (600 of them) and in the summer there are the "white nights" — a midnight twilight but no real dark, much like the summer nights in Scandinavia, its near neighbor.

Here, the revolution of 1905 was fought; here the Feb. 1917 revolution against the tsar took place; and this was the scene of the October, 1917 Revolution.

Leningrad is the second largest city in the U.S.S.R: 193 square miles in area, over 3,700,000 population.

During World War II, 650,000 of its people perished, 10,000 buildings were destroyed. Its citizens withstood a seige that lasted approximately 900 days. For its heroic defence, Leningrad, together with four other cities (Odessa, Kiev, Sebastopol and Volgograd) received the title "Heroic City."

So beloved is this city that immediately following the war, its people set about the enormous task of restoration. During my tours on an Air Canada flight, I did not see one trace if the terrible destruction.

★ ★ ★

The hotel to which I was assigned, the Astoria, is located in the heart of the city. My room was attractive, comfortable, with all modern service for breakfast, promptly served at no extra charge. The food in the main dining room was good but here, as in Moscow, service was slow. In addition to the main restaurant (seating 350) there is a cafe, a cafeteria and a bar.

★ ★ ★

The windows over look the square with its majestic St. Isaac Cathedral. A panoramic view of the city can be seen from the top of the dome (made of beaten gold) open to the public. The Cathedral was designed by A. Monferrand, a French architect, in the 19th century in the Imperial Russian style. As many as 15,000 people can attend services at one time. It took 460,000 serfs 90 years to build.

During my stay in Leningrad the annual fur auction took place. I met interesting people from Canada, U.S., England and many other countries, here to attend the auction.

Nearby the Astoria Hotel is the magnificent Hermitage, one of the world's greatest museums and in itself well worth a visit to the U.S.S.R.

It is housed in the former Winter Palace and is an enormous group of buildings occupying an area of more than 2,500 square yards. It is the lagrest museum in the Soviet Union and ranks as one of the world's most outstanding.

ARE YOU FIT TO DRIVE?

Temper Traffic Risk

LONDON — Bad temper in automobile drivers is the main cause of the lack of concentration that often leads to accidents, according to a doctor who has made motoring his special study.

Dr. Keith E. Jolles, author of a booklet, "Are You Fit to Drive?" says this may arise from a heated argument with a passenger, from rage goaded by the antics of another driver, or from whether the driver's wife sent him off with a loving kiss or not. The man with a marriage problem on his mind can constitute a grave traffic risk, he added.

The booklet lists statistics on accidents, such as the average accident happens when a car is traveling below 30 miles an hour, and occurs within 10 miles of home.

SPECIAL SYMPHONY SEASON

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It is doubtful whether any of the people who attended the first concert of the present Victoria Symphony Orchestra in May, 1941, in their most optimistic imagining could anticipate what enormous strides the ensemble would make in the next three decades.

Nor even feel any certainty that it would survive so long.

It was then only the latest in a series of attempts to form a symphony that had blossomed hopefully and faded quickly.

Good will on the part of public and business; hard work, nearly all of it voluntary, courage among dedicated officers of the society to make drastic decisions when such were necessary—these were factors contributing to the Victoria Symphony, now embarking on the celebration of its 30th season.

It also had going for it in a highly crucial period of its development, two totally committed people in Jack Barraclough and its second musical director-conductor, Hans Gruber.

These two, supported by a dozen or so others, sustained and built the orchestra in the face of the totally discouraging attitude of Greater Victoria's elected officialdom.

Otto-Werner Mueller's tenure on the podium strengthened the orchestra and then came Laszlo Gati, a man of ideas and great organizing ability with an exceptional gift for alerting public interest.

This triple jubilee season is a case in point. Heralding the symphony's biggest, most expanded season ever, Gati has chosen his artists and his music to pay tribute to the Beethoven bi-centenary, the 30th season and B.C.'s entry into Confederation.

Four Beethoven Festival concerts incorporating all five piano concertos, the triple concerto for piano, violin and cello, the Choral Fantasy and Choral and Pastoral Symphonies and performance by the American Alma Trio of the "Archduke," commemorate the master of Bonn.

A series of special events proclaim the 30th season as a super-season, especially the appearance of the famous Spanish guitar family, the Romeros, in December, and the Bach Aria Group which includes world-renowned Canadians Maureen Forrester, Lois Marshall and Richard Lewis.

As for the box office, reports show that public interest is at an all-time high as the Victoria Symphony mounts its third decade with such a great number of season subscribers—well over 2,000 have been sold already—that wating lists could be the order for the fourth decade.

Magic in Textiles

... With Gordon Rice

The hottest, the hippest, and the most famous works of art will seldom if every be seen in Victoria. Our art museum (the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria) is one of the best attended small galleries in Canada, but its financial resources have been for a long time severely limited.

This means the big touring shows of paintings and sculpture pass us by, and that little top-reputation stuff can be aquired. The director, Colin Graham, has remained sensitive to all ideas and changes in the visual arts, and has consistantly tried to give us the most varied and interesting shows available with the Gallery's resources.

Often this means obtaining shows of high quality within little-known fields of the arts; last season's display of Japanese textiles and stencils, for example. The fall season has opened this time with a show of Contemporary German Textiles (through October 4).

Most of the artists are women, and most of them reveal the influence of the Swiss Artist Paul Klee, who unwittingly seems to have dominated the German art scene in the same way Charlie Parker has influenced the jazz scene in the last 30 years.

●

Fairy tales and folklore play a good part in these textile pictures and patterns (as they did in Klee's work).

Depicted here is that kind of magic bird so universal in folklore, and the artist has combined cotton, linen, wool, silk, and metalic threads to convey the sense of fabulously rare plumage.

The craftsmanship is really amazing, but the character of the work will undoubtedly strike a variety of reactions is a variety of viewers. One imagines that some will find it flashy and sentimental, and others will see it as exquisite and sensitive. You should decide for yourself.

●

Sophia Dawo's work in black mohair and paper achieves, like many of the works in this exhibit, an equivalent of so emkind of graphic art; in this case charcoal drawing.

Beads, vegetable fibres, lace, and many other materials are employed in the textiles that comprise this colorful exhibit.

Worth noting are his "Brilliant Bluffs from Selkirk College", "Creek in Summer, West Kootenays", "Rock Face, Fletcher Creek", and "Below Kokanee Creek Bridge."

Campbell is pursuing a craft (landscape painting) which has fallen into low regard in the eyes of many of the authorities in the arts today. Fortunately he has chosen to be his own authority, the only sound course an artist can take anyway, whatever his style.

●

He combines vivid straight-out-of-the-tube colors with highly subtle mixed ones, often with a very refreshing effect.

The artist has made two color films widely circulated on the educational film circuit in Britain. These are "The Everchanging Sky", showing the paintings and the locales painted by John Constable, the English master, and "Artists in Today's World", a study of three contemporary Britons (one of the artists being Campbell himself).

Next Thursday the 24th, at 8:30, both films will be shown at the Chelsea Gallery.

'No One Knew Of Plans'

LONDON (AP) — "Absolutely no one in Russia was aware of my intentions," says Soviet ballerina Natalia Makarova, who fled to the West and obtained political asylum in Britain earlier this month.

Miss Makarova, at 30 one of the world's leading classical dancers, disclosed in a television interview Friday with the BBC that she had considered fleeing to the West for two years.

"I never spoke about this to any of my friends or family," she said.

Miss Makarova said she defected because the West offered more opportunities to broaden her career and that she was weighing offers from a number of dance companies.

In Beethoven's Footsteps

By KENNETH LOVELAND

LONDON — Bonn was where he was born, but Vienna is where it all happened, and, in his bicentenary year, it is to Vienna that the musical tourist goes to learn about Beethoven.

The trip involves not only listening to almost every note he wrote and walking round exhibitions seeking some sign of personality, some touch of the living man, but it also involves trying to get behind it all and finding the lost Vienna of a century and a half ago.

The Viennese police have a look of patient tolerance for the visitor who demands to be shown where Beethoven lived. For posterity's purposes, he was an inconsiderate tenant, and lodged at 25 different houses in the old city, to which can be added all those suburban houses where he liked to go in the summer. Many still exist, and to help the eager explorer the city tourist office has prepared a Beethoven map. There are even conducted tours.

The Theatre an der Wien is a surprise. The stranger would expect something much bigger than this little gem of a theatre, with its steeply raked floor. Gone is the annex in which Beethoven lived in admirable confusion, something which could probably have been said of every lodging he had.

In the city itself, the Pasqualati house on the Molkerbastei, is the recognized place of pilgrimage. It is worth the climb up the steep path; in Beethoven's time, this would have been part of the city walls.

But he would have had a view vastly different from the wide, busy Karl Kruger Ring which now runs beneath it. Beethoven must have liked his perch here for he stayed longer than anywhere else, and the fourth floor apartments saw the birth of many of his masterpieces.

You get closest to the man and the music in the northern suburbs. Doblinger Haupstrasse, with its Eroica house on the right-hand side, and some restored addresses in the side streets, start the climb out to the village at the foot of the hills and woods to which in summer Beethoven liked to take his smoldering energies, to fan them alight once more, or ponder his heartbreaks.

Communist China Now Producing Medium-Range Jet Bombers

By MICHAEL GETLER
The Washington Post

Communist China is now producing its own medium-range twin-engine jet bomber able to carry nuclear weapons to targets 1,500 miles beyond its borders, says highly reliable U.S. sources.

The aircraft is a Chinese copy of the Russian TU-16 "Badger" that has been in service in large numbers with Soviet air forces since 1955.

Initial production versions of the plane—the first jet bomber ever manufactured inside mainland China—were recently spotted by high-flying U.S. reconnaissance craft, either satellites or U-2s.

American weapons experts estimate the Chinese may be able toproduce four of five TU-16s a month at the most, but say it is too early to tell whether they have made any improvements in the plane's performnce over the Russian version.

OBSOLESCENT

By Western standards, however, the Badger is considered obsolescent. It would have trouble getting through any modern air defence system composed of high-speed fighters and surface-to-air missiles.

If a few did get through, however, they could cause considerable damage. The Badger can carry 20,000 pounds in its bomb bay, which means each aircraft can probably handle several small nuclear weapons in the 20-kiloton class, about the same explosive power that was used by the United States over Nagasaki in August, 1945.

Though the plane presents no threat to the U.S. mainland, several major Russian cities fall within its range, as do Soviet military concentrations along the 4,200-mile common border with Red China.

Targets in all of Southeast Asia, Japan, Korea, Taiwan and the Philippines would also be within striking distance.

Britain's Institute for Strategic Studies has recently estimated that the Chinese have enough nuclear material on hand to make about 150 atomic bombs.

Ironically, it was the Russians who got their erstwhile friends into the Badger business, supplying a few TU-16s in the late 1950s to the Chinese and helping set up a factory to produce them.

After Soviet technicians pulled out in 1960, however, the Chinese apparently had difficulty in mastering production techniques, for large aircraft, as well as financial troubles.

Until now, the primary means available to the Chinese to deliver nuclear weapons has been about 150 obsolete Russian-built II-28 "Beagle" light bombers.

Also delivered before Sino-Soviet relations reached the breaking point in 1960, these craft are now some 20 years old, can fly about as fast but only half as far as the Badger and can carry only one-fourth of its payload.

The Chinese have also been striving to develop both medium range (1,200-1,500 miles) and intercontinental range ballistic missiles but both programs have run into trouble and neither is operational yet, according to Pentagon estimates.

TECHNICAL PROBLEM

U.S. intelligence had estimated nuclear-tipped MRBs would be in Chinese hands by 1967, based on a fast and highly successful nuclear test program which included in October, 1966, lofting an atomic warhead 400 miles down a test range aboard a modified Soviet missile, also provided earlier.

Several reasons for the NRBM delay have been advanced; trouble with the missile guidance system, disruption of work by chairman Mao's Red Guards, and an alleged decision to skip the first version and go on to a better one.

Well informed sources, however, now believe the principal problem has been technical, and remain convinced that deployment of operational MRBMs is close at hand.

The decision to forge ahead with the TU-16 may have come as an insurance measure when the MRBM development ran into trouble, but some defence analysts believe the Chinese have accepted the idea of having a mixed force of missile and bomber weapons.

Furthermore, the fact that scarce financial resources have been used to produce a medium-range bomber is seen by some China-watchers in this country as evidence that Chinese leadership indeed decided several years ago to concentrate upon strengthening their regional military capability as best they could, rather than attempting to make an even more costly and uncertain leap directly into ICBMs.

Analysts believe a growing realization that Russia had replaced the U.S. as the principal nuclear threat to China was instrumental in shifting Chinese attention closer to home.

Helping the decision along, however, was the massive American involvement in a land war at China's doorstep, and U.S. bombing of North Vietnam which, on several occasions, came very close to the Chinese border.

Once deployed, medium-range nuclear weapons, especially missiles which can reach Russian cities and against which there is no defence at this point, would probably serve as an effective deterrent against the Soviets, it is reasoned.

The United States could be held at bay by the spectre of several non-Communist nations in Asia held hostage by the threat of Chinese nuclear retaliation.

Haydu — Howe

Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Howe of 2101 Neil Street, Victoria, B.C. are pleased to announce the marriage of their only daughter, Heather Elaine, to Mr. Stanley E. Haydu of Calgary, Alberta.

The marriage took place in Calgary on August 31, 1970 where the young couple will reside.

Weicker — Laurie

St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Warfield, was the scene of a lovely wedding on August 15, at 7:30 p.m. when Patricia Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Laurie, 605 Kipling St., Trail, B.C. became the bride of Mr. Bruce Anthony Weicker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Weicker, 799 McKenzie Ave., Victoria. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Father Bill Laurie, the bride's brother. Mrs. D. Rusnell was organist. Pink gladiolas adorned the altar, white bows centred with pink gladiolas marked the pews.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a full length A-line, semi-fitted, white lace sleeveless gown over taffeta, featuring a mandarin collar. The full length coat, sheer over taffeta, featured long lace sleeves with French cuffs, and a bow closing at the empire waistline. Her four-tiered scalloped veil was held in place by a head band covered in fabric daisies. She wore a pearl pendant and blue sapphire earrings, gifts from the groom, and carried a cascade bouquet of white daisy mums with pink sweetheart roses. Mrs. Sam Gruden, sister of the bride attended as matron of honour. Mrs. Russel Raine, Victoria, was bridesmatron and Miss Elaine Weicker, Victoria, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Mr. Bob Weicker was best man for his brother. Ushers were Mr. Raymond Weicker, brother of the groom and Mr. Stuart Laurie, brother of the bride.

Warfield Community Hall was tastefully decorated in pink and white floral arrangements and green tapers, for the reception held there. The three tiered wedding cake made by the bride's mother and beautifully decorated by the bride, was topped with two doves holding rings. Mr. Sam Gruden was master of ceremonies. Mr. Lew Strasser, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to his niece. Miss Yvonne Weicker, groom's sister attended the guest book.

Telegrams were received from St. John's, Nfld. and Victoria. Out of town guests attended from Calgary, Victoria, Aldergrove, Vancouver, and Kenora, Ont.

Lewis — Harrop

The marriage is announced of Virginia Sheffield Lewis to Mr. Alan Cameron Harrop, on Thursday, September 10, 1970, in the Chapel of St. John's Church, Victoria.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) # PM to Sign Science Pact With Soviets

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to sign an agreement with the Soviet Union for exchange of technological and scientific information, when he visits Moscow next month.

The agreement is in the final stages of diplomatic negotiation between the two countries and is a significant experiment in expanding national relations.

For Canada, it means an opportunity to sell advanced industrial equipment and to benefit from the Soviet technology of Arctic development.

For the Soviet Union, the agreement will give access to North American industrial advances and represents another step in opening its Communist economic system to Western ideas and influence.

A key figure in the negotiations is Dzerman M. Gvishiani, deputy chairman of the U.S.S.R. state committee for science and technology and son-in-law of Premier Kosygin.

He was in Canada earlier this year, establishing useful working contacts with Polymer Corporation, the Crown-owned producer of synthetic rubber and plastics, and discussing with Trudeau over a long lunch the agreement to exchange information.

Gvishiani is one of the younger, progressive Soviet leaders who fears that Communist industry is lagging behind the West in technological development — partly because an undue proportion of the Soviet research effort goes into defence and exploration of space. He wants to import Western experience in applying science and technology to industry.

Italian Fiat auto company is already building a huge auto plant in the Soviet Union. France and Britain have agreements with Moscow to exchange information which gives them preferential places in the Soviet market.

Opens Door To Co-operation

Canada has been trying for years to expand trade in industrial goods with the Soviet Union, without much success.

Businessmen have found it frustrating to deal with state trading corporations which cut them off from direct contacts with their potential customers, the industrial planners and managers who have to make the choice about what equipment to buy, and then operate it.

Although the Soviet Union and Canada share many similar industrial problems—cold weather construction in the north, for example, and technological development in forest and mining industries—Moscow seems to have been slow to recognize Canada as an advanced country.

A Soviet delegation which visited the vast Churchill Falls power project in remote Labrador this year was astonished by winter construction techniques.

One of the delegation who inquired about the limit of the communication system on the site was hugely impressed to find himself, in a few minutes, connected through the regular system to his wife in Moscow.

Study Teams To Be Exchanged

Teams of Canadian businessmen will go to the Soviet Union to examine industrial techniques and to look for opportunities ot buy and sell.

Teams of Soviet industrialists will come to Canada to study our industrial science and technology.

The joint commission should also help Canadian exporters to take their products directly to Soviet customers, and there are strong hopes of developing markets for pulp and paper machinery, tracked vehicles for use in the north, mining equipment and other products.

If trade develops as hoped, and confidence between the two countries grows, Canada may propose to broaden the agreement to permit joint research projects in the Arctic.

Moscow has been wary about opening its northern frontiers to foreigners, and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien cancelled plans to visit Siberia this summer when he found he would not be shown much more than the conventional tourist sites.

Trudeau will have to convince the Soviet government, during the Moscow talks, that Canada is not merely an agent of the United States in claiming Arctic sovereignty and in development of the northern areas shared with the Soviets.

Trudeau may also press in Moscow for faster progress toward a cultural exchange agreement, assisting Canadian artists to perform in the Soviet Union and Canadian students to study at Soviet universities.

Rebels Ignore Ultimatum

Guerrillas Reject Jordan Ceasefire

Times News Services

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Confusion surrounded the Middle East crisis today as Palestinian guerrillas battling Jordanian government forces ignored an ultimatum to surrender or face firing squads and the United States continued to move troops, ships and aircraft into the eastern Mediterranean.

But a guerrilla statement broadcast from Baghdad, Iraq, said the Palestinian forces would not join in the shooting halt.

"The imperialist agent Habis Majali . . . wants to catch his breath. We are aware of these tricks and Majali will not be able to lead us into any ambush.

"Fire will not cease until the regime of the imperialist agents is completely crushed. The revolution marches on its path until victory."

Majali ordered his forces to stop shooting at 6 p.m. local time.

PROPOSED BY EGYPT

Earlier in the day, Egypt's Middle East news agency reported that King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian proposal for a 24-hour ceasefire.

But this was thrown into confusion by an ultimatum by Majali to the guerrillas to surrender in three hours or face death by firing squads.

The ultimatum expired at 4 p.m. local time 7 a.m. PDT without any reaction by the guerrillas.

Majali's ceasefire order broadcast by Radio Amman, was addressed to all army, police and security units of the royal forces.

EXCEPTION

More than two hours after the deadline for Majali's ultimatum the field marshal abruptly ordered his men to stop firing except "where fire is directed against you and preventing you from carrying out your humane mission."

The ultimatum was issued by Majali shortly after the Middle East news agency said Jordanian King Hussein had agreed to an Egyptian ceasefire proposal.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY OF PHILIP BLAIBERG

Before he died Phillip Blaiberg, the longest-lived heart transplant recipient, said "a heart transplant is worthwhile even for only 3 seconds of life."

His daughter says he lived a life of hell. His wife says the 19 months he lived with another man's heart were the happiest of their lives.

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the man responsible for the operation, sets the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically, in a special article coming Monday in the Times.

IWA Rivals Fight For Leadership

MacKenzie spoke first to the 185 delegates, charging that Moore violated on his duty to be bound by the will of the majority in union decisions.

On Aug. 20, the IWA coastal negotiating committee voted 7 to 3 against recommending acceptance by members of a provincial mediation report.

Moore resigned as chairman of the committee after that vote.

"We tried to get him back on the committee," said MacKenzie. "We sent two members out to try and get him back."

Instead, he said, Moore phoned B.C. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson and talked to company representatives.

"This is like a general discussing his strategy with the enemy and expecting to win," MacKenzie said.

Moore, chairman of the convention, nicknamed Friday: "Get Jack Moore Day."

He suspended debating rules and told delegates the discussion was open for anyone who had anything "to get off your chest."

"I'm not ashamed of anything I've ever done for the working people," he said.

Moore said Judge Nathan Nemetz, who made the mediation proposals was forced to report in a hurry and later agreed he did not have time to understand some of the side issues in the coast forest dispute.

"If we wanted to straighten out the Nemetz report, I know of one way it couldn't have been done", Moore said, "and that's by rejecting it."

On the question of majority rule, he said: "I believe in it. But I believe in the majority rule of all our members and not necessarily just part of them.

"I am not the president of the coast committee. I'm president of four provinces in this country. And I have responsibility to every one of these 42,000 members, not just the 28,000 coastal members.

MOORE

Mediator To Stay On

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Mediator Clive McKee's term in the southern B.C. Interior forest industry dispute was extended Friday for 10 days after negotiators failed to reach a settlement.

The extension came just hours before McKee's first appointment was to run out.

The 5,000 interior members of the International Woodworkers of American would have been in a legal position to go on strike against 39 companies if the term had not been extended.

Big Cambodian Assault Set

PHNOM PENH (AP) — The Cambodian military command plans a big assault to smash through a Communist strongpoint that has stalled the government's largest offensive of the war there for nearly a week.

Limited United States air strikes already were being carried out in preliminary attempts to dislodge an estimated 1,000 North Vietnamese troops dug in at the village of Taing Kauk, 47 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Officers at the operation's rear headquarters in Skoun, 45 miles north of Phnom Penh, said today they were not sure when the assault against the North Vietnamese would start, but added they had been told by the high command that the attack would be preceded by huge U.S. air strikes against the village.

The operation, stalled in front of Taing Kauk since Monday, is aimed at reopening Route 6, to Kompong Thom, a provincial capital and reclaiming an important segment of Cambodia's heartland from Communist control.

Communist troops attacked the government task force south of Taing Kauk during the night, but the command said the assault was only of a harassing nature.

RCMP Arrest 25

BIKE GANGS AT WAR

RICHMOND (CP) — Battling members of two motorcycle gangs fired volleys of shots and hurled Molotov cocktails today in a 90-minute war that ended with a house destroyed by fire and 25 arrests.

Police and firemen stood by during the battle in the Vancouver suburb and didn't move in until the house was set alight by a fire bomb tossed from the adjacent house.

One 22-year-old man was shot in the leg and was in satisfactory condition in hospital. Police held their fire and said they had no real trouble arresting 21 men and four women.

Police said the battle apparently started when members of one gang tried to take bikes owned by the other. RCMP said the two gangs had previously been friendly toward each other.

No charges were laid immediately.

China Entry to UN Urged

NEW YORK (CP) — France made a strong bid Friday to have Communist China brought into the United Nations and into negotiations to end the Indo-china conflict.

In calling for this before the 126-country General Assembly and in a later news conference, Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France indicated that China would welcome an invitation to join the world organization it has scorned for many years.

And he added to speculation here about the possible early and successful conclusion of China-Canada recognition talks by saying it is his understanding that the negotiations in Stockholm are going "rather well and in rather an encouraging way."

He added to Canadian reporters, however, that he did not have definite information that the talks are nearing a successful conclusion. And he said his information did not come from Canadian sources.

On the Middle East, the foreign minister refused to lose heart in the peace talks under Gunnar Jarring, the UN's Middle East negotiator. He said neither the ceasefire in the Middle East nor the talks are "beyond reach."

TEACHERS URGE SCHOOL BOARDS:

'Guarantee Work Conditions'

By BOB MITCHELL

The British Columbia Teachers' Federation wants school boards in the province to guarantee basic learning and working conditions in written contracts, BCTF officials said Friday.

In the Greater Victoria school district teachers will seek a clause in their contract which states that a salary increase will not be offset by a reduction in staff, said Les Isaachson, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

This is the first year the federation has taken a stand on the issue of working and learning conditions, which in the past have not been written down or included in statements of board policy.

PERSONNEL REDUCED?

Isaachson was asked if he thought school boards, working under restricted budgets, might attempt to economize by reducing personnel.

"Provincially yes, in Victoria no," he said.

Burnaby and Vancouver now have contracts which guarantee working and learning conditions. Coquitlam and Richmond are negotiating for similar contracts.

Jim Campbell, president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association, says such contracts are illegal and that they mean school boards have delegated some of their powers to teachers.

Sharp Contrast In Performances

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets moved upward this week, despite an absence of optimistic news or economic developments.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, the broadest indicator of share prices, was up .89 to 163.06 at the end of the five-day trading period.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up .87 to 161.62.

Performance on Canada markets contrasted with price activity on Wall Street. At the New York Stock Exchange, the Dow-Jones industrial average of key rail and transportation issues dropped 2.35 points to 758.49.

Main reason for the weakness on Wall Street, analysts said, was the United Auto Workers' strike against General Motors Corp. which acted as a catalyst to bring together other negative factors influencing prices.

Canadian markets moved higher on three of the five trading sessions.

Observers suggested that domestic stock prices were not affected by as many of the negative influences which plagued Wall Street.

In addition, oil index advanced 5.04 points to 183.73. The index was unchanged at the end of four days of trading but made a sharp advance of more than five points on Friday.

Biggest movers during the week included the three major auto manufacturing stocks.

New Federal Bond Issue Well Received

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Canadian bond market were higher in moderate trading this week. Most trading was in the new Government of Canada refund issue introduced early in the week.

The issue, totalling $550 million, was dated Oct 1, 1970, and was alloted as follows: $100 million 6½ per cent, April 1, 1972; $200 million 6¼ per cent, July 1, 1973, and $250 million 7¼ per cent, Dec. 1, 1975.

Midland Osler Securities Ltd. said the new issue was well received by investors.

Denison Mines 'Shocked' by Uranium Ruling

TORONTO (CP) — The manager of Gulf Minerals Co. of Toronto said Friday an announcement by Energy Minister J. J. Greene clearing the way for his company to sell uranium holdings to foreign interests came as no surprise.

"It simply confirms our November, 1969, deal," N. M. Ediger said.

In a statement released at Ottawa Friday, Mr. Greene said four foreign-owned companies —Gulf Brinex Ltd., Consolidated Canadian Faraday Corp. and Kerr-McGee Canada—can go ahead with a transfer of interests in Canadian uranium properties to foreign owners.

A spokesman for Denison Mines Ltd. of Toronto, which also has plans to sell uranium property but was not named, said Denison was "shocked."

Mr. Greene said he made the announcement to clarify the position of the four companies, which were awaiting promised government regulations on foreign ownership of uranium resources.

STARTED EARLY

The four began negotiations for transfers before restrictions were imposed on major transactions by a government policy statement March 2.

Mr. Greene said the forthcoming legislation has not been cast in its final form but will incorporate rules proclaimed in March that no more than one-third of uranium-producing property should be foreign owned.

The ownership issue came to a head early this year when Denison announced plans to sell controlling interest in its Elliot Lake, Ont., uranium property to Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co., a U.S.-controlled firm.

The sale was blocked by the March policy statement.

Stephen Roman, Denison president, said Friday he would not comment before reading the government statement, but a spokesman for Denison said: "We are shocked."

He said the minister appeared to be making different sets of rules for foreign and domestic companies.

Mr. Roman told a shareholders' meeting earlier Friday they should write to the government to protest the blocked sale.

The foreign ownership regulations "clearly only apply to Denison," considering the fact that the government has allowed Gulf to enlist West German participation, he said.

Spokesmen for the other three companies named in Mr. Greene's announcement could not be reached for comment Friday.

Strange This Should Happen Here

By DON VIPOND

A farmer delivered 100 pounds of potatoes and 100 pounds of carrots to the house at 953 Balmoral last week. He charged $1.

Yes indeed, something very strange has been spreading through Victoria the last couple of years. The potatoes and carrots indicate it has even reached beyond the city limits.

The house on Balmoral is a hostel for travelling kids. The parish hall of St. John's Anglican Church, four houses down the street at Quadra, is part of the same show.

The show is Cool-Aid, where the long-hair set and the Establishment are continuing to work a sort of quiet miracle in this backwater of Canada while in the big progressive centres they continue to bash heads.

If that sounds a bit provincial, a trifle insular, it's also true.

The something strange is embarrassingly simple to summarize. It's a mutual trust, belief, faith—exhausted words which have somehow quietly come to life under our noses.

So this is a progress report, not just on Cool-Aid but on the community, on how it met a lot of kids who wandered this way over the summer and made them glad they did.

Over in Vancouver there are hassles with the long hairs at the armories and the barracks. On Toronto's Yorkville Street there are drug busts daily. Elsewhere the kids have been breaking things and getting tear-gassed or shot, generally contributing to municipal miseries.

How come nothing in Victoria this summer? Yet the kids have been here in droves, walking the parks and squares, thumbing rides up Douglas.

Because Victoria gave them a place to stay and meals, for 25 cents a day if they had it, otherwise free.

Because municipal and provincial governments helped pay for it, after local young people showed Cool-Aid could work.

Because St. John's Anglican Church contributed its hall rent-free and added $1,000 cash.

Because 22 doctors, including five psychiatrists; 12 dentists, four lawyers and a dental mechanic gave (and continue to give) free emergency service to transient kids.

Because the Department of National Defence loaned 40 bunks, mattresses, pillows and blankets.

Because 28 families are ready to handle any overflow of young travellers, making room in their homes free.

Because the six who staff the Cool-Aid hostels (they are 16 to 25) work for peanuts.

* * *

Because the Cool-Aid hostels have the kind of neighbors we all dream of. (One of them nips across the street when she can to help out by making beds for staff or cooking.)

(Another, who runs a boarding house, has kids arrive late at night at her place by mistake. She has them stay rather than rouse the hostel staff.)

Because a farmer troubles to haul in potatoes and carrots to help feed the visitors.

* * *

Because, while Cool-Aid has few rules—no dope, no sex, no sheltering minors without adult authority and no harboring fugitives under any circumstances—they're important and it makes them stick.

Because—and maybe this is the crucial one—there's a limit of three nights for staying.

"Community support has been incredible, just incredible," says Charles Barber, one of the Cool-Aid workers.

Maybe because Cool-Aid—the hostels, the log books, the budget—are available for anyone to see anytime. It's always harder to hate once you've met your enemy, says Barber.

Maybe because the adult community buys the way Barber and the others feel about travelling kids.

Travel is cheap, it's effective and it's happening, he says. It should be encouraged because it makes for maturity, for knowledgable young people.

Travel is democratic. You go there and you come back sort of propaganda-proof."

In More Progressive Cities Kids Were Hassled and Busted But in Stodgy Old Victoria They Got a Bed, Meals and . . .

So what Cool-Aid has been trying to do for the kids who came here is reinforce the positive experience by helping out for one, two or three nights.

"We support travel. But travel means moving on, with a good taste in your mouth," says Hugh Wade, one of the adults who are helping.

Both are equally positive on one point. If the program isn't backed by the community it will fail.

So far it's done nothing but grow but there are problems in sight.

From the start in May of '67 to the spring of this year Cool-Aid housed 3,507 young people, provided 5,570 meals and counselling for 752.

But those figures have been dwarfed by the totals this summer.

From April 1 to Aug. 31, 4,025 kids have been housed and 5,832 meals provided. A total of 402 have been counselled, most of them local. Counselling is a part of Cool-Aid's work not affected by a summer influx.

In all of 1969, the biggest crowd for one night was 28. There were 60 and 70 regularly this summer and the biggest night was Sept. 2 when the total housed was 82.

That was possible because of the church hall but the loan of it ends shortly. The church needs it back for Sunday school.

The inter-municipal grant for Cool-Aid works out to 47 cents per capita. What sort of value are you getting for your 47 cents?

* * *

The grant money towards food for August was $200. With that and some private support Cool-Aid provided 2,053 meals.

Cool-Aid and the law? In the past two years there has been not one raid, not one warrant, no complaints.

Welfare Faces Hospital Suit

A B.C. government move to force nursing homes to make one-third of their space available for welfare cases faces a court test if it is enforced.

Details of the government move, announced in general terms earlier this week by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, were spelled out in two cabinet orders Friday.

One amends regulations under the Hospital Act governing private hospitals, administered by the health department. It states that where the number of social aid patients in such hospitals is less than one-third, priority shall be given to welfare cases in new admissions.

Homes for the aged, licensed by Gaglardi's department face a similar one-third requirement.

William Olmsted, owner of Richardson Manor, at 1037 Richardson, said he would continue to give priority in admissions to private patient applications. The Manor now has one welfare patient out of 20 in the home.

"One patient is considered as good as another, but it's simply a case of not being able to survive on what the government pays for welfare patients," Olmstead said.

He said court action would be based on the constitutionallity of the provincial government dictating to private enterprise.

DECISION PENDING

Mursing homes are bound by a new clause which states that payment for their care would be paid for at the rate established under the Social Assistance Act. Current rates set by the government are $9.25 a day for nursing homes.

Several nursing homes have challenged this rate in court as being too low. A decision on an appeal in that case is pending.

The new government edict will be particularly harmful to smaller, newer hospitals with high capital and building costs to meet. Older, larger institutions already have more than the required minimum number of welfare recipients as patients.

FEWER BEDS

Jon Parker, manager of Glenwarren Private Hospital, said today the government move could have the effect of making fewer beds available by forcing operators to convert to rest homes.

Glenwarren already has plans to add a rest home addition and eventually to convert entirely to rest home care.

"This sort of dictation to private business might only have the effect of speeding up the process for us," Parker said.

MORE THAN HALF

More than half Glenwarren's 63 patients now are welfare cases. Glengarry Private Hospital also reports its welfare patient total is over the new one-third requirement.

There are about 600 boarding homes for the aged in the province and 60 private hospitals.

Parker said the Gaglardi edict was unfair to staff and investors in nursing homes, in that it limited revenues available for salaries and returns on builders' investments.

"It's high time someone besides the private home operators were made to take on the responsibility of taking care of elderly persons on welfare," Parker said. "Passing the buck, with the responsibility always falling back on us, has got to stop."

Was Her Pot The Real Thing?

A pretty 25-year-old American school teacher charged with possession of marijuana said in provincial court Friday sne was hesitant to plead guilty because she wasn't sure the pot she bought was the real thing.

She was arrested Thursday as she passed through customs at the Inner Harbor.

She told Ostler she was hesitant to plead guilty to the charge because such a plea would mean the alleged narcotic would never be analyzed and she was not sure it was really marijuana.

"I understand a lot of what people buy isn't what it's said to be," she told Ostler.

"I expect you'd have been disappointed if it wasn't marijuana," said the judge.

She finally pleaded guilty when told analysis at the Vancouver laboratories would take at least a week.

Mrs. Silver's husband had already returned to the United States, court was told.

Ostler fined her $350.

THE BARE BEGINNINGS OF TODAY'S Shinerama campaign by University of Victoria students were pretty slow due to wet and dreary weather downtown this morning. # TOTALS SOAR AT MUSEUM

Attendance at the Provincial Museum has soared by 59 per cent for the first eight months of 1970, museum director Dr. J. Bristol Foster said Friday.

He said 650,682 visited the museum up to the end of August compared to 408,834 for the same period in 1969.

He said the addition of new exhibits currently planned or under construction combined with increased interest among tourists and school children will increase the figure in the future.

"With some astonishment," he said, the museum faces the possibility of having a million visitors in 1971.

Trustees 'Out of Line'

Two Saanich Peninsula school trustees today were accused of spreading "blatant misinformation" about the high operating costs of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

Greater Victoria trustee Peter Bunn said trustees Zachary Hamilton and G. M. Ewan were far out of line in their reported statement that Victoria is paying $25,000 in membership fees to the association.

Bunn said his board paid only $9,075 this year.

BCSTA president J. M. Campbell of Saturna Island said the association carried out a number of functions in the field of education and these were described recently in a letter to all school districts in the province.

Hamilton was reported to have said the association's budget for the coming year would be about $500,000 which was coming right from the taxpayer.

"I anticipate in 1971 about $411 million will be spent by the school boards and the association's budget will be a tenth of one per cent of that," Campbell said.

Campbell said there had to be an agency to promote in the minds of the public the positive interest of education and this was the association's function.

'TAKING EXCEPTION'

Ewan was reported as taking exception to the cost of the trustees' convention to be held in Victoria Oct. 11 to 14 in addition to fees.

Ewan said he could not see a single item on the agenda that would benefit Sooke students or the public at large and added that he would not spend his own money to attend let alone ask ratepayers to foot the bill.

Campbell said the importance of the convention with its $25 registration fee per delegate is for the trustees to get outside their own districts and gain ideas from other trustees.

He added that a function of the meeting was to decide on how to use the money of the association's budget and this was voted on by delegates.

He suggested that the two Saanich trustees attend the convention and present their objections to delegates.

Kuhn Hearing Date Set

Five days were set aside Friday for the provincial court preliminary hearing of a non-capital murder charge against Saanich contractor Egon Kuhn.

Judge William Ostler set aside a period from Oct. 15-21 to hear the case against Kuhn, charged with murdering business associate William Osland "on or about Feb. 3, 1969."

Kuhn was remanded to Sept. 25 for a statutory appearance.

Outfall Job Moves On

The second 1,500-foot length of steel sewer pipe was floated into a foggy Strait of Juan de Fuca from Macaulay Point this morning.

Charlie Archibald of Associated Engineering Services estimates the final length, which will extend the outfall to 6,100 feet into the Strait, will be in place Monday.

Will Lawther of Vancouver, manager of the firm's marine division, was on hand to watch progress of what he describes as "the longest, deepest steel outfall in North America."

He and Archibald said the only project of this type carried out in North America was an installation on the Mississippi River.

But it was much smaller and officials did not have to contend with tides and adverse weather conditions.

Lawther said the new Macaulay outfall, due to be in operation by the end of the year, has been designed to handle the estimated population growth for the next 5 years.

An additional 1,000-foot length bypass is included in the plans. This will allow repairs to be made to the 6,100-foot outfall, if they are ever needed, without disruption of services.

It could also be extended if density of the area's population in future years demanded increased services.

Lawther has high hopes that the sewage that will be dispersed at a depth of 210 feet will never reach the surface.

"It could well be like the big outfall in Seattle where the sewage hits a thermaclyne (barrier between layers of warm and cold water) and is prevent from reaching the surface."

He says there is no possible way the sewage "which will be dispersed in an almost colorless grey plume" can reach shore and cause pollution.

'Rich Playboy' on Pension Hit with Stiff Penalty

A 67-year-old man who lives on a $118 a month pension was fined $400 and prohibited from driving anywhere in Canada for nine months this morning in provincial court.

A young woman was escorted from the courtoom by a police officer when she burst out "My God!" after St. Jorre imposed the sentence.

You were driving just blind, going all over the place. There could have been a dozen people killed," the judge said after being told Martin failed to stop for police and shot two red lights.

St. Jorre asked Martin if he could pay $100 a month on the fines.

"I only get $118," he replied.

'VERY LUXURIOUS'

"Your are only getting $118 but you were going around like a rich playboy — going through red lights, being chased by police," said the judge.

"You were engaged in a very luxurious form of living.

"We can't have this kind of thing going on. You'll kill yourself, you'll kill others."

St. Jorre told Martin to pay the fine in $50 monthly installments.

In another impaired driving case, a 39-year-old unemployed logger was sentenced to a total of nine months in prison and fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving, driving while under suspension and driving without insurance.

Court was told it was his fifth conviction for impaired driving since 1966 and his second conviction for driving under suspension.

"You're probably a hard working, decent person, but alcohol seems to be the bane of your existence," St. Jorre said before sentencing Borushko to six months on the impaired charge, three months on the second and ordering the minimum $250 fine for the insurance violation.

He ordered consecutive sentences.

"I'm not a thief, I'm an honest man," Borushko said, "My having a motor vehicle has always gotten me into trouble, I'm not going to own a vehicle again."

Insurance Agents Fight Government

Insurance agents will use "all the political muscle they possess" to fight government interference in their business, Victoria insurance man J. V. Harbord said Friday.

Manitoba's plans to take over the auto insurance business in that province next year is "just an example of doctrinaire socialism with no regard being taken for the public weal," he said.

MONOPOLY CREATED

Harbord assumes the association presidency at a time when the industry is facing problems in other areas too.

"There is a marked decline in the available insurance market as a result of inadequate rate structures," he said.

"The effect of this already has been felt by major industrial insurance buyers, some of whom have been forced to self-insure substantial amounts.

CONCERNED

"Agents and brokers are deeply concerned about this situation, and are determined to help alleviate it, but will require the co-operation of goverment, industry, insurers and brokers."

The association that controls 80 per cent of the $2 billion spent on general insurance annually elected him president at the annual meeting in Winnipeg this week.

He is past president of both the Victoria and B.C. Agents associations and former director and vice-president of the national association.

Berth Room Urged for Ships

Efforts to have the CNR guarantee a deep sea berth at Ogden Point for visiting cruise ships next year are being made by Victoria Chamber of Commerce, although prospects are not good.

Harbor committee director George Dawson told chamber directors Friday the 22 summer visits of ocean-going vessels from time to time conflicted with the lucrative and primary cargo business conducted the year round at Ogden Point by the CNR.

With more cruise ships expected in the coming tourist season, the problem will be worse, Dawson said. He reminded directors that each day a freighter spends in port coast about $5,000, and that cargo handling must be expedited. Cruise ships then take second choice.

There are five deep sea berths at Ogden Point, one of them used solely by grain ships. One of the remaining four was guaranteed for cruise ships the first year — in 1969 — but this summer alternative berths were employed when freighters were given priority.

Actress Becomes Nun

"I did not leave Hollywood as a disillusioned person," Mother Dolores said in a statement distributed after the three-hour ceremony. "I loved the entertainment industry, and there I found the living God in the honest desire of some wonderful and dedicated people and in the keen awareness it gave me of my relationship with persons everywhere."

Heart Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has ruled a heart transplant patient is not eligible for a pilot's licence. "Our medical office has never been requested to issue a certificate to such a person, but if such a request were made it would necssarily be denied," the FAA said in an informal ruling Thursday.

POLICE COURT

They had tried to steal a pair of women's leotards worth $10.50 from Woodwards on Thursday.

Charles Edward Manson, 19, and Olesia Papish, 23, told court they had been living on Salt Spring Island for the past two weeks and hoped to settle there.

Miss Olesia gave her home town as Winnipeg, Manson said he was from England.

"You could have avoided all of this by behaving honestly," Ostler said and fined each one $300.

John Freeman, 19, of 2997 Brighton, was fined $350 when he pleaded guilty to possession of one marijuana cigarette Friday.

"The good Lord will provide," Edward Carlson, 49, of Vancouver, told police officers when they asked if he had any finances.

New B.A. Program Offered

University of Victoria's faculty of fine arts this fall will offer a new degree program for a B.A. in history in the arts, Dean Peter Garvie announced this week.

Garvie said the new degree would serve the needs of students not studying to become performing or practising artists.

"We have recognized for some time the need in the arts for broadly educated graduates whose work may take them into scholarship, teaching, or administration, or such related fields as broadcasting and arts management," Garvie said.

"There are many acadenically gifted, and no less sensitive, students who are not creators or performers themselves."

The history in art degree includes four courses each in art history, music history and theatre history, plus four electives, and four humanities courses, for a total of 20.

Chamber Backs Waterfront Renewal Plans

Directors of Victoria Chamber of Commerce Friday reiterated support for the city's waterfront urban renewal plans and Reid Centre proposal, despite federal rejection of the renewel scheme due to lack of funds.

The $25 million Reid plan, including residential and commercial development at the foot of Fort Street, is a feature of the urban renewal scheme proposed by the city for several blocks of waterfront.

Housing Minister Robert Andras told Mayor Courtney Haddock at the Penticton meeting of B.C. Mayors and Municipalities there is no allotment for this type of urban renewal at present.

Chamber vice-president Tom Denny reported:

"These things must be approached with patience and if it is not approved this year there is no doubt it will be next year."

TWO YEARS OLD

presented to the city some two years ago.

He noted the scheme had been Last week chamber president Philip Holmes and civic affairs director John Bovey endorsed the renewal and Reid Centre plans as being in the best interests of Victoria.

Denny said these and similar projects involving large undertakings are the only way to keep property taxes from killing the ordinary citizen. The Reid centre would raise about $1 million a year in tax revenue, he estimated.

Directors approved his motion that strong support be given to the mayor, council and planning authorities "who are trying to look at this thing logically."

"Save-Your-Hair Day" Set For Mon. & Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

Now is the time to carry out that long delayed resolution to "do something about your hair." For Monday and Tuesday, September 21 and 22 is "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" in Victoria. The event is sponsored by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists. They have sent trichologist I. Edgar here to personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Hotel Sussex.

WHAT CAUSES BALDNESS

Actually, the two most common causes of baldness are neglect and mistreatment of the hair. The most conspicuous thing about hair trouble is that it's progressive. Common disorders like dandruff or itchiness lead to hair loss. And once hair loss starts, it doesn't stop voluntarily. It has to be stopped.

EXPERT ANSWERS YOUR QUESTIONS

As a feature of "Save-Your-Hair Day" Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists offer a consultation service.

All you have to do is take your questions in person to their suite in the Hotel Sussex and let the trichologist give your scalp a complete examination.

These are the questions most people want information about:

1. How often should you wash your hair?
2. Which kind of shampoo is best for you?
3. Is brushing necessary?
4. What about dry or oily scalp?
5. Are "tonics" helpful?
6. When is dandruff dangerous to hair growth?
7. Can your hair be thickened?
8. What are home treatments like?

Take this list with you Monday or Tuesday to see Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

CHECK YOURSELF HERE AND NOW!

Can't quite decide whether your hair needs expert attention? In general, it can be said that if you're concerned about your hair, you have good reason to be. But here's a check list of signs that point to a hairless future:

- ☐ Have noticeable dandruff?
- ☐ Scalp hard, tight?
- ☐ Scalp itchy or irritated?
- ☐ Hair dry and straw-like?
- ☐ Hair excessively greasy?
- ☐ Lose much hair in washing?
- ☐ Lose much hair in combing?
- ☐ Getting "highbrow?"
- ☐ Thin spot on crown?

DON'T PUT IT OFF

Your hair is in better condition today than it will be next month or even next week. That's why we urge you to see the Harrison trichologist before more damage is done. Find out about our new home treatment methods for saving your hair.

Then you won't wake up a few years from now and find yourself bald — and painfully aware that you need not have been.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how the new Harrison method permits you to actually save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

GET THE FACTS

He will tell you what's wrong with your hair and scalp, what can and should be done about it, how little time and money will be required to put your scalp in condition to grow healthy hair again.
